Fromme Said 'I Hate Ford'

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A grocery clerk testified Tuesday that Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme walked into his store and said, "'I hate Ford,'" the day before she allegedly tried to assassinate President Ford.

Clerk Ed Louie, appearing as a prosecution witness at Miss Fromme's trial in U.S. District Court, added that she did not say anything to him about trying to kill Ford. Louie told the jury Miss Fromme volunteered the remark about Ford.

He said Miss Fromme had been in his store several times, but he did not know her name until he saw her on a television news show on Sept. 5, the day she allegedly pointed a gun at Ford in Capitol Park here.

Miss Fromme — a follower of convicted murderer Charles Manson could be sentenced to life imprisonment if convicted under a federal statute passed after the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Miss Fromme was not present for the testimony of Louie. She was barred from the courtroom for the third straight trial day by U.S. District Court Judge Thomas MacBride, although he said she would be "welcome as the flowers in May" to return if she would behave.

For the second straight day, the defendant blindfolded herself and was carried to the courthouse. She refused to promise to refrain from future courtroom outbursts, saying she would "stick to my principles," and McBride again ordered her removed.

"Your honor, my defense is the defense of the world," Miss Fromme, 27, said. "Without Manson I am dead."

MacBride first ejected Miss Fromme last Friday when she tried to plead guilty and demanded the presence of Manson at her trial.

Deputy marshals, as they had Monday, hauled the defendant from the county jail to a van that took her to court Tuesday. She removed the blindfold and walked into court to hear MacBride's second invitation to rejoin the trial.

In other testimony earlier Tuesday, Lanier Ramer — who said he was an acquaintance of Manson — testified that he had talked with Miss Fromme in July and she told him "she thought it quite likely that some people were going to have to be killed" to stop environmental pollution.

Ramer said Miss Fromme did not mention President Ford.

He also testified that Miss Fromme asked him where she could get "a couple of guns." He said he didn't give her any such information. Ramer, a former prison inmate and now a project assistant with the American Civil Liberties Union prison project, escaped imprisonment for contempt of court by testifying. MacBride said Monday that Ramer would be held in contempt unless he spoke.

Ramer said he visited Miss Fromme at her Sacramento apartment in July and they talked for a long time about cleaning up the environment. He said she suggested writing letters warning polluters to stop.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Donald Heller asked if Miss Fromme suggested going further. "She told me that she thought it quite likely that some people were going to have to be killed to set examples toward getting that kind of thing stopped," Ramer said.

Under cross-examination, Ramer said Miss Fromme did not say she would do any killing, just that some might have to be done. He said the possible targets she spoke of were executives of companies in fields like logging and strip mining.

Ore-Carrier Crewmen Lost In Lake Superior

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — Rescuers searched Lake Superior's chilly waters Tuesday for the 29-member crew of the sunken ore-carrier Edmund Fitzgerald but found only an oil slick, empty lifeboats and life jackets.

Aircraft and ships criss-crossed the lake's eastern tip in the area where the ship, once the largest ore-carrier on Lake Superior, went down in 520 feet of water about 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Coast Guard officials said it was unlikely anyone could survive in the 51-degree water more than three hours but added they were still hopeful.

The 729-foot vessel vanished from radar screens as winds of hurricane force — of 75 miles per hour — raised waves to 25 feet in 42-degree weather.

"In those conditions, survivability on the average would be about three hours," said a Coast Guard spokesman. "But this has been greatly exceeded on many occasions if they got into a protective life raft or were wearing protective clothing."

An oil slick, two lifeboats, a life raft and other debris were found in the area, with some washing up on the Canadian shore 13 miles to the northeast. One of the lifeboats had a serial number matching that of the ship, authorities said.

Among the debris were several orange life jackets, some bobbing in the water and others washed onto the rocky shoreline.

The lake surface was extremely calm Tuesday, and search operations were aided by a dull gray sky which eliminated reflections and made it easier to spot debris from the air.

Two freighters, a pair of Coast Guard helicopters and two planes were taking part in the search.

The Coast Guard said the Fitzgerald may have broken up and sunk before a distress call could be made. A nearby vessel, the Arthur M. Anderson, reported it received a call Monday night from the Fitzgerald. The call indicated the Fitzgerald was taking on water but its pumps were working and the vessel was not in immediate danger.

One Coast Guard spokesman said the Fitzgerald "probably broke in two." But Ens. Kenneth Baker added that a hatch cover could have blown off, causing the vessel to take on water.

The sinking was the first major Great Lakes shipping disaster in nine years. On Nov. 29, 1966, the lives of 28 crewmen were lost when the freighter Daniel J. Morrell sank in a Lake Huron storm.

Oglebay Norton Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, which charters the Fitzgerald, identified the captain as E. R. McSorley of Toledo, Ohio, and the chief engineer as George Holl of Cabot, Pa. Oglebay was withholding the names of the 27 others aboard.

The vessel, owned by the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Milwaukee, was loaded with about 26,000 tons of taconite pellets on Sunday at Superior, Wis., and was bound for Detroit, officials said. The pellets are an intermediate product in iron mining.

The storm, typical of the sudden violent weather on the Great Lakes in November, was described by some local observers as the worst in 35 years.

The winds Monday overturned a truck on the five-mile-long Mackinac Bridge, which connects Michigan's two peninsulas, and forced the bridge to close.

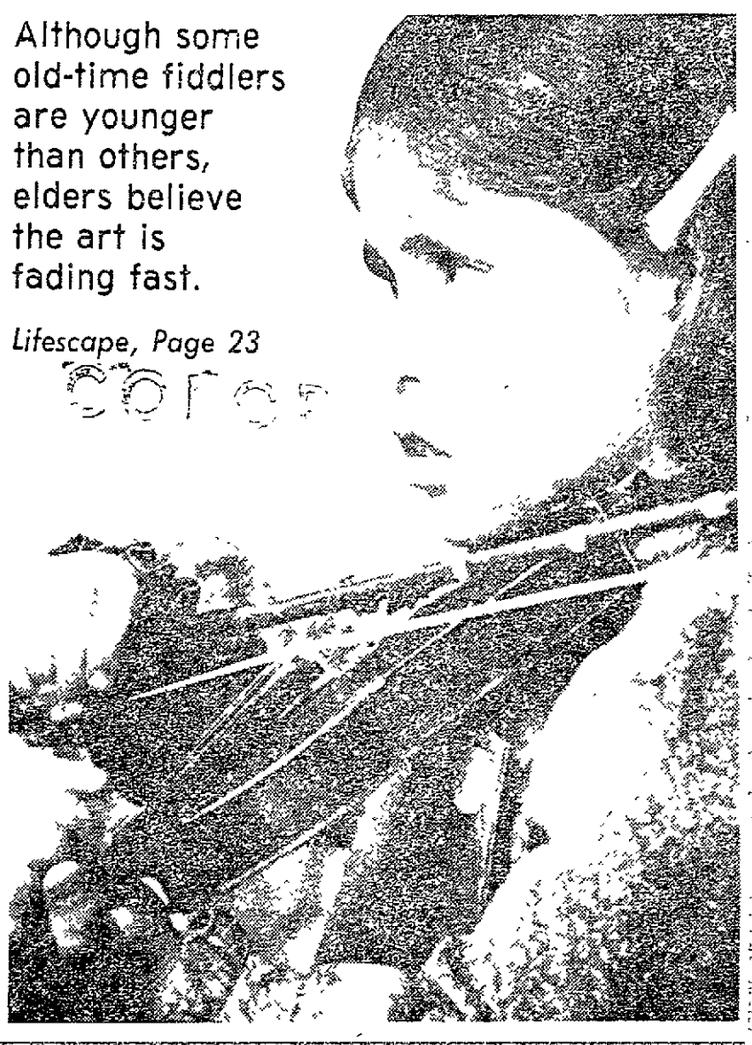

Prior to the 1966 sinking of the Morrell, 33 lives were lost when the 603-foot freighter Carl D. Bradley broke up at the top of Lake Michigan on Nov. 19, 1958.

On Nov. 11, 1940, three ships went down and 57 lives were lost in Lake Michigan during a violent three-day storm.

On Nov. 11, 1913, a hurricane claimed 19 ships in Lake Huron, killing 254 persons.

Although some old-time fiddlers are younger than others, elders believe the art is fading fast.

Indian Center Federal Aid Jeopardized

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Indian Center Inc. may be in danger of losing $35,000 of its federal funding if it doesn't come up with a balanced board of directors.

Reginald Cedarface, director of the center, said seven of the nine board members are Sioux. With seven different tribes having members in the Lincoln area, the inbalance on the board of directors does not meet federal guidelines for equal representation.

More than half of Lincoln's Indian population belongs to the Omaha tribe. Sioux tribe members make up the next largest segment. Also represented are the Winnebago, Flathead, Cherokee, Ponca and Pottawatomie tribes.

Cedarface said that Justin Orr, the regional director of the Office of Native American Programs, provider of the $35,000 grant to administer the center, is aware of the existing inequity.

Cedarface has spoken with Orr and expects he is "going to give us an ultimatum saying either some board members must resign or you'll lose your money."

The center director added, "He (Orr) didn't say it in so many words, but I can read between the lines."

The center decided to appoint a new board of directors on the advice of a National American Indian Technical Assistance representative who spent a week in Lincoln late last month to help the group redevelop its constitution and bylaws.

The imbalance occurred because only three board members came to the Nov. 4 meeting when a new board was to be selected, Cedarface said. No committee to screen selections, as suggested, was ever set up.

Present board members are Barb Schneider, Imogene Boucher, Frank Bearkiller, Gordon Kitto, Anne Keller, Bob Lasley, Lavoy Decoteau, Mitchell Chunstudy and Francine Phillips.

Board president Bob Lasley, an Omaha, is upset about two sets of family ties now existing on the board. A mother and a daughter and a sister and a brother are among the new members.

"We want more representation from different tribes rather than concentrated in one group of really close friends," said Lasley.

Cedarface blames "tribalism" or "factionalism" for the problems in the organization. Tribalism, he says, is a national dilemma for Indian centers — "a cultural thing they can't suppress."

Certain tribes emerge in a leadership capacity, the director explained. One group shows up and the others stay away. "Basically old behavioral patterns still exist," he said.

If the center's administrative funding were halted, there would be no staff or facility to administer the $44,000 Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds under Title VII or the $27,000 from the city of Lincoln for the Indian alcohol and drug program.

Senators OK Budget Package Exon Will Sign

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

They did it their way.

Still sharply divided over their course of action, state senators Tuesday approved their revised package of tax and budget bills and went home.

Although the Legislature's actions "mandate" an income tax rate hike which would not have been required if it had followed his recommendations, Gov. J. James Exon said, he must "compliment you (the senators) on holding to your convictions."

At least, legislative action prevented a boost in the state sales tax rate and solved the state treasury's fast-approaching cash flow problems, Exon told senators.

Exon Will Sign

And so, the governor said, he will sign the bills into law.

"You have basically addressed the problems," Exon told the lawmakers in bidding them farewell.

On the eighth and final day of this special session, legislators gave every bill sufficient votes to make them effectively immediately upon the governor's signature.

But the sharp division over basic policy remained apparent when an effort to rewrite the major tax bill of the session failed on a 23-23 vote.

A motion to return the bill, LB4, to second stage consideration for an amendment to restore it to the form in which it was introduced by the governor needed 25 votes for adoption.

Exon had wanted the State Board of Equalization to be able to ignore the 5% tax collection cushion and future state obligations while considering only estimated actual expenditures, rather than appropriations, in establishing 1976 tax rates.

As amended by the Legislature, LB4 only reduced the 1976 tax collection cushion to a minium of 2% or a maximum of 3%.

The governor's proposal, he has told senators, would have prevented an increase in 1976 tax rates.

15% Income Tax

The Legislature's plan will bump the 12% personal income tax rate of 15% of federal income tax liability for 1976, he has said.

Although the last-minute effort, undertaken by Sen. Herb Duis of Gothenburg, to rewrite the bill and "escape a tax increase" barely failed, the bill then won final enactment on an overwhelming 42-5 vote.

Had it failed to win at least 33 supporting votes, it would not have become effective until next February. And that would have triggered a sales tax hike since the 5% cushion requirement would still have been law when the Board of Equalization meets Saturday to set tax rates.

Approved 42-6

The major budget bill, LB6, which reduces 1975-76 general fund obligations by $15.9 million, was approved on a 42-6 vote.

Sen. James Dickinson of Millard wanted to return that proposal to second stage debate to remove legislative amendments exempting a number of state agencies from budget cuts, but his effort fell on a 16-30 count.

LB6 imposes a 3% budget cut on 36 state agencies and reduces 1975-76 obligations in capital construction projects and other state programs.

The Legislature exempted from the budget cuts such agencies as the University of Nebraska, the state colleges and the technical community colleges.

The major state agency budget cuts include $1.3 million at the Department of Public Welfare and nearly $600,000 at the Department of Public Institutions.

The cash flow bill, LB3, won 46-2 enactment.

Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City wanted to return that bill for conversion back to the governor's original plan, but his motion was rejected on a 10-33 score.

All bills should be given to Exon in the form in which they were introduced, he said.

"Give to Don Quixote his silver lance," he urged.

Monthly Payments

LB3 provides monthly state aid and reimbursement payments to local governments, instead of larger quarterly, semi-annual and annual payments which threatened to produce a general fund deficiency, beginning next January.

The payments include special education, aid to schools, aid to cities and counties, personal property tax exemptions and homestead exemptions.

Exon did not object to the revised plan.

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood said the result of Tuesday's decisions will be "a new period of austerity" in state budgeting.

The Legislature's independent judgment on the tax and budget issues was proper, he said.

Too often, Schmit said, "the governor plays this Legislature like an organ, with the press as the bellows, providing the air."

UNL Using Less Energy, But Fuel Keeps Going Up

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

While the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has cut back substantially on energy consumption, "We're praying a great deal" that cash savings won't get burned up by cost increases, Ronald W. Wright said.

The UNL business manager has good reason to keep his upraised fingers crossed as well.

Campus conservation efforts last year resulted in a $250,000 savings, he said. But this year, "We're talking about three times that amount."

That means Wright must wrestle to avoid spending a third more than the UNL energy budget of $2.5 million. That's only 7% bigger than last year's, while fuel oil costs have spiraled up by 35%. (Electricity and water bills are extra.)

First Year Easy

Wright said UNL cut its electricity consumption last year by 26%, fuel oil by 36% and natural gas by 25%, compared to 1973. But the first-year exercise was easy, Wright said, fretting about how to improve that record.

"We're going to do everything we can to make it come out," treating a deficit appropriation request like the plague, he said.

In July, Wright said he estimated a possible $1 million shortfall in plant operations because of 11% increased costs in opening new buildings, fuel and water prices.

"Those are still potential problems." While the cost of fuel oil is stable now, it could skyrocket, but even a small spurt signals "no relief," he said.

Wright longed for a crystal ball that would reveal upcoming winter temperatures, snowfall (wet or dry, and amounts), and wind chill factors that threaten his savings sheme

None Burned Yet

Because of the recent warm weather, UNL hasn't yet burned any fuel oil — its predominant energy source — this fall.

That's lucky, he said, because "our (budget) base on oil is 36 cents" a gallon. He explained that while UNL paid 28 cents last year, one Midwest university just paid 44 cents.

Moreover, the UNL natural gas base price is 55 cents for each 1,000 cubic feet. "We are now paying 92 cents for the first thousand," which declines thereafter to average about 89 cents, he said.

Difference Eaten Up

Even if UNL can undercut its fuel oil base by four cents a gallon, the 37-cent natural gas increase "more than eats up that difference." He said if the campus goes one cent above the base, "we're in trouble."

One more unknown: the federal control price on fuel goes off Saturday, and Wright said that could affect the market, disrupting normal supply and demand patterns.

Wright crossed his fingers harder, hoping to buy oil before cold hits the East Coast and forces prices up.

No. 6 fuel oil is cheap in late summer, when the residue from refining and road repair surplus is abundant, he said. But UNL can't buy it then — at 25 cents a gallon delivered — because its 1.2 million-gallon storage tanks are filled.

If UNL had another 800,000-gallon storage capacity (at $165,000, the regents' No. 14 priority next year), Wright said he could ward off higher prices later by buying "about half of our annual burn," depending on severity of the winter.

Facing real problems now, Wright said UNL natural gas consumption was down 9% in September compared to a year ago, but cost was up 15%. In October, use was down 6%, but cost shot up 35%.

It's Worse Elsewhere

And "We have not experienced as bad an increase as some other institutions," Wright noted. The University of Missouri converted to coal, which then zoomed from $7 to $37 a ton. Wright ruled out coal for UNL, explaining costs to convert one boiler at the city campus power plant would be $8 million, and at east campus, $5 million.

Meanwhile, the UNL custodial, security and maintenance staffs are receiving excellent faculty cooperation to close faucets, shut windows and turn off unused lights, he said.

"We've assumed central command of thermostats" in the 80 major buildings on UNL. About 16 of them are automatically controlled by computer signal, but to hook up any more looks bleak because it costs about $45,000 a building.

Other efforts include insulating steam pipes, and using Cengas thermal studies to identify and insulate buildings with heat or air conditioning losses.

Watering Cost $10,000

Despite complaints about summer watering, UNL spent only $10,000 to keep a $5 million investment alive and growing, Wright said. And selective air conditioning saved at least $1,400 a day.

Blazing fuel costs mean UNL staffers will bundle up this winter, as Wright considers setting thermostats at 65 degrees. He explained that body heat from classes, however, will push room temperatures up to about 69. He'll monitor consumption and prices daily to allow comfort adjustments if possible.

Wright also faces some unpredictable headaches. "A major storm will cost about $10,000 to clean up," he said, yearning again for that "magic wand" to fend off such budget catastrophes.

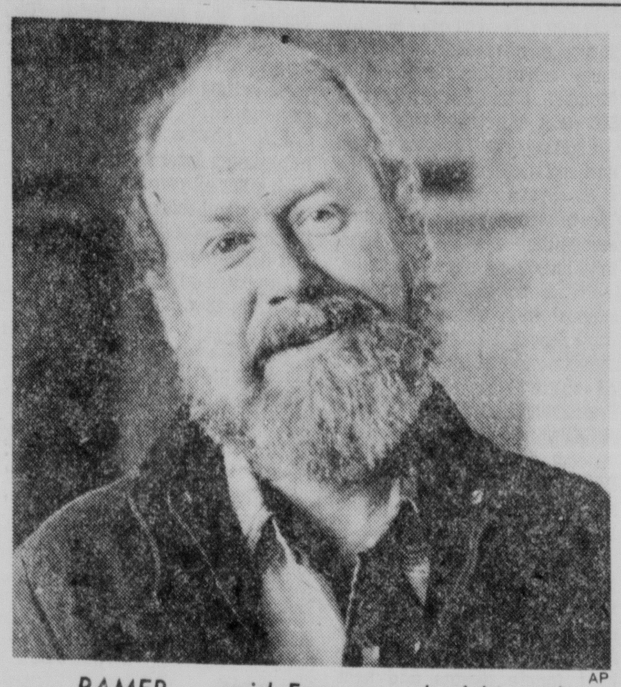

"The opportunities for savings are all peanuts," he said, "but what we're looking for is enough peanuts to get a whole bag."

UNL Using Less Energy, But Fuel Keeps Going Up

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

While the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has cut back substantially on energy consumption, "We're praying a great deal" that cash savings won't get burned up by cost increases, Ronald W. Wright said.

The UNL business manager has good reason to keep his upraised fingers crossed as well.

Campus conservation efforts last year resulted in a $250,000 savings, he said. But this year, "We're talking about three times that amount."

That means Wright must wrestle to avoid spending a third more than the UNL energy budget of $2.5 million. That's only 7% bigger than last year's, while fuel oil costs have spiraled up by 35%. (Electricity and water bills are extra.)

First Year Easy

Wright said UNL cut its electricity consumption last year by 26%, fuel oil by 36% and natural gas by 25%, compared to 1973. But the first-year exercise was easy, Wright said, fretting about how to improve that record.

"We're going to do everything we can to make it come out," treating a deficit appropriation request like the plague, he said.

In July, Wright said he estimated a possible $1 million shortfall in plant operations because of 11% increased costs in opening new buildings, fuel and water prices.

"Those are still potential problems." While the cost of fuel oil is stable now, it could skyrocket, but even a small spurt signals "no relief," he said.

Wright longed for a crystal ball that would reveal upcoming winter temperatures, snowfall (wet or dry, and amounts), and wind chill factors that threaten his savings sheme.

None Burned Yet

Because of the recent warm weather, UNL hasn't yet burned any fuel oil — its predominant energy source — this fall.

That's lucky, he said, because "our (budget) base on oil is 36 cents" a gallon. He explained that while UNL paid 28 cents last year, one Midwest university just paid 44 cents.

Moreover, the UNL natural gas base price is 55 cents for each 1,000 cubic feet. "We are now paying 92 cents for the first thousand," which declines thereafter to average about 89 cents, he said.

Difference Eaten Up

Even if UNL can undercut its fuel oil base by four cents a gallon, the 37-cent natural gas increase "more than eats up that difference." He said if the campus goes one cent above the base, "we're in trouble."

One more unknown: the federal control price on fuel goes off Saturday, and Wright said that could affect the market, disrupting normal supply and demand patterns.

Wright crossed his fingers harder, hoping to buy oil before cold hits the East Coast and forces prices up.

No. 6 fuel oil is cheap in late summer, when the residue from refining and road repair surplus is abundant, he said. But UNL can't buy it then — at 25 cents a gallon delivered — because its 1.2 million-gallon storage tanks are filled.

If UNL had another 800,000-gallon storage capacity (at $165,000, the regents' No. 14 priority next year), Wright said he could ward off higher prices later by buying "about half of our annual burn," depending on severity of the winter.

Facing real problems now, Wright said UNL natural gas consumption was down 9% in September compared to a year ago, but cost was up 15%. In October, use was down 6%, but cost shot up 35%.

It's Worse Elsewhere

And "We have not experienced as bad an increase as some other institutions," Wright noted. The University of Missouri converted to coal, which then zoomed from $7 to $37 a ton. Wright ruled out coal for UNL, explaining costs to convert one boiler at the city campus power plant would be $8 million, and at east campus, $5 million.

Meanwhile, the UNL custodial, security and maintenance staffs are receiving excellent faculty cooperation to close faucets, shut windows and turn off unused lights, he said.

"We've assumed central command of thermostats" in the 80 major buildings on UNL. About 16 of them are automatically controlled by computer signal, but to hook up any more looks bleak because it costs about $45,000 a building.

Other efforts include insulating steam pipes, and using Cengas thermal studies to identify and insulate buildings with heat or air conditioning losses.

Watering Cost $10,000

Despite complaints about summer watering, UNL spent only $10,000 to keep a $5 million investment alive and growing, Wright said. And selective air conditioning saved at least $1,400 a day.

Blazing fuel costs mean UNL staffers will bundle up this winter, as Wright considers setting thermostats at 65 degrees. He explained that body heat from classes, however, will push room temperatures up to about 69. He'll monitor consumption and prices daily to allow comfort adjustments if possible.

Wright also faces some unpredictable headaches: "A major storm will cost about $10,000 to clean up," he said, yearning again for that "magic wand" to fend off such budget catastrophes.

"The opportunities for savings are all peanuts," he said, "but what we're looking for is enough peanuts to get a whole bag."

Court To Decide Issue Of Private School Bias

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court Tuesday agreed to decide if whites can sidestep school desegregation by creating racially exclusive private schools, and whether "white flight" to the suburbs is justification for easing court-ordered integration.

The private school appeal was brought by two northern Virginia schools and an association of 300 private institutions in the South. The "white flight" issue was raised by Pasadena, Calif.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in the northern Virginia case that parents of black students denied admission to the schools were entitled to $5,000 in damages.

The appeals court also enjoined the schools from basing their admissions on race, relying on a Reconstruction-era civil rights law giving minorities the same rights to contracts as whites.

District Judge Albert V. Bryan and the appeals court noted that in 1968 the Supreme Court held the old civil rights law barred race discrimination in private real estate transactions.

Both lower courts agreed that the relationship between a private school and a child and his parents is a "contract" under the law.

Pasadena, in its appeal, contended that movement of white families to the suburbs justifies easing school desegregation orders.

Both the District Court and the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected the argument, saying "the Supreme Court has indicated that the existence of a 'white flight' phenomenon does not excuse a school system" from compliance.

Pasadena said its black enrollment had increased while white enrollment declined, making impossible compliance with a court order that no school have a majority black enrollment. The city said existence of the integration order itself encouraged whites to leave the city.

In other actions, the court:

—Agreed to hear an appeal by consumer advocate Ralph Nader challenging airline reservation practices. Nader was denied a reserved seat on a flight which had been overbooked, and sued for damages.

—Agreed to review Massachusetts' two-tier criminal trial system where a defendant cannot have a jury trial initially, but if convicted by a judge can demand a second trial with a jury.

—Unanimously reversed a lower court ruling which blocked construction of a nuclear power plant 30 miles from Chicago's Loop near the Indiana Dunes. The case was sent back for more litigation before a final decision is reached on whether the plant can be built

Civil Rights Commission To Study Busing, Integration

Washington (UPI) — The U.S. Civil Rights Commission said Tuesday it would undertake a major public examination of busing and school desegregation during the next 10 months

"We believe that the very future of school desegregation, and other areas of desegregation, is at stake," said the six-member commission which has been a strong supporter of school desegregation.

The commission, an independent government agency concerned with the rights of minorities and women, said it was worried "that recent opposition to busing may be used to weaken the entire civil rights movement."

At Senate hearings on proposed constitutional amendments to prohibit busing for school desegregation, Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., denounced the proposals as being politically motivated and said Congress has been too concerned with "placating anti-busing sentiment."

He said adoption of any of the four proposed amendments would be a "tragic" setback for school desegregation.

"If busing has become a problem, it is not because of any inherent defect in the United States Constitution," said Brooke, the Senate's only black member. "It is not because of any tyranny practiced by the federal courts. It is because the political leaders of this country have failed to lead."

The Civil Rights Commission's findings and recommendations from bicentennial celebrations and election campaigning as a report to the president, Congress and the nation. The commission has no enforcement powers.

Asked at a news conference if the study were designed to counter the constitutional amendment efforts, commission Chairman Arthur Flemming replied, "We're not trying to head off anything."

The national inquiry will begin with a Dec. 8 meeting here with sociologist James Coleman on "white flight" and court-ordered desegregation, the role of federal courts in desegregation, and housing segregation. Coleman recently has said that school desegregation accelerates "white flight" from cities to suburbs.

It is launching the study, the commission said, "in the interest of providing the nation with the facts and the information necessary to arrive at an informed opinion on an issue which lies at the very heart of civil rights progress."

ANGOLANS . . . celebrate independence.

Rivals In Angola Set Up 2 Competing Governments

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Rival black nationalist movements set up two competing governments for this former Portuguese colony Tuesday and battled for control of the capital.

Soviet-backed troops of the Popular Movement (MPLA) hold Luanda and are fighting two other groups that have both Western and Chinese support. The upsurge in fighting was reported just one day after Portugal granted Angola independence and withdrew without recognizing any of the three liberation movements.

Radio South Africa reported in Johannesburg that MPLA soldiers arrested a man apparently involved in an assassination attempt on MPLA President Agostinho Neto.

The radio said the man was wounded in one arm when he opened fire on a limousine he apparently thought Neto was riding in, but the MPLA leader was not in the vehicle.

It gave no other details but fueled speculation the attack may have been staged by the National Front (FNLA), the MPLA's chief rival in Angola's civil war.

The incident followed the MPLA inauguration of Neto as national president of the new country on Africa's southwest coast. Thousands of persons lined the streets to cheer him following the ceremony.

Neto declared MPLA sovereignty over Angola during a noisy celebration at midnight Monday, after Portugal ended 500 years of colonial rule.

Fighting was reported north, east and south of Luanda and the U.S. State Department in Washington said American recognition would be delayed until the situation is more stable.

FNLA troops, who receive support from China and Zaire, were reported 12 miles north of the city and a combined column of some 1,500 FNLA and Western-backed National Union (UNITA) troops was believed advancing from the south. The FNLA cut off Luanda's water supply by mortaring a pipeline 12 miles from town.

The departing Portuguese left their flag flying, so MPLA forces brought it down and raised their own in a ceremony at the unfinished soccer stadium. People beat jungle drums and sent bullets and shells streaking across the sky.

Two bullets hit a Red Cross plane that managed to land safely. But a Portuguese jetliner carrying delegations from the French, Italian, Romanian and Portuguese Communist parties turned back to Lisbon.

In Nova Lisboa in central Angola, UNITA head Jonas Savimbi lit a freedom torch. It was announced in Kinshasa, Zaire, that UNITA and FNLA were getting together to form a government.

The three nationalist movements have been battling each other all year for control of the mineral-endowed territory twice the size of Texas. Portugal and African governments failed in repeated attempts to bring them together.

The FNLA now controls the northern part of the country; the MPLA has the center and Luanda, while UNITA has taken the southern half with the help of FNLA.

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass charged that attempts are being made to establish a neocolonialist regime in Angola. It said six battalions from Zaire are fighting on the side of the FNLA and implied South African troops may also be taking part.

"Military equipment, armaments and munitions constantly flow into Angola via Zaire from the United States, European NATO countries and the PRC (China)," Tass said.

Russia Suspends Relations With Unfriendly Uganda

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union on Tuesday suspended relations with Uganda, once its closest ally in East Africa, and accused President Idi Amin's government of unfriendly actions and insults.

Amin, in a statement broadcast by the official Uganda radio, said trouble between the two nations might be blamed on an "overdose of vodka" taken by the Soviet ambassador and said Moscow should send a competent replacement.

The suspension of relations meant a setback to Soviet influence in black Africa and a blow to Uganda's shaky economy, Western diplomats in neighboring Kenya said.

Observers said the economy, drained by heavy defense spending and expulsions of foreign technicians since 1972, would be hit by a cutoff in Soviet development aid, including a large farm mechanization training center and a cotton spinning mill not yet in production.

Moscow's announcement of its interruption of relations came only hours before the deadline set by Amin to break relations on his own unless the Kremlin sent a top-level envoy to appease him.

Amin had accused the Soviet Union of trying to pressure him into supporting the Moscow-backed liberation movement in Angola, the MPLA. Late Monday, he demanded that Moscow recall its ambassador, Andrei Zakharov, whom the government-controlled Ugandan radio called a criminal.

The radio charged Zakharov lacked respect for Amin and interfered in Ugandan affairs. Amin refused to see Zakharov and demanded that Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev send a special high-ranking envoy to Kampala.

Anti-Amin exiles in Tanzania said Amin wanted to provoke a break with Moscow to avoid paying the hundreds of millions of dollars he owes the Russians for arms.

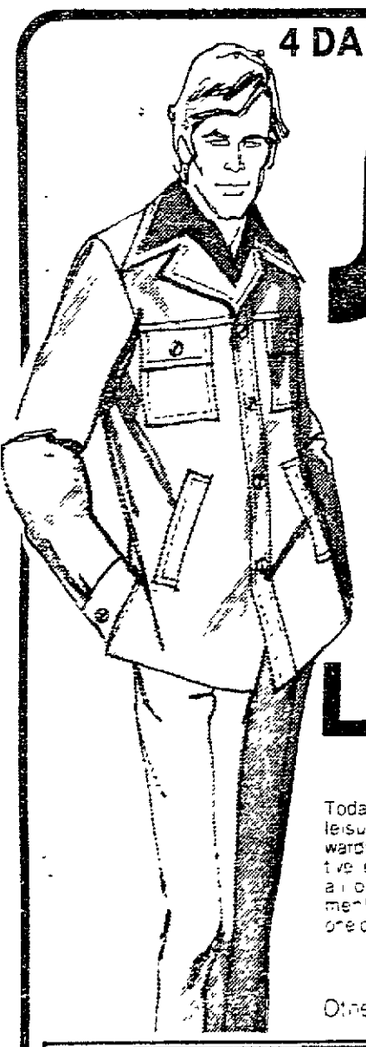

The Kremlin apparently felt that the Ugandan leader would not swallow his demands, so it decided to beat him to the punch.

Until a few days ago, relations between Uganda and the Soviet Union seemed, at least on the surface, to be warm and friendly. Moscow has poured hundreds of specialists and millions of rubles in arms and technical assistance into the landlocked country, filling a foreign aid void created by Amin's expulsion of the Israelis in 1972.

The Soviet press has regularly carried reports about development aid and friendship to Uganda, although it is believed the Kremlin has squirmed a bit over some of Amin's unpredictable pronouncements. The general's praise of Adolf Hitler, for example, hardly sat well with the Russians who lost 20 million citizens in the war against Nazi Germany.

Moscow has maintained diplomatic relations with Uganda since the African country gained its independence in 1962.

Court To Decide Issue Of Private School Bias

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court Tuesday agreed to decide if whites can sidestep school desegregation by creating racially exclusive private schools, and whether "white flight" to the suburbs is justification for easing court-ordered integration.

The private school appeal was brought by two northern Virginia schools and an association of 300 private institutions in the South. The "white flight" issue was raised by Pasadena, Calif.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in the northern Virginia case that parents of black students denied admission to the schools were entitled to $5,000 in damages.

The appeals court also enjoined the schools from basing their admissions on race, relying on a Reconstruction-era civil rights law giving minorities the same rights to contracts as whites.

District Judge Albert V. Bryan and the appeals court noted that in 1968 the Supreme Court held the old civil rights law barred race discrimination in private real estate transactions.

Both lower courts agreed that the relationship between a private school and a child and his parents is a "contract" under the law.

Pasadena, in its appeal, contended that movement of white families to the suburbs justifies easing school desegregation orders.

Both the District Court and the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected the argument, saying "the Supreme Court has indicated that the existence of a 'white flight' phenomenon does not excuse a school system" from compliance.

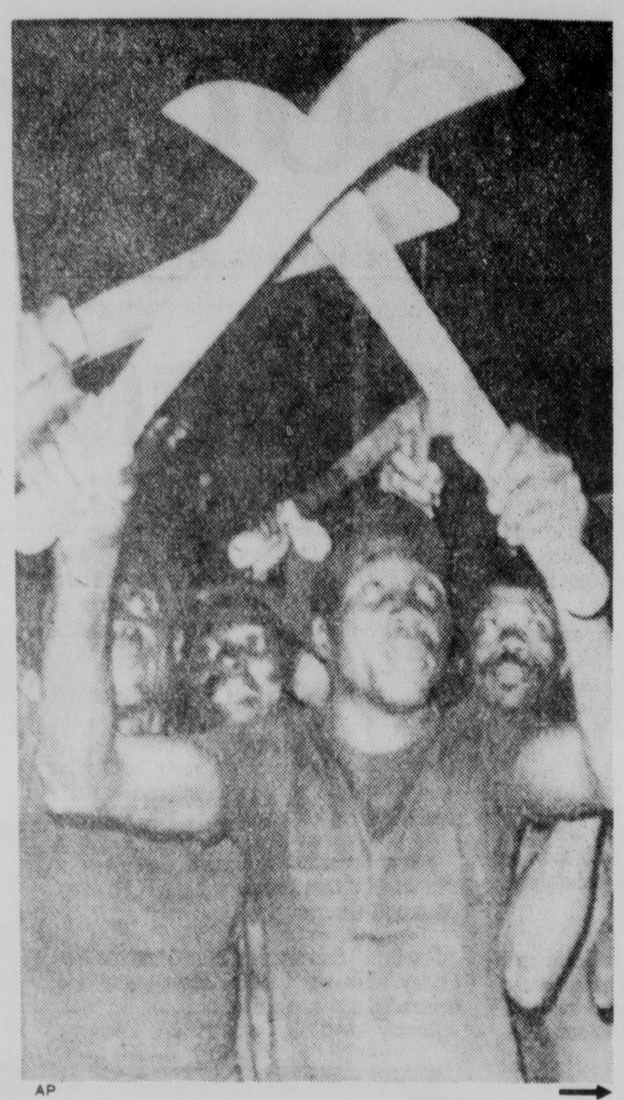

Pasadena said its black enrollment had increased while white enrollment declined, making impossible compliance with a court order that no school have a majority black enrollment. The city said existence of the integration order itself encouraged whites to leave the city.

In other actions, the court:

—Agreed to hear an appeal by consumer advocate Ralph Nader challenging airline reservation practices. Nader was denied a reserved seat on a flight which had been overbooked, and sued for damages.

—Agreed to review Massachusetts' two-tier criminal trial system where a defendant cannot have a jury trial initially, but if convicted by a judge can demand a second trial with a jury.

—Unanimously reversed a lower court ruling which blocked construction of a nuclear power plant 30 miles from Chicago's Loop near the Indiana Dunes. The case was sent back for more litigation before a final decision is reached on whether the plant can be built.

SSI—A Simple Idea, Lots Of Trouble

Washington (AP) — The plan sounced so simple and compassionate that the Democratic Congress reached a rare agreement with the Republican President.

Transfer three million aged, blind and disabled persons off state welfare rolls, they said, and put them into a new national program with uniform benefits and a new name — Supplemental Security Income — to remove the welfare stigma.

But less than two years later, SSI has become what even some liberals call a scandal. Overpayments of more than $400 million already have been identified and may top $700 million during its first 18 months of operation.

Committees in both houses of Congress have launched investigations, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is conducting its own internal review and President Ford demanded an explanation from his bureaucracy.

Computer foulups resulted in overpayments to some persons, other payments to some who weren't eligible, and some of the most destitute and deserving unexplainably got nothing

The experiment has thrown into doubt the whole question of national welfare reform.

What went wrong?

Sitting at the polished cherrywood table in his office, Social Security Commissioner James B. Cardwell attempted to explain.

First, he said, the new SSI law was far more complex than the streamlined approach then-President Richard M. Nixon had proposed and HEW had prepared for in three years of planning.

Then Congress three times amended the law after it was passed and indeed even after the first checks had been printed by the Treasury for mailing in January 1974.

"We now have a program that looks very much like the program it was designed to replace," Cardwell said.

And, for seven critical months between March and October 1973, when the agency was gearing up for SSI, the job of Social Security commissioner was vacant. Democrat Robert M. Ball had been forced out by Nixon, after 11 years in office and an unsuccessful search was waged for a Republican successor among the major insurance companies before the White House settled on Cardwell, himself a nominal Democrat who had been HEW's chief budget expert.

An additional factor was scattered but fierce opposition within Social Security, which long has prided itself on being a tightly knit organization of professionals engaged in paying out earned retirement benefits, to taking on an almost totally unrelated welfare program.

"By the time I got there," Cardwell said, "everyone knew there was trouble."

Two fiscal conservatives from the Reagan administration in California, HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and welfare commissioner Robert B. Carleson, who have since departed the scene, had advised Ford to veto the SSI bill and, after it became law, tried to tighten up the law through "stiff, tight" regulations, Cardwell said.

They understaffed the SSI operation and the computerized system that was to have transferred 3 million records kept by 1,300 state, county and city welfare departments was not in place. Eligibility restrictions became more and more complex.

"Our first priority was to get the checks out," Cardwell said "No one knew whether they would be accurate "

As it turned out, they weren't. Three to five per cent of recipients got nothing or only a few dollars in the first batch, and the protesting elderly were shepherded into buses lining the curbs outside Social Security offices in New York to keep warm while new checks were written manually.

Meanwhile, claims from the newly eligible were piling up. The backlog was 750,000 by April 1974. Social Security employes worked overtime and skipped vacations to catch up.

"By late spring we were in a very precarious state," Cardwell said. Congress was complaining then about underpayments, wrath that since has been turned to overpayments during that period.

Cardwell isn't very encouraging about the prospects of ever being able to cleanse SSI of payment errors.

The most recent payment error rate of nearly 25 per cent should be lowered to 20 per cent by next July, he said, and can be lowered to about 15 per cent eventually through a series of administrative steps.

But to get that even lower, to 10 or 11 per cent, would require congressional approval to simplify the SSI means test on income, living arrangements, outside support and similar items, he said

SSI is, in effect, caught between a rock and a hard place. Tightening controls even more would carry a prohibitively high administrative pricetag, but simplifying administration to eliminate errors could prove even more costly since benefits for everyone would have to be boosted to the highest level.

Army Suspends Payments

Washington — The Army suspended payments Tuesday to 900 contractors because an audit has discovered it has overspent its procurement budget by about $165 million. The action results from what the Army describes as "poor accounting controls" by the Army Material Command, particularly in the foreign sales of weapons. By law, the Army cannot make further payments without congressional approval.

Default Prevention Backed

Washington — Two influential conservative Republicans moved toward support of federal action to prevent a New York City default. Rep John J Rhodes of Arizona, the House minority leader, said he would support short-term loan guarantees to assure the city's cash flow if the city adopted a plan to put its fiscal house in order. Dr. Arthur F Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, told a House Republican conference that his concern had deepened and that he might support federal assistance if the financial markets began to deteriorate noticeably

New York — The New York Times and the Newspaper Guild reached agreement on a new three-year contract, averting a threatened strike The terms closely followed those of a similar pact between the Mailers Union and The Times and The Daily News jointly. Tito Cracking Down On Pro-Soviets

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Tito is cracking down on Soviet sympathizers and possible Kremlin agents, apparently fearing for Yugoslavia's independence after his death or when he gives up power.

Tito, who broke with Moscow in 1948 and has since steered an independent Communist course, is now 83.

Foreign observers believe that Yugoslav Communists are not so much worried by the number of Pro-Soviet groups active in the country — described as small — but are apprehensive about them gaining a foothold in Tito's waning years.

The Western diplomats are watching the situation carefully. With three Soviet bloc countries on its borders — Romania Hungary and Bulgaria — threats of subversion in Yugoslavia could have serious implications.

The crackdown on pro-Soviets began in earnest just recently and actually followed a purge of liberal-minded Communists, some of whom held leading party and government positions.

Observers here feel the Soviet supporters were encouraged by the purge, believing the party was slowing swinging back to the Soviet camp, and took this as a green light for their activities.

This past summer a group of Soviet sympathizers was arrested and tried after it allegedly held a "congress" in an attempt to form a new Communist Party along Soviet lines.

Yugoslav authorities later arrested several other small pro-Soviet groups, some of whom are still awaiting trial.

Government leaders and the press have denounced suspected Soviet sympathizers as enemies and traitors who want to destroy Yugoslavia's independence.

President Tito, speaking out during a tour of Serbia recently declared: "They have become very vociferous. They are small in number, but very loud."

The leading government newspaper Borba, said in an editorial that the government's campaign represents a reaction against what it called neo-Stalinism from abroad.

The newspaper said that "instead of independence and nonalignment they offer the (Soviet) camp. Instead of the right of the people alone to decide about their future, they would like to impose development set on foreign recipes "

It went on to say that their activity "has not been done on their own initiative" a clear allusion to the Soviet Union.

Subversive groups, in fact, are never referred to as pro-Soviet in the official language here. They are known under such names as "cominformists," "informbureauists," "Stalinists" or "neo-Stalinists."

The informbureau, now defunct, was the organization set up by Moscow after World War II to secure the Soviet party leadership of world communism.

Panel Votes To Cite Morton For Contempt

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unprecedented move, a House subcommittee voted Wednesday to cite Commerce Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton for contempt of Congress. He had refused to release the names of American firhs asked by the Arabs to participate in a boycott against Israel.

The contempt resolution must be approved by the House Commerce Committee and then the full House before being referred to the Justice Department for prosecution. A contempt citation carries a maximum penalty of one year imprisonment and $1,000 fine.

After the 10 to 5 vote by the Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee, Morton said he regretted the panel's action.

He said that as a former congressman, he is "sympathetic with their need for information," but added, "The attorney general has advised me that my action in this matter is proper. I have based my decision on his legal opinion.

"I also believe that it's not in the national interest" to release department documents in which U.S. firms reported whether they were asked to boycott Israel, he said.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, made public in February a list of more than 1,500 U.S. firms he said had been blacklisted by Saudi Arabia for business dealings with Israel, as part of the boycott effort.

Morton told the subcommittee he opposes the boycott, but believed congressional exposure was not the best means of countering it.

In pressing for release of the subpoenaed documents, subcommittee chairman John E. Moss, D-Calif., asserted that the boycott "is clearly contrary to American principles of free trade and freedom from religious discrimination."

"It also appears violative of antitrust and other federal laws," Moss said.

Moss said three constitutional law experts and the Library of Congress supported his view that a provision of the Export Administration Act cited by Morton as grounds for keeping the documents confidential does not specifically apply to Congress.

"Congress cannot surrender its constitutionally-mandated duty of oversight in a statute unless it does so expressly, and not by silence or implication," he said.

Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., asserted, "there is no place in American society to acquiesce in or accept a boycott based on the religious affiliation of our citizens."

Morton's position was defended at the hearing by the panel's ranking minority member, Rep. James M. Collins, R-Tex., who called the commerce secretary "a man of honor" and said he had "acted in good faith" in refusing to release the documents.

A researcher at the Library of Congress said he knew of no previous instance in which a cabinet officer had been cited for contempt, even at the subcommittee level.

Council Consistency On Line

There seems to be little doubt about what the City Council will do regarding future private parking lot construction if it wants to be consistent. The Council will have to go along with developer pleas to do the job as cheaply as possible — which means overcrowded, eyesore gravel lots.

The council set the stage for such future decisions by deciding — against the recommendation of the City-County Planning Commission — to gravel a "temporary" city-owned parking lot to be built on the Haymarket block between 9th and 10th, Q and R. The planning commission urged that the Haymarket lot be paved out of esthetic considerations and because the lot has a prime location on downtown Lincoln's major access routes, but a majority of the council opted for the cheaper gravel surface.

Council economizing ordinarily would be commendable, but considering the location of the Haymarket lot, the doubt surrounding its "temporary" nature and the fact that the city has usually demanded more stringent standards for parking lot construction from private owners or developers, the council's decision in that case is wide open to question.

Now M. E. Whitehead wants to build a parking lot on the south side of J St. between 10th and 11th, near the County-City Building. Whitehead doesn't want to pave the lot, quite naturally, because he says it will cost more money than he wants to spend and if it is to be a paved, permanent lot with setbacks and landscaping, he won't be able to park as many cars on it. The planning commission recommended that Whitehead's lot be paved, particularly since it is adjacent to the J St. beautification project now under construction between the County-City Building and the State Capitol. The commission's recommendation makes sense because the lot on J St. is intended to be a permanent lot, and the argument for paving is even more persuasive because of the J St. improvement project. The landscaped boulevard-type street running between the two government centers is to be a high visibility area, just as the Haymarket block, between the Interstate access routes and next to the University's downtown campus, is intended to be.

The council has put off a decision on Whitehead's lot until next week. Little wonder, since the decision — whichever way it goes — will be a difficult one. The council will probably have to spend considerable time coming up with an answer that sounds reasonable.

If the council wants to remain consistent with the decision it made on the city parking lot, it will let Whitehead gravel his lot — the well-grounded recommendation of the planning commission to the contrary. If the council wants to subject this applicant and others in the future who want to build parking lots to the desirable high standards that have been imposed in the past, which it should do, in direct contradiction of its Haymarket lot decision, it will look foolish.

The council has graveled itself into a corner, where the members might have to tell private developers "do as we say, not as we do."

Return Of The Has-Beens

Three old has-beens are making comebacks.

Former President Nixon, described once by the London Sun as "the shabbiest, most squalid, deceitful, ruthless, mendacious, double-dealing, conniving, sanctimonious, hypocritical twister that office will ever know," is one.

Nixon's buddy Sen. Carl Curtis is just one of many recently who have predicted a renewed role in national affairs for the disgraced former president one day when the time is right. Nixon's television contract with David Frost was Step One. Hobnobbing with assorted union officials and thugs at the Teamsters' golf stag was Step Two. His first public chat with reporters since the downfall, at a Marine anniversary observance Monday, was the third little step down the comeback trail. There are bound to be more.

Former Vice President Agnew, who plea-bargained his way out of all charges except income tax evasion and who naturally admits to nothing more, is making a comeback. He is getting involved, as is his right, in conservative causes and is lending his prestige (?) to a foundation backing such causes.

The third has-been is the Two Dollar Bill. It will come back next April. And even at its discounted value now, it should still be able to purchase more public acceptance than the others.

WASHINGTON — The epitaph that the poet, John Keats, proposed in despair at the close of his short life was, "Here lies one whose name was writ on water." While the enduring beauty of Keats' poetry has stood the test of time, that epitaph could serve for those swelling the flow of ephemeral writing pouring off the presses in increasing volume.

But there are notable exceptions and one is a book that stirred a storm of controversy and brought a major change in the national environment. Rachel Carson's "Silent Spring," published in 1961, dramatized the threat of the pesticide DDT to bird and animal life. So strong was the protest "Silent Spring" aroused that Congress enacted drastic restraints on the indiscriminate use of DDT.

Once again the issue is in the news over proposed amendments that environmentalists charge would greatly weaken these restraints. The Department of Agriculture would be given in effect a veto power over rulings of the Environmental Protection Agency. The way would be open to wholesale use of the pesticide that had begun to work such havoc on wildlife.

The issue is, however, broader than DDT. It covers a wide range, pitting the environmentalists against business and industrial interests who contend that crusading extremists are seriously hampering American productivity. This argument is reinforced by the recession and its impact on industrial output.

Russell Train, the embattled head of the Environmental Protection Agency, is fighting to hold emission standards on the motor car while Detroit insists that this will increase car prices, contributing to inflation, and cut down output.

Standards are being pushed back in response to this contention and the smog pollution hanging over most major cities is not likely to decrease.

A considerable part of the scientific community has expressed concern over the aerosol spray device and the possible degradation of the protective layer of ozone in the upper atmosphere.

Not so, says Robert H. Ablanalp whose patents cover the device on shaving cream, hair sprays and a multitude of other uses. Thanks to his large fortune, this close friend of Richard Nixon was able to provide the former President with a retreat on the Bahamian cay he owns as the net of Watergate closed around him.

☆ ☆ ☆

The conflict over admission of the Concorde, the supersonic aircraft on which Britain and France have put such a large stake, is certain to grow. The environmentalists charge that allowing it to land at Kennedy and Dulles airports would contribute not only to noise pollution but it would also endanger the protective layer that screens radiation from the sun.

The federal government has authority to grant landing rights at Dulles while the power over Kennedy rests in New York. In any event, a court suit is certain to challenge any affirmative action.

This could mean long delays with the British and the French increasingly annoyed, since New York in particular is a major traffic center. Denial might even mean some form of retaliation on landing rights for Paris and London, so intense is the feeling about the Concorde and the chances to recover some of the several billion dollars put into its development.

This is only to touch on certain areas where environment is pitted against development and production. Stripmining and the exploitation of coal deposits in the wide open spaces of the West are the focus of sharp controversy as the demand for sources of energy to supplant oil grows in volume.

The environmentalists have their freaky, far-out fringe. But the roots of conservation and saving America's natural beauty go deep into the early years of this century. We had great naturalists such as John Muir who wrote with devotion and a kind of poetry of the splendors of an America untouched by the developer and the highway builder.

A country sealed over with concrete is a sterile and depressing prospect. The ever-growing number of species vanishing before the onrush of "progress" leave us with precious few survivors. It was a response to this dismal prospect that Rachel Carson stirred in "Silent Spring." And the environmentalists are going into action to try to save the gains she helped to bring about.

CONSERVE: TO SAVE, KEEP, PRESERVE

By JOHN HAMER

ARCATA, Calif — "You are looking at one of the largest redwood clearcuts in history," said Al Merrill, a chief forester for the Louisiana-Pacific Corp. Merrill was standing on a small wooden platform built over a steep rock outcropping atop Squaw Tit Lookout, the highest point in about 120,000 acres of redwood country.

But in all directions, a dense and healthy forest covered the land as far as the eye could see. Natural regeneration reforested these slopes with redwoods, Douglas fir and hemlock, which compete with tan oaks, madrones and scrub brush for the available sunlight, water and soil nutrients. The Little River drainage, once clogged with log jams, now runs clear on its way to the Pacific Ocean.

Time and again since the turn of the century, loggers had stripped thousands of redwoods and other conifers from this land, leaving the sharp ridges bare and the stream beds choked with debris. Then cattle ranchers burned the hillsides and planted grass. But they couldn't keep the redwoods down.

Clearcutting is a controversial word in the redwood region, as it is in most of the nation's forests. The removal of entire stands of timber at one time, followed by natural regeneration, aerial seeding or hand-planting of seedlings, is a widely accepted forest management technique. But environmentalists are highly critical of the practice, claiming that it damages watersheds, causes erosion and is harmful to wildlife. They have gone to court to stop clearcutting on national forest lands, but few redwood lands are affected.

"Clearcutting looks just awful, really horrible, for the first year or two," admits Bill Houston, a young Yale Forestry School graduate who is now an area forester with Simpson Timber Co. in Arcata. "But if it's done right — and we're doing it right — it causes no permanent damage."

Louisiana-Pacific, Simpson and Arcata Redwood Co. are the big three timber companies operating in the redwood region. All use clearcutting routinely, as well as selective cutting, in harvesting their timber lands. Some operations are being conducted right up to the border of Redwood National Park.

Environmental groups, led by the Sierra Club, maintain that logging is threatening the survival of the ancient park redwoods, especially the famous "Tall Trees" grove in the southernmost finger of the park known as "The Worm," which straddles Redwood Creek. They charge that erosion caused by clearcutting and road construction is causing silt build-ups in Redwood Creek which could divert the stream and undercut the giant redwoods' roots. They want Congress to pass a bill to add about 74,000 acres of private timber land to the 58,000-acre park, which would cost the public at least $300 million.

The timber companies oppose the bill, arguing that logging is not harming the park. A 1970 California inter-agency study found that up to 90% of stream sediment in the area was from natural causes. And a more recent study by a consulting engineering firm concluded that most of the sediment actually was coming from above the timber companies' lands, where no logging was done.

Timber industry spokesmen insist that they, too, are dedicated to saving the park redwoods, but they also want to save the economy of the redwood region. An industry labor-management pamphlet on the issue states: "The world's tallest trees seem to attract controversy like giant, evergreen lightning rods." And in the redwoods, it keeps striking in the same place.

WASHINGTON — If chemical pesticides killed only pests, no one could possibly object to their use. Unfortunately, some of the most effective pesticides have been shown to be harmful to wildlife and, perhaps, to humans. The best known example is DDT, which was banned from use in the United States in 1972. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) had concluded that the potent compound posed "an unacceptable risk to man and his environment."

EPA also has imposed restrictions on the use of Mirex, a powerful anti-ant pesticide. Since 1972, the Agriculture Department has been spraying Mirex from airplanes on areas infested by fire ants, an aggressive insect native to Brazil. But in 1972 tests showed that when Mirex was washed into estuaries and bays, it killed shellfish. Accordingly, EPA cut the permissible number of aerial sprayings from two or three per year to just one.

Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz contends that limiting Mirex to one application a year rendered the fire-ant eradication program "completely unworkable." Thus, he announced in April that his department would terminate the program on June 30, the last day of the current fiscal year. In the meantime, Agriculture and EPA officials are meeting regularly in hope of reaching a compromise.

With chemicals now under a cloud, fresh interest is being expressed in alternative methods of pest control. One approach calls for the introduction of natural predators and parasites of accidentally imported pest species or, in some instances, of nature pest species.

One highly prized predator is the ladybug, which consumes aphids, fruit scales, mealybugs, bollworms, leaf worms, leafhoppers, fleahoppers, corn earworms, and a host of other undesirable insects. Harry Mantyla of Auburn, Calif., has built a thriving business by shipping more than a halfbillion ladybugs a year to farmers and gardeners all over the country. Mantyla's collectors scoop up ladybugs along the shores of high-altitude rivers and streams, where the insects gather in huge swarms.

Biological control is appealing because it is non-toxic, relatively inexpensive and self-perpetuating. But control should not be confused with eradication. Science magazine has noted that "some level of insect damage must be expected since a certain minimal pest population must be maintained if the predators and parasites themselves are to survive."

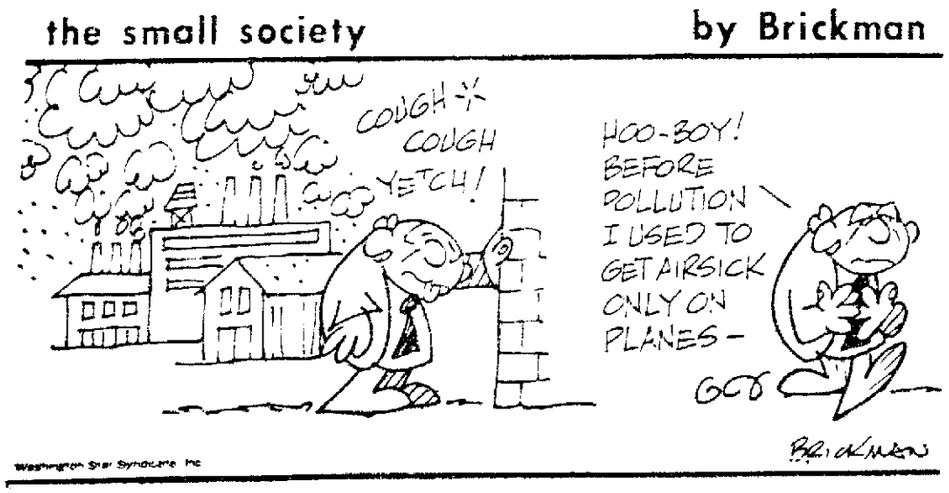

Screwworm flies, formerly the scourge of the southern cattle industry, have been brought under control by releasing millions of sterilized male flies in infested areas. This does not constitute true biological control, however, because new batches of sterilized males must be released periodically.

Other control practices include the adjusting of planting and harvesting dates to avoid insects and the monitoring of irrigation water to prevent the breeding of mosquitoes. Moreover, experienced gardeners know that patches of garlic will keep many types of insect pests from attacking neighboring plants.

Non-chemical pest control may become the norm through necessity. Toxaphene, which is perhaps the most commonly used pesticide in the United States at present, has been identified by the Department of Interior as a cause of stunted growth and bone development in fish. If Toxaphene goes the way of DDT or Mirex, a mighty cry will be heard: "Ladybug, ladybug, fly to my home!"

WASHINGTON — Across North America, the waterfowl are flying. The annual autumn migration of some 100 million ducks, geese and swans is under way. From their summer nesting grounds in Canada, the Arctic and the northern United States, some 45 species of migratory water birds are heading south.

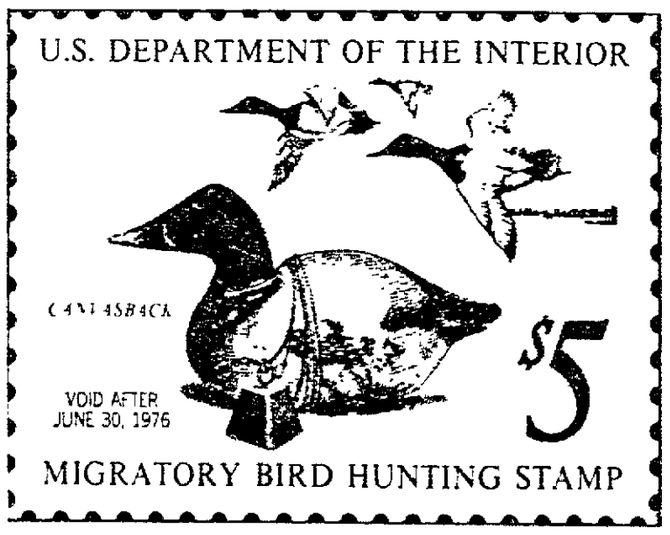

They will spend the cold months in the nation's wetlands — swamps, salt marshes, mudflats, prairie potholes, boggy fens, shallow lakes, river sloughs, estuaries and tidal bays — directed there by irresistible natural instincts.

But every year the accommodations are getting tighter. America's wetlands are disappearing at a rapid rate. At the turn of the century there were an estimated 127 million acres of wetlands in this country. By mid-century only 82 million acres remained, of which about 20 million were considered of significant value to waterfowl.

☆ ☆ ☆

Many people regard wetlands as "useless," suitable only for draining, filling and developing. Wetlands around urbanized coastal areas are under especially heavy pressure from development interests. Conservative estimates are that from 0.5 to 1.0% of U.S. coastal wetlands disappear annually. No one knows just how much wetland acreage still exists, for there has been no comprehensive survey since the 1950s. A National Wetlands Inventory is now being conducted.

Meanwhile, many public and private organizations are working to preserve waterfowl habitat. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which administers 360 national wildlife refuges in 49 states, uses proceeds from the sale of Migratory Bird Hunting Stamps — popularly known as "Duck Stamps" — to purchase wetlands.

The law locks up both man and woman
Who steals the goose from off the common,
But lets the greater felon loose
Who steals the common from the goose.
—A Medieval English quatrain

All waterfowl hunters—about two million annually — must buy the stamps, but the Interior Department this year is urging non-hunters to buy them, too. Last year about $12 million from stamp sales went to buy wetlands. Since 1934, when the stamps first were sold, more than $160 million has been raised to set aside about two million acres of water bird habitat.

In addition, some 11,000 private hunting clubs have preserved more than 5.2 million acres of wetlands. And conservation groups such as Ducks Unlimited, Inc., the Nature Conservancy and the National Audubon Society control 400,000 acres.

But the nation's still unprotected wetlands are embroiled in controversy today because of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' proposed permit program under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act of 1972. The Corps was sued by environmental groups who argued successfully that its plan to regulate the disposal of dredged or fill material was limited to "navigable" waters, and did not cover wetlands and all other waters of the United States as required by the law.

There is growing recognition that the nation's wetlands also serve to control flood waters, remove silt and pesticides, recharge groundwater, improve fisheries and provide habitat for fur-bearing mammals and other animals. If this attitude spreads, migratory waterfowl may still be guaranteed a place to stay when they go south for the winter.

Council Consistency On Line

There seems to be little doubt about what the City Council will do regarding future private parking lot construction if it wants to be consistent. The Council will have to go along with developer pleas to do the job as cheaply as possible — which means overcrowded, eyesore gravel lots.

The council set the stage for such future decisions by deciding — against the recommendation of the City-County Planning Commission — to gravel a "temporary" city-owned parking lot to be built on the Haymarket block between 9th and 10th, Q and R. The planning commission urged that the Haymarket lot be paved out of esthetic considerations and because the lot has a prime location on downtown Lincoln's major access routes, but a majority of the council opted for the cheaper gravel surface.

Council economizing ordinarily would be commendable, but considering the location of the Haymarket lot, the doubt surrounding its "temporary" nature and the fact that the city has usually demanded more stringent standards for parking lot construction from private owners or developers, the council's decision in that case is wide open to question.

U.S. Reacts Angrily To Vote On Zionism

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United Nations braced for a rocky future Tuesday as the United States reacted angrily to a General Assembly resolution calling Zionism "a form of racism."

Some U.N. officials feared that Congress would show its displeasure by cutting America's voluntary contributions that are a main source of support for such U.N. programs as aid to developing countries and refugee and emergency relief.

A storm of criticism erupted Tuesday — ranging from politicians to church groups — after the assembly adopted the anti-Zionism resolution Monday night by a vote of 72-35 with 32 abstentions and three nations absent.

Both houses of Congress condemned the action. The Senate, in a unanimous voice vote, called for a review of U.S. participation in the General Assembly. The House resolution, approved 384 to 0, said the assembly vote encouraged anti-Semitism.

Zionism is the advocacy of a Jewish homeland in Palestine and as such is the philosophical foundation of the Israeli state.

President Ford, during a meeting with nine visiting members of the Israeli parliament, denounced the U.N. move as a "wholly unjustified action."

Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said the assembly vote may result in a "full reappraisal of the United States' participation and its role in funding the U.N."

A State Department spokesman said, "We will be reviewing carefully a response," and did not rule out reduced financial support as an option.

In New York, an estimated 100,000 Jews and supporters rallied in Manhattan's garment center to protest the U.N. vote. The noontime rally, sponsored by 32 national Jewish groups, virtually halted all vehicular and pedestrian traffic in the area just below Times Square. Protesters, many carrying signs, filled Seventh Avenue from 42nd to 37th streets and intersecting side streets.

The Senate's nonbinding resolution of condemnation, approved by voice vote without dissent, calls on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House International Relations Committee to begin immediate hearings "to reassess the United States' further participation in the United Nations General Assembly."

U.N. bureaucrats, though expressing concern about cutbacks in U.S voluntary payments, said they thought it less likely that Congress would withhold assessed dues for the regular budget. The American portion is 25% of this year's budget — $81,268,729 out of $325,075,156.

Three years ago, Congress reduced the U.S. share of the regular U.N. budget from 31.5 per cent to the present 25 per cent in an outgrowth of the unsuccessful American effort to keep the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan in the world body. That action was set in motion after some congressmen became outraged at the gleeful behavior of some Third-World delegates on the floor of the assembly the night of the vote.

The first opportunity for the United States to use the axe will come at a Senate-House conference this week to compromise differences in bills the two chambers have approved. They would authorize spending $191.15 million a year on voluntary U.N. contributions and $6.5 million a year on assessed payments to various specialized agencies and programs.

Among the agencies in line to receive the voluntary contributions, the U.N. Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees (UNRWA) appears to be the most vulnerable.

Though based in Beirut and surrounded by Mideast oil wealth, it is chronically short of funds. Its commissioner-general, Sir John Rennie of Britain, said Tuesday that unless UNRWA could overcome a $13 million deficit by the end of the month, it would have to close down.

UNRWA's camps in Lebanon are under the control of the Palestine Liberation Organization, which originated the anti-Zionist resolution adopted by the assembly.

Israelis Brand Vote Anti-Semitic

By United Press International

The U.N. General Assembly's linking of Zionism with racism drew strong reactions around the world Tuesday. It was denounced by Israel and European nations as anti-Semitic, praised by the Soviet Union and Communist bloc, and hailed as a major victory of Arabs.

There also were demands that the assembly, which approved the resolution by 72 to 35 with 32 abstentions Monday night, reconsider its action.

In Jerusalem, Israeli officials branded the resolution as anti-Semitic and said U.N. approval crippled chances for peace in the Middle East. But they said Israel would not withdraw from the United Nations or recall its ambassadors from countries which voted for the resolution.

"Nothing is in the works," an official said. "By leaving the U.N. or its agencies we would be playing into the hands of the Arabs and helping their objective of isolating Israel."

An Israeli official said the "resolution against Zionism is directed against the Jewish people in its entirety and is a disguise for anti-Semitism."

"The General Assembly . . . has offended the memory of the victims of nazism and racism as well as freedom fighters who gave their lives in the anti-Nazi fight," the official added.

One official said the Assembly's call for the Palestine Liberation Organization to be invited to the Geneva peace talks "has put tremendous obstacles in the way of convening the conference."

"This was the purpose of those who promoted the resolution, including the PLO itself," he said.

From its headquarters in Geneva, the World Council of Churches appealed to the Assembly Tuesday to reconsider and rescind the resolution. General Secretary Philip A. Potter of the WCC, a fellowship of 271 Protestant, Orthodox and Old Catholic Churches, said in a public statement "there is no evidence that Zionism is overtly racist."

There was no official reaction from the Vatican. But in Bonn, the central committee of West German Roman Catholics said "such a nonsensical equating of Zionism with racism helps anti-Semitism in an irresponsible way. It provides the enemies of the state of Israel with a formal legitimation to continue a policy which aims at the wiping out of the country."

The Soviet Union hailed passage of the resolution as a "major decision" said it was achieved despite "inadmissible pressuring . . .by Zionists and international imperialist elements."

In Beirut, the vote was hailed as a new victory for the Palestinian cause. A spokesman for the PLO said the vote would further the "just struggle of the Palestinians."

In Damascus, the Syrian government-controlled newspaper Al Baath said the U.N. resolutions are "also a victory over the United States."

Golda Meir Calls For Support Of Zionism

Tel Aviv, Israel (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Golda Meir called on Jews throughout the world Tuesday to let everyone know they support Zionism.

Enforcement Of Title VI Is Low On 'Leadership'

Washington (UPI) — There has been an "absence of vigorous government-wide leadership" in enforcing anti-discrimination laws in $50 billion worth of federally-assisted programs, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights said Tuesday.

The commission, in an 817-page report examining enforcement of Title VI of the 1964 civil rights act, said offices set up within federal agencies to enforce non-discrimination are understafted, lack sufficient authority to execute their responsibilities and fail to adequately measure or enforce compliance with law.

The commission, in its major recommendation, said the President should issue an executive order transferring responsibility for coordinating and directing Title VI enforcement from the attorney general to the Office of Management and Budget.

"Experience has demonstrated that one cabinet department cannot successfully implement a program that calls for the issuance of instructions to other cabinet departments," Commission Chairman Arthur S. Flemming told a news conference.

He said the fact that every government agency has to go before the OMB with its budget request would "provide an opportunity for real oversight" with regard to civil rights enforcement efforts by an agency.

The commission also recommended that the President issue a sweeping executive order banning sex discrimination under any program which receives federal financial assistance.

Noting Title VI does not ban sex discrimination, Flemming said such discrimination "appears to be widespread" in federally-assisted programs.

"This is another basis for confusion on the part of Title VI recipients, since some programs which fall under Title VI have special provisions prohibiting sex discrimination."

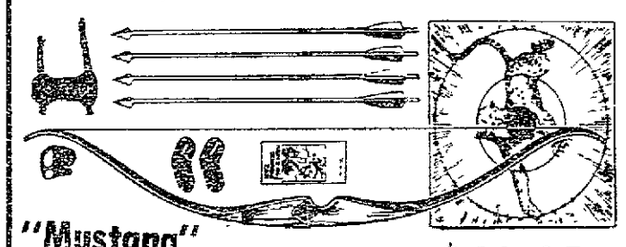

Agencies covered by the commission's report include the Extension Service of the Agriculture Department; the health and social services division of the Office for Civil Rights of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare; the Department of the Interior; the Environmental Protection Agency, the Federal Highway Administration and the Urban Mass Transportation Administration of the Department of Transportation; the Manpower Administration of the Department of Labor and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and the federal programs section of the civil rights division of the Justice Department.

U.S. Reacts Angrily To Vote On Zionism

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United Nations braced for a rocky future Tuesday as the United States reacted angrily to a General Assembly resolution calling Zionism "a form of racism."

Some U.N. officials feared that Congress would show its displeasure by cutting America's voluntary contributions that are a main source of support for such U.N. programs as aid to developing countries and refugee and emergency relief.

A storm of criticism erupted Tuesday — ranging from politicians to church groups — after the assembly adopted the anti-Zionism resolution Monday night by a vote of 72-35 with 32 abstentions and three nations absent.

Both houses of Congress condemned the action. The Senate, in a unanimous voice vote, called for a review of U.S. participation in the General Assembly. The House resolution, approved 384 to 0, said the assembly vote encouraged anti-Semitism.

Zionism is the advocacy of a Jewish homeland in Palestine and as such is the philosophical foundation of the Israeli state.

President Ford, during a meeting with nine visiting members of the Israeli parliament, denounced the U.N. move as a "wholly unjustified action."

Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said the assembly vote may result in a "full reappraisal of the United States' participation and its role in funding the U.N."

A State Department spokesman said, "We will be reviewing carefully a response," and did not rule out reduced financial support as an option.

Wet T-Shirt Contests Pack 'Em In

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — From Fat City to the French Quarter, bar owners are packing in thirsty oglers with New Orleans' latest craze: wet T-shirt contests.

It's Sin City's biggest come-on since police stopped noticing the scarcity of brassieres along Bourbon Street.

All you need is a pitcher of water, a bunch of white cotton T-shirts and a covey of bra-less girls eager to match their natural endowments with other girls. Since water makes the T-shirts all but transparent, the bar customers begin gulping instead of sipping their drinks.

The prize the bar owner puts up for this immodesty is modest: $25 to $75 for most contests.

Some of the girls, pressured by yelling drinkers, lift their T-shirts or peel them off, sometimes aided by a thoughtful onlooker.

A few contestants, steamed up by the noise, yank off skirts, too, a bid for the afternoon's prize that is ignored by grinning police on hand for crowd control.

Those excessively modest contestants who figure transparently wet T-shirts afford sufficient visibility generally get booed off the portable stages.

The two-month-old fad began as the jealously claimed brain-child of John McGuire, an owner of Pierre's restaurant-bar in Fat City, the plastic counterpart of Bourbon Street in adjacent Jefferson Parish.

That show foreshadowed the take-it-off syndrome of subsequent contests in other bars and other parts of New Orleans when some contestants hoisted the fronts of their T-shirts.

"But, it wasn't distasteful," protested McGuire, and his customers must have agreed because they're still crowding his bar.

A local radio personality, Hugh Dillard, professionally known on WWL-FM as Captain Humble, hired on as M.C. of that first show for $50.

'It was just sort of a fluke," he said. "They called me and just asked me to M.C. a contest. I didn't know what I was getting into.

"It was the dirtiest money I have ever worked for," he said, vowing never to take on such a job again.

One girl in a recent contest, he said, wore a floor-length skirt, which she pulled off and threw into the audience.

Viewers of these frenetic contests range from callow youth to middle age, and the yelling goes across the spectrum, too.

The contestants own up to ages from 18 to mid-30s, and rather inarticulately try to explain why they get into the contests. One thing they seldom express is compunction, but they do admit it helps to get a bit tanked beforehand.

"It was like being in Playboy," said a 22-year-old receptionist from suburban Marrero, winner of the Miss Maxi prize at Jed's bar in Jefferson Parish. "The atmosphere was dynamite."

That week's Miss Maxi said she had been talked into the contest by her prideful, truck-driver husband, and felt rotten for the first few minutes.

Jed's also gave a Miss Mini prize that day.

A 27-year-old social worker said she competed, to "do something outrageous before I got too old." A former Newcomb College student, 21, she stopped having fun when the bar owner raised her T-shirt over her head in the first contest. But, she's not in college for lack of funds, so she's been through three of the contests. "What could I do?" she asked.

Most of the T-shirt lifting, it may be noted, is done by the girls. And, one reason is the desire for victory.

At La Boucherie in the French Quarter during a recent contest, one girl won the Miss Maxi competition by peeling off her shirt although another contestant quite obviously was more maximum.

The girl with the mostest wouldn't take off her shirt. Sternly, the bar crowd turned thumbs down.

Not everyone present enjoys the contests. There was the policeman at La Boucherie who smiled a lot, but expressed disappointment.

"I thought it would be more complex," he said.

But, McGuire, the bar owner who tapped this bonanza, gazes at the clanging cash registers at Pierre's and is hugely satisfied with simplicity.

He won't say how much wet T-shirts have helped Sunday business.

"Put it this way," he said. "It was bigger than Mardi Gras."

Predators Cause Most Cattle Mutilations

By The Associated Press

An investigation by the Wyoming State Crime Laboratory shows out of about 20 suspected cattle mutilations the lab investigated, one was possibly the work of humans rather than predators, a cattle industry spikesman said.

In none of the cases was there any indication the cause of death was from any but natural causes, said Dean Prosser, executive vice president of the Wyoming Stockgrowers Association.

Last month, the administrator of the Wyoming State Veterinary Laboratory said tests at the facility showed predators and not people were responsible for the mutilation of all the about 10 carcasses the lab tested.

However, an assistant pathology professor at Colorado State University says out of 20 carcasses from Colorado he has tested, eight had "unquestionably" been mutilated by persons using a sharp object.

Dr. Albert McChesney said those animals mutilated by people came mainly from east of Denver in Elbert, Arapahoe, and El Pas Counties, and said "at least two" mutilated animals came from Wyoming.

However, he also said there was no evidence of any but natural causes of death in any of the animals.

The Wyoming Crime Lab report said in part "there seems to be sufficient reason to believe in at least a small minimum of the cases the mutilation has been the result of humans wielding sharp instruments..." Prosser said.

"Therefore in our minds the situation remains unresolved," Prosser quoted the report as saying.

The lab encouraged Wyoming ranchers, farmers and law enforcement officers to continue to report suspected mutilations.

Earlier this month, Carbon County Sheriff C.W. Ogburn said predators were responsible for almost all the about 80 suspected cattle mutilations investigated by his office in recent months.

In announcing the Veterinary Lab's findings, Dr. Herman Hancock said predator wounds appeared to be surgically straight because the skin had dried and the animal had sometines bloated, stretching the skin.

He also said certain portions of the animals often missing, such as the lips and sexual organs, were natural targets for predators because they have the least hair and the thinnest skin.

Hancock said he had reservations about evidence cited by McChesney for listing eight of the mutilations as man-caused. McChesney said in cases where the animals' hair was cut along with the skin it was the work of a man and not a predator.

"I don't think I'd buy it too strongly," said Hancock, adding he would want to compare hair cuts on a wound caused by a predator with a man-caused wound before he would agree with the theory.

"To put it in proper perspective you have to realize a total of two to three per cent of the total cow herd in the state dies of natural causes during the year," Prosser said, estinating that to be about 28,000 animals out of an approximate total of 1,400,000 head in Wyoming.

"I don't think the financial thing except in one case (where one rancher lost eight cows) is of any great significance," Prosser said. "People are always disturbed when strange things are going on."

"We are confident something very unusual is going on in regard to certain numbers of them, anyway," he said.

A local radio personality, Hugh Dillard, professionally known on WWL-FM as Captain Humble, hired on as M.C. of that first show for $50.

"It was just sort of a fluke," he said. "They called me and just asked me to M.C. a contest. I didn't know what I was getting into.

"It was the dirtiest money I have ever worked for," he said, vowing never to take on such a job again.

One girl in a recent contest, he said, wore a floor-length skirt, which she pulled off and threw into the audience.

Viewers of these frenetic contests range from callow youth to middle age, and the yelling goes across the spectrum, too.

The contestants own up to ages from 18 to mid-30s, and rather inarticulately try to explain why they get into the contests. One thing they seldom express is compunction, but they do admit it helps to get a bit tanked beforehand.

"It was like being in Playboy," said a 22-year-old receptionist from suburban Marrero, winner of the Miss Maxi prize at Jed's bar in Jefferson Parish. "The atmosphere was dynamite."

That week's Miss Maxi said she had been talked into the contest by her prideful, truck-driver husband, and felt rotten for the first few minutes.

Jed's also gave a Miss Mini prize that day.

A 27-year-old social worker said she competed, to "do something outrageous before I got too old." A former Newcomb College student, 21, she stopped having fun when the bar owner raised her T-shirt over her head in the first contest. But, she's not in college for lack of funds, so she's been through three of the contests. "What could I do?" she asked.

Most of the T-shirt lifting, it may be noted, is done by the girls. And, one reason is the desire for victory.

At La Boucherie in the French Quarter during a recent contest, one girl won the Miss Maxi competition by peeling off her shirt although another contestant quite obviously was more maximum.

The girl with the mostest wouldn't take off her shirt. Sternly, the bar crowd turned thumbs down.

Not everyone present enjoys the contests. There was the policeman at La Boucherie who smiled a lot, but expressed disappointment.

"I thought it would be more complex," he said.

But, McGuire, the bar owner who tapped this bonanza, gazes at the clanging cash registers at Pierre's and is hugely satisfied with simplicity.

He won't say how much wet T-shirts have helped Sunday business.

"Put it this way," he said. "It was bigger than Mardi Gras."

Predators Cause Most Cattle Mutilations

By The Associated Press

An investigation by the Wyoming State Crime Laboratory shows out of about 20 suspected cattle mutilations the lab investigated, one was possibly the work of humans rather than predators, a cattle industry spikesman said.

In none of the cases was there any indication the cause of death was from any but natural causes, said Dean Prosser, executive vice president of the Wyoming Stockgrowers Association.

Last month, the administrator of the Wyoming State Veterinary Laboratory said tests at the facility showed predators and not people were responsible for the mutilation of all the about 10 carcasses the lab tested.

However, an assistant pathology professor at Colorado State University says out of 20 carcasses from Colorado he has tested, eight had "unquestionably" been mutilated by persons using a sharp object.

Dr. Albert McChesney said those animals mutilated by people came mainly from east of Denver in Elbert, Arapahoe, and El Pas Counties, and said "at least two" mutilated animals came from Wyoming.

However, he also said there was no evidence of any but natural causes of death in any of the animals.

The Wyoming Crime Lab report said in part "there seems to be sufficient reason to believe in at least a small minimum of the cases the mutilation has been the result of humans wielding sharp instruments..." Prosser said.

"Therefore in our minds the situation remains unresolved," Prosser quoted the report as saying.

The lab encouraged Wyoming ranchers, farmers and law enforcement officers to continue to report suspected mutilations.

Earlier this month, Carbon County Sheriff C.W. Ogburn said predators were responsible for almost all the about 80 suspected cattle mutilations investigated by his office in recent months.

In announcing the Veterinary Lab's findings, Dr. Herman Hancock said predator wounds appeared to be surgically straight because the skin had dried and the animal had sometines bloated, stretching the skin.

He also said certain portions of the animals often missing, such as the lips and sexual organs, were natural targets for predators because they have the least hair and the thinnest skin.

Hancock said he had reservations about evidence cited by McChesney for listing eight of the mutilations as man-caused. McChesney said in cases where the animals' hair was cut along with the skin it was the work of a man and not a predator.

"I don't think I'd buy it too strongly," said Hancock, adding he would want to compare hair cuts on a wound caused by a predator with a man-caused wound before he would agree with the theory.

"To put it in proper perspective you have to realize a total of two to three per cent of the total cow herd in the state dies of natural causes during the year," Prosser said, estimating that to be about 28,000 animals out of an approximate total of 1,400,000 head in Wyoming.

"I don't think the financial thing except in one case (where one rancher lost eight cows) is of any great significance," Prosser said. "People are always disturbed when strange things are going on."

"We are confident something very unusual is going on in regard to certain numbers of them, anyway," he said.

Clout-Heavy Consortium Promoting Slurry Pipeline

By BRUCE INGERSOLL
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

A range war has flared on the Great Plains and spread all the way to Capitol Hill, and before this shootout is over, it may yet prove one of the most crucial in the history of the West.

This time grazing rights aren't at stake. It is a battle between the nation's railroads and the pipeline interests. The issue: Should the aspiring builders of coal-carrying pipelines be empowered to condemn right-of-way? The main battleground: Congress.

The rail industry is going up against a clout-heavy consortium, headed by the Bechtel Corp. of San Francisco, which wants to build a coal pipeline 1,040 miles from coal-rich Wyoming to Arkansas electric utilities.

BN Stands To Lose

The railroad with the most to lose, the gigantic Burlington Northern, is leading the attack against legislation that would confer the power of eminent domain, or condemnation, on the pipeline industry and thus clear the path for the $750 million Bechtel line.

Louis W. Menk, BN chairman, told the House Interior Committee recently that, to a great extent, the future of the ailing rail industry rides on how Congress votes. Coal traffic is its biggest source of revenue.

Should federal efforts to promote the comeback of King Coal as the nation's primary fuel succeed, Menk said, coal traffic would double over the next 10 years. Moreover, the rail industry would earn an additional $1.7 billion a year. That is if the West is not crisscrossed by "coal-slurry" pipelines carrying pulverized coal mixed with water.

Coal hauling is a key to keeping the railroads "safe from nationalization," Menk testified.

'Penn Central Of West'

"Financial problems created by the loss of coal traffic might very well produce a rail debacle in the West comparable to the Penn Central's failure," he asserted. "And down the drain would go the nation's best hope to keep the rail industry off the federal dole and, perhaps, out of Uncle Sam's hands."

The railroads are not without allies. Railroad labor, environmentalists, farmers and, at least for the time being, 10 Western governors are on their side.

Al H. Chesser, United Transportation Union president and spokesman for the Railway Labor Executives Association, testified that rail transport of coal is "more efficient, economical and flexible" than slurry pipelines.

Loss Of Water Feared

Montana Gov. Thomas L. Judge fears the loss of scarce water. The Bechtel line would require 6.5 billion gallons a year, Judge said. "Our water supply is essential to agriculture, especially in the arid southeastern portion of the state," Judge said. "I can see absolutely no reason to ship our water to Arkansas vai the coal slurry pipeline."

Arrayed against the railroad coalition are Bechtel, the Wall Street investment house of Lehman Brothers, Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Co. and the newly formed Slurry Transportation Association, an amalgam of pipeline interests.

Bechtel and Lehman Brothers own 40% each of Energy Transportation Systems Inc., which would lay the pipeline from northeast Wyoming to White Bluff, Ark. The remaining 20% is held by the gas utility.

Two Departments Pro-Pipeline

Bechtel officials include former Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and Caspar W. Weinberger, former secretary of health, education and welfare. Bechtel says they are not exerting their influence in the Ford administration. Nonetheless, the Interior and Transportation Departments support the pending pro-pipeline bills.

Burlington Northern's Menk insists hauling coal in "unit trains" is at least twice as energy-efficient as pumping slurry. And cheaper, too.

He cited a study done by Michael Rieber, a researcher at the University of Illinois' Center for Advanced Computation in Urbana. Rieber concluded that a slurry pipeline would have a cost advantage of as much as 2 to 1 over a brand-new rail line. However, the cost of shipping coal over existing trackage would be half as much as through a new pipeline, even if the tracks and roadbed were elaborately upgraded to carry loaded unit trains at a minimum of 50 miles an hour.

Pretty Pink Rock Makes Perfect Pet

San Francisco (UPI) — If you want a pet around the house that makes no mess, requires no license, can defend you in attack and will not reproduce, how about a pretty pink rock?

It's considered very camp to have a pet rock these days. They are selling like hotcakes at Nieman-Marcus, Liberty House and Macy's.

The personal geological companion comes with a manual — "Care and Training of Your Pet Rock."

Pet rocks need no lessons to be able to sit, play dead and roll over (especially down hill), says the manual.

For defense, it is suggested that an owner can take the pet out of a pocket and "bash the mugger's head in." It could also be flung at an intruder.

The pet rock craze is the brainchild of advertising man Gary Dahl. It came to him one day while he was sitting in a bar trying to get the day's concerns out of his mind.

This guy next to him wanted to talk.

"You gotta pet?"

"I keep a rock for a pet," he finally told the guy, who got the message and moved off.

Dahl kept thinking about it.

Because an advertising man's mind is always alert for ideas that can lead to selling things, he thought maybe he had something.

He and his wife now run "Rock Bottom Productions," a company that is selling rocks by the thousands.

They are imported rocks, from Mexico's Rosarito Beach — in shades of pink and gray.

Uranus Probe Threatened By Budget Squeeze

©The New York Times

New York — A tight budget squeeze at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is threatening plans to mount a mission for the first close-up exploration of Uranus, the seventh planet out from the sun.

The mission would take advantage of a rare alignment of the outer planets by which it would be possible for a Mariner-class spacecraft, launched in 1979, to reach Uranus in 5½ years. Such a flight would normally take 15 or 16 years.

But planetary scientists and project managers said the mission, as it has been planned, is in serious jeopardy. NASA has told them that funds to begin building the spacecraft may not be available in the fiscal 1977 budget, which is being drawn up by NASA in consulation with the Office of Management and Budget.

The Jet Propulsion Laboratory at Pasadena, Calif., which would manage the project, estimates that it would need $19 million to get the work under way. The Uranus mission would cost $137 million, plus about $40 million for the Titan-Centaur rocket.

Funding will have to begin with the 1977 budget if the 1979 launch schedule is to be met, said Robcert J. Parks, an assistant director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. Otherwise, he added, "we will miss a one-in-a-million opportunity."

He was referring to the fact that the orbits of the outer planets, from Jupiter out to Pluto, are coming into an alignment that occurs only once every 180 years. This affords an opportunity to fly a spacecraft by Jupiter and, gaining energy from Jupiter's gravitational force, proceed at an accelerated speed toward one of the more distant planets.

The proposed Uranus mission would involve a modified Mariner, which would also use Jupiter's energy. It would reach Uranus, a mammoth sphere of cold gases spinning on its side (its polar axis, not its equator, lying almost in the plane of its orbit), in mid-1985.

Last Man's Club Glad Bottle Is Still Unopened

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Superior — "Freedom has never been free," said State Legion Commander Ed Binder of Lincoln. Then he reminded that this nation has 26 million living veterans from four wars.

But it was just 17 old doughboys who stepped front and center here Monday night. They alone answered this year's roll call for the Last Man's Club of St. Mihiel American Legion Post 103.

There had been 88 when the group organized and deposited a celebration bottle in a Nuckolls County courthouse vault "for the enjoyment and pleasure" of the last two survivors. That was Nov. 11, 1935 — exactly 40 Armistice Days back.

Yes, Armistice Days. That's the only term for World War I octogenarians such as Carl Washington and Ralph Koken and Howard Crilly. Who would try to tell Tom White, an amputee who turned out in his wheel chair, that the nation now observes a "Veterans Day" on this date or that?

Wasn't it Nov. 11, 1918 that both Washington and Koken and others heard the big news as they lay hospitalized in France?

"I could hear the bells ringing in Marseilles, but I had such a fever from the flu that I didn't know if they were St. Peter's bells or whose," reflected Washington, who was also observing his 50th anniversary Monday as commander of the Superior post.

Koken, one of the 20 Superior originals who left with Co. G, 355th Infantry, had been wounded in the battle from which the post took its name — St. Mihiel's. He had just been transferred to Red Cross Hospital No. 1 in Paris when the word arrived.

Nurse Fainted

"A beautiful young French nurse stepped in and said it was all over," he recalled with a chuckle. "Then she fainted and fell flat on her face."

Oswin Keifer, now a Bostwick farmer, got the news following six weeks on the Argonne front lines with the 35th Division. He had advanced from private to first lieutenant, following a family military tradition which included a grandfather who was a general in both the Civil and Spanish-American Wars.

The 17 also included one retread, a George Marshall who was not the famous general of the same name. The Superior man "had the distinction of being a private in both World Wars I and II, going in the last time at age 43.

Others making the 40th muster were Charles Dye, Dr. H. H. Miller, Bertram Ziegler, Bill Konzack, O. F. Brown, Fred Bossemeyer and Frank Kubat, all of Superior; John Wulf of Guide Rock, Art Larson of Hastings, A. B. Young of Webber, Kan. and Loyd Blosser of Norway, Kan.

Approximately 100 other Legionnaires also turned out for what Post Commander Daryl Allington called "our one big night of the year every year." One of the area's stronger posts, St. Mihiel's has already topped next year's current membership quota of 260.

Even with 49 Last Man's Clubbers known dead and several others unaccounted for, the 17 showing up this year are optimistic the ceremonious bottle will stay corked for many more years. But some of the oldsters aren't too excited about those last sips regardless.

Said Wulf, who was taking in his first banquet in at least a decade, "They tell me the stuff loses its taste after seven years anyway!"

Woman Visits Ancestor's Trail Grave By Accident

Scottsbluff (AP) — Rebecca Winters died 123 years ago while traveling with her family on the Mormon Trail and her grave at the east edge of Scottsbluff has become a national memorial to pioneer families.

Her ancestors have traveled across the United States to see the grave, one of the more prominent along the trail.

Mrs. Mabel Jensen of Provo, Utah, was visiting relatives at Terrytown. During a sightseeing tour of the area they came upon the grave of Rebecca, her great-great-grandmother.

"I had known for a long time that Rebecca's grave was somewhere in the Scottsbluff area but it was by coincidence that we discovered it," Mrs. Jensen said. "It was a wonderful feeling to see the grave."

Mrs. Jensen said many of Rebecca's descendants live in Utah. Two of the closest are Ione Brooks and Beulah Willoughby, Mrs. Jensen's aunts, who live at Coalville, Utah.

Mrs. Jensen said she has most of the history about Rebecca's family. "The Mormons are great people for keeping records about their ancestors," she said.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad — now a part of the Burlington Northern — discovered the grave while a survey crew was laying out a new line south from Alliance.

Instead of destroying the gravesite, surveyors retraced the boundary lines back to Alliance, moving the tracks to protect the grave.

At the grave is an iron wagon wheel on which a friend carved Rebecca's name the night she died. The wagon wheel and two granite markers were fenced by the railroad, which also drilled a well at the site to water grass planted on the grave.

The Daughters of the American Revolution organization has taken on the responsibility of maintaining the gravesite. The DAR decorates the grave each Memorial Day with a wreath.

Mrs. Jensen, an active member of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers, expressed gratitude to those who have helped keep the gravesite in good condition.

Jury Decides Man Innocent Of Rape Count

A man charged with rape was found innocent by a Lancaster County District Court jury Tuesday morning.

St. Clair Myles, of 2228 S, charged with the March 2 rape of a 29-year-old Lincoln woman, heard the jury's innocent verdict on his 25th birthday.

Another Lincoln man, Marion Holmes, 28, charged with raping the same woman on the same morning, pleaded no contest last week to a charge of assault with intent to rape.

Holmes has not been sentenced on the no contest plea.

3 Youths Killed In Police Crash

Omaha (AP) — Three young persons died early Tuesday after their car collided with a police cruiser responding to a burglar alarm which turned out to be false.

Driver Mark Tarochione, 19, of Papillion, and passengers Kathy Kosalka, 18, and Paul Williams, 20, both of Omaha, were dead on arrival at a hospital. All suffered head and internal injuries, police said.

Officer Lawrence M. Sommer was listed in fair condition Tuesday.

Police said the westbound cruiser was responding to a burglary near 55th and L Sts. when it struck the car broadside.

Officers said the car was crossing L St. from a side road when the crash occurred.

Investigators said they assumed the cruiser did not have on red lights and siren.

Officers estimated from damage to the cruiser that Sommer was traveling at least the speed limit, 45 miles an hour.

Authorities said a six-pack of beer was found in the youths' auto. One bottle was open and empty, while the others were shattered, investigators said.

The deaths raised the Nebraska highway fatality toll for the year to 329 compared with 341 a year ago.

Three Persons Killed In Philadelphia Mishap

Philadelphia (AP) — Three persons were killed when a flatbed truck crossed the median strip of the Schuylkill Expressway here and smashed into a car. Three other vehicles were damaged in the accident.

State Police said the victims were Adam Carabon, 74; his wife, Mary, 63, both of Phoenixville; and Helen Levitsky, 80, of Wilkes-Barre.

The truck driver, Joseph Sposato, 22, of Phiiladelphia, was hospitalized with a broken arm and shoulder.

Police said Sposato lost control of the truck, which flipped over and threw him out. The truck jumped the divider, hit the Carabon car, then returned to its lane.

An electric motor on the back of the truck was torn loose on impact and landed on the roof of a car driven by Eugene Witt, 49, of Omaha, Neb. Police said Witt and his two passengers, Mark Selling, 16, and Susan Selling, 8, of Stafford were unhurt. The motor also hit a second car.

A board from the truck hit a tractor-trailer, but the driver was uninjured.

Teenager Faces Charges In Her Brother's Stabbing

Columbus (UPI) — LeAnn Prososki, 17, of Columbus, has been bound over to Platte County District Court for trial on an assault charge in connection with the Oct. 25 stabbing of her brother, Robert Leroy.

Judge Gerald E. Rouse reduced Miss Prososki's bond from $7,500 to $5,000. She is charged with assault with intent to inflict great bodily harm.

At the start of the preliminary hearing, George Moyer Jr., of Madison, counsel for Miss Prososki, requested that news reporters be barred from the court room, but Rouse denied the motion.

Witnesses called for the hearing, which is held to prove that a crime has been committed, included Miss Prososki's brother, Ed, who was present at the time of the stabbing of their brother, Robert Leroy, near Micek's Bar in Columbus.

71 Counties To Form Single Health Agency

Grand Island (UPI) — Representatives from 71 outstate Nebraska counties decided Monday to go ahead with plans to become a single health systems agency for one of three health service areas in the state.

The other two areas are Lincoln and Omaha.

The proposed health agency would replace three existing medical programs and would have review, comment and recommendation authority over programs seeking federal health dollars in outstate Nebraska.

The chairman of the interim task force on formation of the agency, Clarence Cory of Columbus, said the group is sending a letter of intent to form the agency to the Health, Education and Welfare Dept. The deadline for sending the letter is Dec. 1.

Meet Dec. 8

Cory said once the letter is sent the staffs of the Comprehensive Health Planning Councils will be working on a draft application. He said the application should be ready for review by the next meeting on Dec. 8.

Of some 11 recommendations made at a previous meeting concerning the formation of the agency, only one was changed. That recommendation dealt with the location of the agency, which was to have been North Platte. That was dropped in favor of further study.

Around $400,000

Preliminary budget figures for the agency were also discussed because the application must have a budget attached. No firm action was taken, but Rick Gamel, secretary-treasurer, said the first year budget would probably be around $400,000.

The task force gave Gamel the authority to prepare a more detailed budget.

The health system agency governing board would consist of 30 members and there would be four sub-area councils.

Cory said the task force hopes to have the application filed with the federal government by Jan. 19 so the agency could be included in the first funding cycle.

Heritage Museum To Open

Omaha (AP) — A western heritage museum will open next week in Omaha's Union Station.

Ronald Hunter, Omaha attorney who is president of the Western Heritage Society, said "we're operating on a shoe string. But the time for planning is over."

The station was donated to the city in the spring of 1973 by the Union Pacific Railroad. The society then was formed.

Officials say the building needs repairs and the city has agreed to chip in about $600,000 if the society comes up with $1.3 million in donations.

The society agreed to that in June.

Hunter said plans are for a members-only opening Nov. 21. Then the museum will be opened to the public Saturday and Sunday and every Sunday thereafter.

The museum will be in the station's restaurant.

Two model railroads are in the museum, along with other displays, and the society expects more donations soon.

The society has more than 30 members who have donated $5,000.

Record Release Of Water Slated

Omaha (AP) — The Army Corps of Engineers said Tuesday record amounts of water will be released from Gavins Point Dam on the Missouri River near Yankton, S.D., through the end of the year.

Engineers said the releases are necessary to keep Lewis and Clark Lake behind the dam at recommended levels.

The release of water at Gavins Point will continue near 61,000 feet per second through November.

Last Man's Club Glad Bottle Is Still Unopened

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Superior — "Freedom has never been free," said State Legion Commander Ed Binder of Lincoln. Then he reminded that this nation has 26 million living veterans from four wars.

But it was just 17 old doughboys who stepped front and center here Monday night. They alone answered this year's roll call for the Last Man's Club of St. Mihiel American Legion Post 103.

There had been 88 when the group organized and deposited a celebration bottle in a Nuckolls County courthouse vault "for the enjoyment and pleasure" of the last two survivors. That was Nov. 11, 1935 — exactly 40 Armistice Days back.

Yes, Armistice Days. That's the only term for World War I octogenarians such as Carl Washington and Ralph Koken and Howard Crilly. Who would try to tell Tom White, an amputee who turned out in his wheel chair, that the nation now observes a "Veterans Day" on this date or that?

Wasn't it Nov. 11, 1918 that both Washington and Koken and others heard the big news as they lay hospitalized in France?

"I could hear the bells ringing in Marseilles, but I had such a fever from the flu that I didn't know if they were St. Peter's bells or whose," reflected Washington, who was also observing his 50th anniversary Monday as commander of the Superior post.

Koken, one of the 20 Superior originals who left with Co. G, 355th Infantry, had been wounded in the battle from which the post took its name — St. Mihiel's. He had just been transferred to Red Cross Hospital No. 1 in Paris when the word arrived.

Nurse Fainted

"A beautiful young French nurse stepped in and said it was all over," he recalled with a chuckle. "Then she fainted and fell flat on her face."

Oswin Keifer, now a Bostwick farmer, got the news following six weeks on the Argonne front lines with the 35th Division. He had advanced from private to first lieutenant, following a family military tradition which included a grandfather who was a general in both the Civil and Spanish-American Wars.

The 17 also included one retread, a George Marshall who was not the famous general of the same name. The Superior man "had the distinction of being a private in both World Wars I and II, going in the last time at age 43.

Others making the 40th muster were Charles Dye, Dr. H. H. Miller, Bertram Ziegler, Bill Konzack, O. F. Brown, Fred Bossemeyer and Frank Kubat, all of Superior; John Wulf of Guide Rock, Art Larson of Hastings, A. B. Young of Webber, Kan. and Loyd Blosser of Norway, Kan.

Approximately 100 other Legionnaires also turned out for what Post Commander Daryl Allington called "our one big night of the year every year." One of the area's stronger posts, St. Mihiel's has already topped next year's current membership quota of 260.

Even with 49 Last Man's Clubbers known dead and several others unaccounted for, the 17 showing up this year are optimistic the ceremonious bottle will stay corked for many more years. But some of the oldsters aren't too excited about those last sips regardless.

Said Wulf, who was taking in his first banquet in at least a decade, "They tell me the stuff loses its taste after seven years anyway!"

Woman Visits Ancestor's Trail Grave By Accident

Scottsbluff (AP) — Rebecca Winters died 123 years ago while traveling with her family on the Mormon Trail and her grave at the east edge of Scottsbluff has become a national memorial to pioneer families.

Her ancestors have traveled across the United States to see the grave, one of the more prominent along the trail.

Mrs. Mabel Jensen of Provo, Utah, was visiting relatives at Terrytown. During a sightseeing tour of the area they came upon the grave of Rebecca, her great-great-grandmother.

"I had known for a long time that Rebecca's grave was somewhere in the Scottsbluff area but it was by coincidence that we discovered it," Mrs. Jensen said. "It was a wonderful feeling to see the grave."

Mrs. Jensen said many of Rebecca's descendants live in Utah. Two of the closest are Ione Brooks and Beulah Willoughby, Mrs. Jensen's aunts, who live at Coalville, Utah.

Mrs. Jensen said she has most of the history about Rebecca's family. "The Mormons are great people for keeping records about their ancestors," she said.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad — now a part of the Burlington Northern — discovered the grave while a survey crew was laying out a new line south from Alliance.

Instead of destroying the gravesite, surveyors retraced the boundary lines back to Alliance, moving the tracks to protect the grave.

At the grave is an iron wagon wheel on which a friend carved Rebecca's name the night she died. The wagon wheel and two granite markers were fenced by the railroad, which also drilled a well at the site to water grass planted on the grave.

The Daughters of the American Revolution organization has taken on the responsibility of maintaining the gravesite. The DAR decorates the grave each Memorial Day with a wreath.

Mrs. Jensen, an active member of the Daughters of Utah Pioneers, expressed gratitude to those who have helped keep the gravesite in good condition.

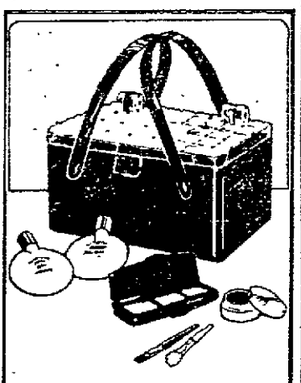

Jury Decides Man Innocent Of Rape Count

A man charged with rape was found innocent by a Lancaster County District Court jury Tuesday morning.

St. Clair Myles, of 2228 S, charged with the March 2 rape of a 29-year-old Lincoln woman, heard the jury's innocent verdict on his 25th birthday.

Another Lincoln man, Marion Holmes, 28, charged with raping the same woman on the same morning, pleaded no contest last week to a charge of assault with intent to rape.

Holmes has not been sentenced on the no contest plea.

Supreme Court Declines Omaha Case

Omaha (UPI) — Nebraska's largest school district proceeded on course to integrate by Jan. 1 Tuesday following the U.S. Supreme Court's refusal to review its case.

"Omaha is not a Boston," said Dale Te Kolste, Omaha. "I have to believe that the people of Omaha will respond well. This is something Omaha can handle and handle well."

Te Kolste, chairman of a 10-member court-appointed citizens committee to assist the Omaha School District in its integration plan, said the Supreme Court decision was "helpful" in that it "removed the uncertainty. We know what we have to do and we ought to get at it."

Case Declined

The Supreme Court, in a brief order, declined to hear the school district's appeal of a U.S. 8th Circuit Court of Appeals ruling requiring integration of faculty and students. The appeals ruling overturned the U.S. District Court order by Judge Albert Schatz of Omaha, which absolved the school district from any wrongdoing.

Owen Knutzen, Omaha superintendent of schools, said the possibility of forced busing to meet the court order was at present uncertain. Currently, 6,000 of the school district's 57,500 students are being bused voluntarily under several programs initiated in the school district's voluntary integration plan this year.

Knutzen said the school district was "not ruling out the possibility" there may be enough voluntary students who submit to busing, adding, "at this point we have been very pleased with the response we have received on a voluntary basis from the students."

Knutzen said the integration plan would emphasize continued high quality education and increased security for children.

'Safety Measures'

"Additional safety measures," Knutzen said, "will have to become a part of the whole endeavor."

Paul Kennedy, Omaha Board of Education chairman, said he was "hoping we would have the opportunity to develop a plan here that Omaha could claim its own."

"Now we have these extra guidelines we have to meet," Kennedy said. "I don't know what effect that will have."

Robert Broom, the Legal Aid Society attorney who represented 32 black parents as plantiffs along with the federal government in the original suit against the school district, said he was "very happy" with the Supreme Court refusal.

'Legally, Morally Right'

"We think it is a very sound and strong decision," Broom said. "We should continue with efforts to comply with the court order and do what is legally and morally right."

"I think we have the potential in Omaha for very positive community leadership," Broom said, "that will allow us to work together to desegregate the schools peacefully."

Knutzen said he believed the Supreme Court would have to give a case similar to Omaha's "future consideration," but "apparently they did not want to hear this particular case."

Of prime consideration in the school district's appeal was the burden of proof issue. The school district had contended the federal government should have proven it was segregated, and it wasn't up to the school district to prove that it was not.

Ratio Met This Year

Knutzen noted the teacher integration ratio was "met this year" and at present the school district's 318 black professional employes were in all of its 96 schools.

Knutzen said an integration plan doesn't mean a student would be transferred from school to school each year.

He said the school district was striving for "as good a plan as can be developed."

Lineman Gets Medal For First Aid Efforts

A St. Paul man has been awarded the President's Medal for saving the life of a fellow worker after an accident last June, the Nebraska Rural Electric Assn. reports.

Rollie Gibson, a lineman at the Howard Greeley Rural Public Power District in St. Paul, was credited with saving the life of John Kowalski after Kowalski was burned by a high voltage line at a St. Paul substation. The accident occurred while the two men were working on girders about 12 feet off the ground.

Kowalski came in contact with the line and was held in its charge four to seven seconds, then fell to the ground unconscious and not breathing. Gibson immediately jumped to the ground and began external heart massage.

"I hit him pretty good in the chest a couple of times, then started the massage," Gibson said. He had received training in heart massage two weeks earlier in a first aid program offered through the association.

Members of the St. Paul Rescue Squad, arriving on the scene four minutes after the accident, said if Gibson had not started heart massage when he did, Kowalski might have been dead by the time they arrived.

Kowalski was flown to the burn unit at Brooks General Hospital at Ft. Sam Houston,

Rollie Gibson

Tex., where both arms were removed. He is now back home and has been equipped with artificial arms.

Gibson will receive a special award from the association during its annual meeting in Lincoln Dec. 1-3, according to Al Ballard, general manager.

UNL Zoologist Awarded Nicaraguan Study Grant

Dr. Thomas B. Thorson, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln zoology professor, has been awarded a $40,000 grant to study bull sharks and sawfish, the university announced Tuesday.

Thorson received the grant from the Central Bank of Nicaragua and will conduct his studies in Lake Nicaragua.

The zoologist has been conducting research on the two species in the lake for more than 12 years. He has also studied the habits of stingrays in tropical waters.

"Most of my research has been confined to the summer months," Thorson said. "The grant from the bank of Nicaragua will enable me to conduct a year-round study."

Thorson is interested in the migration of bull sharks and sawfish from ocean waters to the freshwaters of Lake Nicaragua.

He said the presence of sharks and sawfish in the fresh water lake has long been an attraction for fishermen. Nicaragua is presently considering construction of a dam which would curtail the migration upriver to the lake.

The Central Bank of Nicaragua, which provides money for various research projects of interst to Nicaragua, is interested in a study which would provide information on the effects on the ecology of the lake if the migration of the fish was stopped.

Thorson will visit Nicaragua in February to begin work on the research project. He will make periodic visits to Nicaragua during the course of the one-year project rather than stay there all the time.

Talk On Funding Of Community Improvement Set

Lincoln's Urban Development Department will hold a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to hear suggestions on where the city should spend funds for community improvement.

This year Lincoln will receive $486,000 under the federal Community Development Act, the same amount as last year, to improve deteriorating areas in the city.

The City Council, which will make the final decision on where to use the funds, appropriated them last year to the Clinton neighborhood.

The meeting will be held in the Council Chamber of the County-City Building.

Ed Dept. Will Seek Grant For Gifted

The State Education Department will apply for a $75,000 federal grant, renewable for three years, to develop a model program for gifted and talented students.

The department, subject to State Board of Education approval Friday, hopes to train a statewide network of about 2,000 teachers to deal with talented and gifted students.

Forty-eight states now have programs for the gifted, including Nebraska. That compares to 10 states three years ago serving fewer than 4% of the nation's gifted children.

The program in Nebraska has tripled in recent years, according to Diane Dudley of the Education Department.

By state law, gifted children are eligible for one-fourth more state aid if they pass an intelligence test.

The hoped-for federal grant would provide 2,000 Nebraska teachers with special training and materials for the gifted and talented, Mrs. Dudley said. Twenty U.S. grants will be awarded.

No state matching funds are involved.

The high potential, high performance students would be identified for expanded programs in academic, creative or leadership efforts, or in the performing or and visual arts. They would be given more than the regular school system can offer, Mrs. Dudley said.

Heston Is Lawman

Hollywood (UPI) — Charlton Heston's next film for Universal will be "Two Minute Warning" in the role of a police captain.

SPEED READING COURSE TO BE TAUGHT IN LINCOLN AREA

The Iowa Reading Lab, of Des Moines, will offer a 4 week course in speed reading to a limited number of qualified people in the Lincoln area. A person is required to attend only one 2½ hour class per week, on the evening of their choice for 4 weeks only. The course guarantees to triple the person's reading speed with a marked improvement in comprehension and concentration. The guarantee, however, is a bare minimum as the average graduate will read 7 to 10 times faster. They can read almost any average book in less than one hour.

For those who would like additional information, a series of free, one hour orientation lectures have been scheduled. At these free lectures the course will be explained in complete detail, including classroom procedures, instruction methods, class schedule and a special 1 time only introductory tuition that is less than one-third the cost of similar courses. You must attend only one of the free meetings for complete details. You may attend any of the meetings for information about the Lincoln classes. These orientations are open to the public, above age 14, (persons under 18 should be accompanied by a parent if possible.)

If you have always wanted to be a speed reader but found the cost prohibitive or the course too time consuming . . . now you can! Just by attending 1 evening per week for 4 short weeks you can read 7 to 10 times faster, concentrate better and comprehend more. If you are a student who would like to make A's instead of B's or C's or if you are a business person who wants to stay abreast of today's everchanging accelerating world, then this course is an absolute necessity. These Free one hour meetings will be held at the following times and places.

3 Youths Killed In Police Crash

Omaha (AP) — Three young persons died early Tuesday after their car collided with a police cruiser responding to a burglar alarm which turned out to be false.

Driver Mark Tarochione, 19, of Papillion, and passengers Kathy Kosalka, 18, and Paul Williams, 20, both of Omaha, were dead on arrival at a hospital. All suffered head and internal injuries, police said.

Officer Lawrence M. Sommer was listed in fair condition Tuesday.

Police said the westbound cruiser was responding to a burglary near 55th and L Sts. when it struck the car broadside.

Officers said the car was crossing L St. from a side road when the crash occurred.

Investigators said they assumed the cruiser did not have on red lights and siren.

Officers estimated from damage to the cruiser that Sommer was traveling at least the speed limit, 45 miles an hour.

Authorities said a six-pack of beer was found in the youths' auto. One bottle was open and empty, while the others were shattered, investigators said.

The deaths raised the Nebraska highway fatality toll for the year to 329 compared with 341 a year ago.

Three Persons Killed In Philadelphia Mishap

Philadelphia (AP) — Three persons were killed when a flatbed truck crossed the median strip of the Schuylkill Expressway here and smashed into a car. Three other vehicles were damaged in the accident.

State Police said the victims were Adam Carabon, 74; his wife, Mary, 63, both of Phoenixville; and Helen Levitsky, 80, of Wilkes-Barre.

The truck driver, Joseph Sposato, 22, of Phiiladelphia, was hospitalized with a broken arm and shoulder.

Police said Sposato lost control of the truck, which flipped over and threw him out. The truck jumped the divider, hit the Carabon car, then returned to its lane.

An electric motor on the back of the truck was torn loose on impact and landed on the roof of a car driven by Eugene Witt, 49, of Omaha, Neb. Police said Witt and his two passengers, Mark Selling, 16, and Susan Selling, 8, of Stafford were unhurt. The motor also hit a second car.

A board from the truck hit a tractor-trailer, but the driver was uninjured.

Teenager Faces Charges In Her Brother's Stabbing

Columbus (UPI) — LeAnn Prososki, 17, of Columbus, has been bound over to Platte County District Court for trial on an assault charge in connection with the Oct. 25 stabbing of her brother, Robert Leroy.

Judge Gerald E. Rouse reduced Miss Prososki's bond from $7,500 to $5,000. She is charged with assault with intent to inflict great bodily harm.

At the start of the preliminary hearing, George Moyer Jr., of Madison, counsel for Miss Prososki, requested that news reporters be barred from the court room, but Rouse denied the motion.

Witnesses called for the hearing, which is held to prove that a crime has been committed, included Miss Prososki's brother, Ed, who was present at the time of the stabbing of their brother, Robert Leroy, near Micek's Bar in Columbus.

71 Counties To Form Single Health Agency

Grand Island (UPI) — Representatives from 71 outstate Nebraska counties decided Monday to go ahead with plans to become a single health systems agency for one of three health service areas in the state.

The other two areas are Lincoln and Omaha.

The proposed health agency would replace three existing medical programs and would have review, comment and recommendation authority over programs seeking federal health dollars in outstate Nebraska.

The chairman of the interim task force on formation of the agency, Clarence Cory of Columbus, said the group is sending a letter of intent to form the agency to the Health, Education and Welfare Dept. The deadline for sending the letter is Dec. 1.

Meet Dec. 8

Cory said once the letter is sent the staffs of the Comprehensive Health Planning Councils will be working on a draft application He said the application should be ready for review by the next meeting on Dec. 8.

Of some 11 recommendations made at a previous meeting concerning the formation of the agency, only one was changed. That recommendation dealt with the location of the agency, which was to have been North Platte. That was dropped in favor of further study.

Around $400,000

Preliminary budget figures for the agency were also discussed because the application must have a budget attached. No firm action was taken, but Rick Gamel, secretary-treasurer, said the first year budget would probably be around $400,000.

The task force gave Gamel the authority to prepare a more detailed budget.

The health system agency governing board would consist of 30 members and there would be four sub-area councils.

Cory said the task force hopes to have the application filed with the federal government by Jan. 19 so the agency could be included in the first funding cycle.

Heritage Museum To Open

Omaha (AP) — A western heritage museum will open next week in Omaha's Union Station.

Ronald Hunter, Omaha attorney who is president of the Western Heritage Society, said "we're operating on a shoe string. But the time for planning is over."

The station was donated to the city in the spring of 1973 by the Union Pacific Railroad. The society then was formed.

Officials say the building needs repairs and the city has agreed to chip in about $600,000 if the society comes up with $1.3 million in donations.

The society agreed to that in June.

Hunter said plans are for a members-only opening Nov. 21. Then the museum will be opened to the public Saturday and Sunday and every Sunday thereafter.

The museum will be in the station's restaurant.

Two model railroads are in the museum, along with other displays, and the society expects more donations soon.

The society has more than 30 members who have donated $5,000.

Record Release Of Water Slated

Omaha (AP) — The Army Corps of Engineers said Tuesday record amounts of water will be released from Gavins Point Dam on the Missouri River near Yankton, S.D., through the end of the year.

Engineers said the releases are necessary to keep Lewis and Clark Lake behind the dam at recommended levels.

The release of water at Gavins Point will continue near 61,000 feet per second through November.

Ag Statistician Murfield Promoted To Washington

Nebraska will get a new chief statistician for the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics Dec. 7.

Douglas Murfield, who has headed the agency the past three years, will be moving to Washington, D.C., to accept a promotion to head the Livestock, Dairy and Poultry Division at the Statistical Reporting Service (SRS) of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

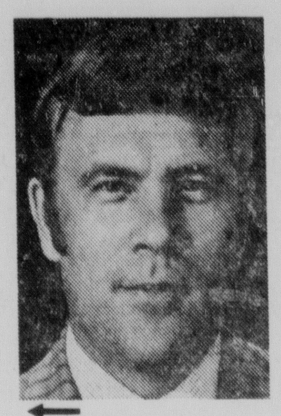

Murfield has become well known in Nebraska agricultural organizations as a speaker who worked hard to explain how statistics are collected and how farmers can use them to their own advantage.

He has also developed a simplified series of reports on state and national agricultural statistics that has a growing mailing list of interested farmers in the state.

Prior to coming to Nebraska, he served SRS in Texas, Iowa, South Dakota and Illinois in various capacities.

Murfield's replacement will be a native Nebraskan returning to his home state after a career as a statistician in Nebraska, Iowa and Washington, D.C.

He is Jack Aschwege, a native of Palmer, who began his career with SRS in Lincoln in 1956 after graduating from the University of Nebraska with a degree in agricultural economics.

'Tree Nut' Asks Governor To Halt Gretna Road Plan

Omaha (AP) — Gov. J. J. Exon has been asked to save state money by stopping a proposed road-building project near the old Gretna fish hatchery.

Omahan Frank C. Skrupa, who calls himself a "tree nut," opposes plans for rebuilding and paving 4.1 miles of graveled Neb. 31 from the Interstate 80 turnoff to a point near the old hatchery, now becoming Schramm State Recreation Area.

Gretna area landowner-developer Ron Patterson filed suit against the state to stop the project, and the case was heard last month before U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz. He has not issued a ruling.

Noting Exon wants to hold down state spending, Skrupa suggested the project could be scaled down or put off. The money saved, estimated at $1.5 million to $2 million, could be spent on a road project that is not controversial, he said.

Skrupa, a financial management counselor, said he is a property owner in the area and objects to the plan "because in order to meet 'high speed' specifications, adjacent land for shoulders and grading would have to be bulldozed and an estimated 900 healthy trees would be destroyed."

Ogallala Schools Superintendent Says He Doesn't Plan To Resign

Ogallala (AP) — Schools Supt. Gene Panning said Tuesday he would not act on a citizens' group request that he resign.

Panning's resignation was requested Monday by "Concerned Citizens," a group which last month opposed an unsuccessful $5.5 million school bond issue.

The group accused Panning of "fiscal extravagance," hiring too many faculty members, increasing the per-pupil cost of education and conducting a poor maintenance program.

However, Charles Mueller, board president, and not Panning, had jurisdiction over matters criticized by the group.

Northern Increases Dividend

Omaha (AP) — The Northern Natural Gas Co. board of directors Tuesday increased the quarterly dividend on its common stock by 5.25 cents per share to a new quarterly rate of 44 cents, on a split basis.

The increase, payable Dec. 22 to stockholders of record Dec. 1, brought the indicated annual dividend rate to $1.76.

The board recently authorized a two-for-one split of the company's common stock in the form of a 100% stock dividend to common stockholders of record Oct. 27.

Terry Thought Eyeing McCollister's Seat

Omaha (UPI) — A former Omaha television news director is making serious overtures about seeking the 1976 2nd District Republican congressional nomination.

UPI learned Lee Terry, 43, of Omaha, who resigned his post as news director for KETV, is sounding out Omaha area political observers on the feasibility of challenging at least two other candidates in the GOP primary.

Douglas County Commissioner P. J. Morgan and Omaha City Councilman Monte Taylor are expected to declare their candidacies to succeed Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb.

McCollister Monday officially announced his candidacy for the GOP U.S. Senate nomination to replace Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., who is retiring.

Terry was Channel 7's newscaster for 14 years and is said to believe his name recognition among voters would be his strongest asset. Terry is also said to be concerned about alleged lackluster efforts so far shown by Morgan and Taylor as to their genuine desires for the congressional seat.

Now that McCollister has announced, Morgan's and Taylor's declarations for his post should be forthcoming within the near future.

State Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha will, in all probability, run without significant opposition on the Democratic ticket.

Dyas Opposes Proliferation Of Nuclear Arms

Democratic senatorial aspirant Hess Dyas of Lincoln Tuesday said the U.S. should prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons throughout the world.

In a Veterans Day speech at Yutan, Dyas criticized the policy of providing nuclear reactors, which create the materials for nuclear bombs, to other nations, some of whom are adversaries.

"Just this last week the United States announced the sale of two nuclear reactors to Egypt," Dyas noted.

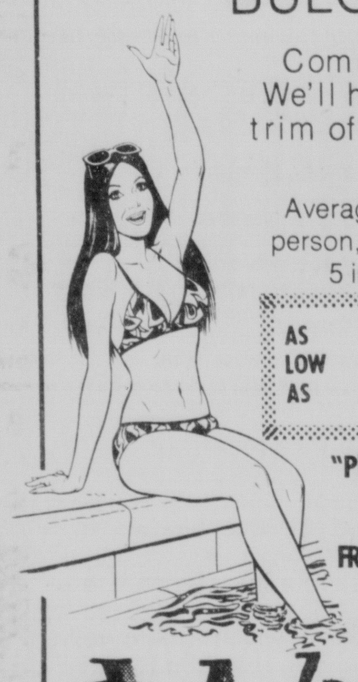

"The thought of a potential nuclear power existing in the Middle East is a frightening one."

Trees Abound Now In Pampas

Buenos Aires (UPI) — When Europeans first viewed the broad Argentine Pampas, or grassy plains, they were taken aback by the thousands of square miles without a tree in sight.

Today Buenos Aires, a river port city on the edge of the Pampas, boasts avenues lined with thousands of trees, from the flowering Jacaranda to the stately sycamore and palo borracho (literally, drunken pole) with a thick bottle-shaped trunk.

Supreme Court Declines Omaha Case

Omaha (UPI) — Nebraska's largest school district proceeded on course to integrate by Jan. 1 Tuesday following the U.S. Supreme Court's refusal to review its case.

"Omaha is not a Boston," said Dale Te Kolste, Omaha. "I have to believe that the people of Omaha will respond well. This is something Omaha can handle and handle well."

Te Kolste, chairman of a 10-member court-appointed citizens committee to assist the Omaha School District in its integration plan, said the Supreme Court decision was "helpful" in that it "removed the uncertainty. We know what we have to do and we ought to get at it."

Case Declined

The Supreme Court, in a brief order, declined to hear the school district's appeal of a U.S. 8th Circuit Court of Appeals ruling requiring integration of faculty and students. The appeals ruling overturned the U.S. District Court order by Judge Albert Schatz of Omaha, which absolved the school district from any wrongdoing.

Owen Knutzen, Omaha superintendent of schools, said the possibility of forced busing to meet the court order was at present uncertain. Currently, 6,000 of the school district's 57,500 students are being bused voluntarily under several programs initiated in the school district's voluntary integration plan this year.

Knutzen said the school district was "not ruling out the possibility" there may be enough voluntary students who submit to busing, adding, "at this point we have been very pleased with the response we have received on a voluntary basis from the students."

Knutzen said the integration plan would emphasize continued high quality education and increased security for children.

'Safety Measures'

"Additional safety measures," Knutzen said, "will have to become a part of the whole endeavor."

Paul Kennedy, Omaha Board of Education chairman, said he was "hoping we would have the opportunity to develop a plan here that Omaha could claim its own."

"Now we have these extra guidelines we have to meet," Kennedy said. "I don't know what effect that will have."

Robert Broom, the Legal Aid Society attorney who represented 32 black parents as plantiffs along with the federal government in the original suit against the school district, said he was "very happy" with the Supreme Court refusal.

'Legally, Morally Right'

"We think it is a very sound and strong decision," Broom said. "We should continue with efforts to comply with the court order and do what is legally and morally right."

"I think we have the potential in Omaha for very positive community leadership," Broom said, "that will allow us to work together to desegregate the schools peacefully."

Knutzen said he believed the Supreme Court would have to give a case similar to Omaha's "future consideration," but "apparently they did not want to hear this particular case."

Of prime consideration in the school district's appeal was the burden of proof issue. The school district had contended the federal government should have proven it was segregated, and it wasn't up to the school district to prove that it was not.

Ratio Met This Year

Knutzen noted the teacher integration ratio was "met this year" and at present the school district's 318 black professional employes were in all of its 96 schools.

Knutzen said an integration plan doesn't mean a student would be transferred from school to school each year.

He said the school district was striving for "as good a plan as can be developed."

Lineman Gets Medal For First Aid Efforts

A St. Paul man has been awarded the President's Medal for saving the life of a fellow worker after an accident last June, the Nebraska Rural Electric Assn. reports.

Rollie Gibson, a lineman at the Howard Greeley Rural Public Power District in St. Paul, was credited with saving the life of John Kowalski after Kowalski was burned by a high voltage line at a St. Paul substation. The accident occurred while the two men were working on girders about 12 feet off the ground.

Kowalski came in contact with the line and was held in its charge four to seven seconds, then fell to the ground unconscious and not breathing. Gibson immediately jumped to the ground and began external heart massage.

"I hit him pretty good in the chest a couple of times, then started the massage," Gibson said. He had received training in heart massage two weeks earlier in a first aid program offered through the association.

Members of the St. Paul Rescue Squad, arriving on the scene four minutes after the accident, said if Gibson had not started heart massage when he did, Kowalski might have been dead by the time they arrived.

Kowalski was flown to the burn unit at Brooks General Hospital at Ft. Sam Houston,

Rollie Gibson

Tex., where both arms were removed. He is now back home and has been equipped with artificial arms.

Gibson will receive a special award from the association during its annual meeting in Lincoln Dec. 1-3, according to Al Ballard, general manager.

Ed Dept. Will Seek Grant For Gifted

The State Education Department will apply for a $75,000 federal grant, renewable for three years, to develop a model program for gifted and talented students.

The department, subject to State Board of Education approval Friday, hopes to train a statewide network of about 2,000 teachers to deal with talented and gifted students.

Forty-eight states now have programs for the gifted, including Nebraska. That compares to 10 states three years ago serving fewer than 4% of the nation's gifted children.

The program in Nebraska has tripled in recent years, according to Diane Dudley of the Education Department.

By state law, gifted children are eligible for one-fourth more state aid if they pass an intelligence test.

The hoped-for federal grant would provide 2,000 Nebraska teachers with special training and materials for the gifted and talented, Mrs. Dudley said. Twenty U.S. grants will be awarded.

No state matching funds are involved.

The high potential, high performance students would be identified for expanded programs in academic, creative or leadership efforts, or in the performing or and visual arts. They would be given more than the regular school system can offer, Mrs. Dudley said.

UNL Zoologist Awarded Nicaraguan Study Grant

Dr. Thomas B. Thorson, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln zoology professor, has been awarded a $40,000 grant to study bull sharks and sawfish, the university announced Tuesday.

Thorson received the grant from the Central Bank of Nicaragua and will conduct his studies in Lake Nicaragua.

The zoologist has been conducting research on the two species in the lake for more than 12 years. He has also studied the habits of stingrays in tropical waters.

"Most of my research has been confined to the summer months," Thorson said. "The grant from the bank of Nicaragua will enable me to conduct a year-round study."

Thorson is interested in the migration of bull sharks and sawfish from ocean waters to the freshwaters of Lake Nicaragua.

He said the presence of sharks and sawfish in the fresh water lake has long been an attraction for fishermen. Nicaragua is presently considering construction of a dam which would curtail the migration upriver to the lake.

The Central Bank of Nicaragua, which provides money for various research projects of interst to Nicaragua, is interested in a study which would provide information on the effects on the ecology of the lake if the migration of the fish was stopped.

Thorson will visit Nicaragua in February to begin work on the research project. He will make periodic visits to Nicaragua during the course of the one-year project rather than stay there all the time.

Talk On Funding Of Community Improvement Set

Lincoln's Urban Development Department will hold a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to hear suggestions on where the city should spend funds for community improvement.

This year Lincoln will receive $486,000 under the federal Community Development Act, the same amount as last year, to improve deteriorating areas in the city.

The City Council, which will make the final decision on where to use the funds, appropriated them last year to the Clinton neighborhood.

The meeting will be held in the Council Chamber of the County-City Building.

SPEED READING COURSE TO BE TAUGHT IN LINCOLN AREA

The Iowa Reading Lab, of Des Moines, will offer a 4 week course in speed reading to a limited number of qualified people in the Lincoln area. A person is required to attend only one 2½ hour class per week, on the evening of their choice for 4 weeks only. The course guarantees to triple the person's reading speed with a marked improvement in comprehension and concentration. The guarantee, however, is a bare minimum as the average graduate will read 7 to 10 times faster. They can read almost any average book in less than one hour.

For those who would like additional information, a series of free, one hour orientation lectures have been scheduled. At these free lectures the course will be explained in complete detail, including classroom procedures, instruction methods, class schedule and a special 1 time only introductory tuition that is less than one-third the cost of similar courses. You must attend only one of the free meetings for complete details. You may attend any of the meetings for information about the Lincoln classes. These orientations are open to the public, above age 14, (persons under 18 should be accompanied by a parent if possible.)

If you have always wanted to be a speed reader but found the cost prohibitive or the course too time consuming . . . now you can! Just by attending 1 evening per week for 4 short weeks you can read 7 to 10 times faster, concentrate better and comprehend more. If you are a student who would like to make A's instead of B's or C's or if you are a business person who wants to stay abreast of today's everchanging accelerating world, then this course is an absolute necessity. These Free one hour meetings will be held at the following times and places.

Wednesday, November 12th,
at 6:30 p.m. and again at 8:30 p.m.
Thursday, November 13th
at 6:30 p.m. and again at 8:30 p.m.

at 10.30 a.m. and again at 1:30 p.m.
Monday, November 17th,
at 6.30 p.m. and again at 8:30 p.m.

These free meetings will be held in the State Room of the Radisson Cornhusker Hotel located at 13th and M Street.

If you are a businessman, student, housewife or executive, this couse which took 5 years of intensive research to develop, is a must. You can read 7-10 times faster, comprhend more, concentrate better, and remember longer. Students are offered an additional discount. This course can be taught to industry or civic groups at "Group rates" upon request. Be sure to attend whichever free orientation that fits in your schedule.

No Misunderstanding With Lewis—Lobbyist

By The Associated Press

Charles Noren, a prominent lobbyist, said Tuesday that there was no misunderstanding between him and Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis over a bill to raise the maximum interest allowed on home loans from 9 to 11%.

Noren said that everyone knew that "points," a form of prepaid interest charged against the buyer or seller of a home, would be legal under the bill.

The bill, introduced by Lewis, passed with the help of Noren's lobbying efforts.

During debate on the bill, Lewis said it would eliminate points on all loans except FHA and VA mortgages.

The bill did not eliminate points. Lewis said he was not deceived — that was too strong of a word. But Lewis did say he believed the bill "would have the effect" of eliminating points.

Some lenders still charge points, partially because it allows them to collect interest money in advance.

Lewis said he would study the situation and introduce corrective legislation if necessary.

Elevators Sold To Far-Mar-Co

Hutchinson, Kan. (AP) — Elevator facilities owned by Gano-Horace Grain Inc. in Kansas and Colorado have been purchased by Far-Mar-Co Inc., officers of the two firms announced Tuesday.

The purchase covers country elevators in Gano, Hobard and Horace, Kan., and in Granda, Hartmen, Haswell, Lamar and Sheridan Lake, Colo.

A terminal elevator in South Hutchinson, Kan., also is included in the agreement, which is subject to approval of Gano-Horace Inc. stockholders.

George Voth, executive vice president of Far-Mar-Co, said the regional cooperative will give local area coops the option of purchasing the country elevators to provide continued service to local grain producers.

N.Y. Governor Is A Grandpa

New York (AP) — Gov. Hugh Carey is a grandfather.

His daughter, Mrs. Susan Carey Dempsey, gave birth at Lenox Hill Hospital to an 8-pound 1-ounce girl. She is the first child of Mrs. Dempsey and her husband, Martin, a marine insurance broker.

The infant is the governor's first grandchild.

Sen. William Skarda

18-Year Veteran Won't Run For Another Term

State Sen. William Skarda said Tuesday he will not seek another term in the Nebraska Legislature.

Skarda, who was first elected to the Legislature in 1958, will have served 18 years when he bows out next year. He represents the 7th District.

In a letter to Fritz Stanek, a former member of the Omaha school board, Skarda said he would support Stanek should Stanek announce his candidacy for the office.

Skarda said one reason for the step-down were his plans to build a home in another legislative district southwest of Omaha.

State-Union Contract Law Repeal Asked

The Unicameral's Labor Committee Tuesday shied away from speedy action on a request to seek repeal of a law which says state and local government can't be compelled to recognize or enter into contracts with labor unions.

Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan, committee chairman, said the repeal was requested by the Nebraska Association of Public Employes.

Committee members, however, said they were hearing of the request for the first time and didn't want to decide right away whether they would introduce a repealer bill.

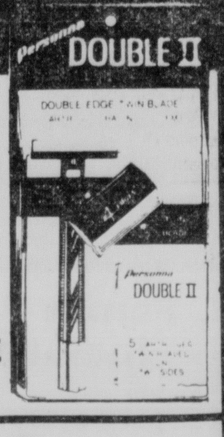

At issue is a section of law which says state and local government can't be compelled by the courts or anyone else to grant union recognition or sign any contracts. They may do so voluntarily.

The interpretation given to that section by the Nebraska Supreme Court is that, for one thing, the State Court of Industrial Relations may not compell a school district to recognize a teacher union.

Further, the industrial court may settle disputes over grievances, but can't compel an agency of government to sign agreement contracts.

Ag Statistician Murfield Promoted To Washington

Nebraska will get a new chief statistician for the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics Dec. 7.

Douglas Murfield, who has headed the agency the past three years, will be moving to Washington, D.C., to accept a promotion to head the Livestock, Dairy and Poultry Division at the Statistical Reporting Service (SRS) of the U S Department of Agriculture.

Murfield has become well known in Nebraska agricultural organizations as a speaker who worked hard to explain how statistics are collected and how farmers can use them to their own advantage.

He has also developed a simplified series of reports on state and national agricultural statistics that has a growing mailing list of interested farmers in the state.

Prior to coming to Nebraska, he served SRS in Texas, Iowa, South Dakota and Illinois in various capacities

Murfield's replacement will be a native Nebraskan returning to his home state after a career as a statistician in Nebraska, Iowa and Washington, D.C.

He is Jack Aschwege, a native of Palmer, who began his career with SRS in Lincoln in 1956 after graduating from the University of Nebraska with a degree in agricultural economics.

'Tree Nut' Asks Governor To Halt Gretna Road Plan

Omaha (AP) — Gov. J. J. Exon has been asked to save state money by stopping a proposed road-building project near the old Gretna fish hatchery

Omahan Frank C. Skrupa, who calls himself a "tree nut," opposes plans for rebuilding and paving 4.1 miles of graveled Neb. 31 from the Interstate 80 turnoff to a point near the old hatchery, now becoming Schramm State Recreation Area.

Gretna area landowner-developer Ron Patterson filed suit against the state to stop the project, and the case was heard last month before U S District Judge Albert Schatz He has not issued a ruling

Noting Exon wants to hold down state spending, Skrupa suggested the project could be scaled down or put off. The money saved, estimated at $1 5 million to $2 million, could be spent on a road project that is not controversial, he said.

Skrupa, a financial management counselor, said he is a property owner in the area and objects to the plan "because in order to meet 'high speed' specifications, adjacent land for shoulders and grading would have to be bulldozed and an estimated 900 healthy trees would be destroyed."

Ogallala Schools Superintendent Says He Doesn't Plan To Resign

Ogallala (AP) — Schools Supt. Gene Panning said Tuesday he would not act on a citizens' group request that he resign.

Panning's resignation was requested Monday by "Concerned Citizens," a group which last month opposed an unsuccessful $5.5 million school bond issue.

The group accused Panning of "fiscal extravagance," hiring too many faculty members, increasing the per-pupil cost of education and conducting a poor maintenance program.

However, Charles Mueller, board president, and not Panning, had jurisdiction over matters criticized by the group.

Northern Increases Dividend

Omaha (AP) — The Northern Natural Gas Co. board of directors Tuesday increased the quarterly dividend on its common stock by 5.25 cents per share to a new quarterly rate of 44 cents, on a split basis.

The increase, payable Dec. 22 to stockholders of record Dec. 1, brought the indicated annual dividend rate to $1.76.

The board recently authorized a two-for-one split of the company's common stock in the form of a 100% stock dividend to common stockholders of record Oct. 27.

Hike Planned

A naturalist will lead a hike at the Chet Ager Nature Center in Pioneers Park Saturday morning from 10 until noon. People of all ages are welcome and there is no admission fee.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Terry Thought Eyeing McCollister's Seat

Omaha (UPI) — A former Omaha television news director is making serious overtures about seeking the 1976 2nd District Republican congressional nomination.

UPI learned Lee Terry, 43, of Omaha, who resigned his post as news director for KETV, is sounding out Omaha area political observers on the feasibility of challenging at least two other candidates in the GOP primary.

Douglas County Commissioner P. J. Morgan and Omaha City Councilman Monte Taylor are expected to declare their candidacies to succeed Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb.

McCollister Monday officially announced his candidacy for the GOP U.S. Senate nomination to replace Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., who is retiring.

Terry was Channel 7's newscaster for 14 years and is said to believe his name recognition among voters would be his strongest asset. Terry is also said to be concerned about alleged lackluster efforts so far shown by Morgan and Taylor as to their genuine desires for the congressional seat.

Now that McCollister has announced, Morgan's and Taylor's declarations for his post should be forthcoming within the near future.

State Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha will, in all probability, run without significant opposition on the Democratic ticket.

Dyas Opposes Proliferation Of Nuclear Arms

Democratic senatorial aspirant Hess Dyas of Lincoln Tuesday said the U.S. should prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons throughout the world.

In a Veterans Day speech at Yutan, Dyas criticized the policy of providing nuclear reactors, which create the materials for nuclear bombs, to other nations, some of whom are adversaries.

"Just this last week the United States announced the sale of two nuclear reactors to Egypt," Dyas noted.

"The thought of a potential nuclear power existing in the Middle East is a frightening one."

Trees Abound Now In Pampas

Buenos Aires (UPI) — When Europeans first viewed the broad Argentine Pampas, or grassy plains, they were taken aback by the thousands of square miles without a tree in sight.

Today Buenos Aires, a river port city on the edge of the Pampas, boasts avenues lined with thousands of trees, from the flowering Jacaranda to the stately sycamore and palo borracho (literally, drunken pole) with a thick bottle-shaped trunk.

Selecting a Turkey . . . What to Look For

When November rolls around we begin to look forward to the biggest food feast day of the year, Thanksgiving. Turkey is the traditional center of that feast, even though it's a good choice anytime.

When starting your holiday menu plans, consider what size turkey to choose. The highest proportion of meat to bone will be on the larger birds. For big family meals or buffets, a large tom turkey, about 20 lbs. or so may be the answer. Hens weighing 12-16 lbs. are about right for smaller groups. (Or have a larger bird cut in half—freeze one half for later. Most butchers will do this for you . . .)

How many servings can you plan per turkey? When selecting a turkey 12 lbs. or under, allow ¾-1 lb. per serving. For medium sized birds over 12 lbs. allow ½-¾ lb. per person. Correct cooking and carving can increase the number of servings somewhat.

When properly defrosted, a fresh-frozen turkey seems so fresh even many experts cannot tell if it was frozen. To thaw—leave the turkey in the unopened plastic bag and use one of the following methods: 1. No hurry—leave in the refrigerator 3-4 days. 2. Faster—place turkey in a brown grocery bag—or wrap in several thicknesses of newspaper and leave at room temperature one hour per pound. Never leave an unwrapped, or unbagged, turkey at room temperature for long periods of time. 3. Fastest—cover with cold water, changing the water occasionally to keep cold, 30 minutes per pound. Refrigerate or cook as soon as thawed. Refreezing is not recommended.

Next week—more about turkeys and holiday foods . . .

No Misunderstanding With Lewis—Lobbyist

By The Associated Press

Charles Noren, a prominent lobbyist, said Tuesday that there was no misunderstanding between him and Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis over a bill to raise the maximum interest allowed on home loans from 9 to 11%.

Noren said that everyone knew that "points," a form of prepaid interest charged against the buyer or seller of a home, would be legal under the bill.

The bill, introduced by Lewis, passed with the help of Noren's lobbying efforts.

During debate on the bill, Lewis said it would eliminate points on all loans except FHA and VA mortgages.

The bill did not eliminate points. Lewis said he was not deceived — that was too strong of a word. But Lewis did say he believed the bill "would have the effect" of eliminating points.

Some lenders still charge points, partially because it allows them to collect interest money in advance.

Lewis said he would study the situation and introduce corrective legislation if necessary.

Elevators Sold To Far-Mar-Co

Hutchinson, Kan. (AP) — Elevator facilities owned by Gano-Horace Grain Inc. in Kansas and Colorado have been purchased by Far-Mar-Co Inc., officers of the two firms announced Tuesday.

The purchase covers country elevators in Gano, Hobard and Horace, Kan., and in Granda, Hartmen, Haswell, Lamar and Sheridan Lake, Colo.

A terminal elevator in South Hutchinson, Kan., also is included in the agreement, which is subject to approval of Gano-Horace Inc. stockholders.

George Voth, executive vice president of Far-Mar-Co, said the regional cooperative will give local area coops the option of purchasing the country elevators to provide continued service to local grain producers.

N.Y. Governor Is A Grandpa

New York (AP) — Gov. Hugh Carey is a grandfather.

His daughter, Mrs. Susan Carey Dempsey, gave birth at Lenox Hill Hospital to an 8-pound 1-ounce girl. She is the first child of Mrs. Dempsey and her husband, Martin, a marine insurance broker.

The infant is the governor's first grandchild.

Sen. William Skarda

18-Year Veteran Won't Run For Another Term

State Sen. William Skarda said Tuesday he will not seek another term in the Nebraska Legislature.

Skarda, who was first elected to the Legislature in 1958, will have served 18 years when he bows out next year. He represents the 7th District.

In a letter to Fritz Stanek, a former member of the Omaha school board, Skarda said he would support Stanek should Stanek announce his candidacy for the office.

Skarda said one reason for the step-down were his plans to build a home in another legislative district southwest of Omaha.

State-Union Contract Law Repeal Asked

The Unicameral's Labor Committee Tuesday shied away from speedy action on a request to seek repeal of a law which says state and local government can't be compelled to recognize or enter into contracts with labor unions.

Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan, committee chairman, said the repeal was requested by the Nebraska Association of Public Employes.

Committee members, however, said they were hearing of the request for the first time and didn't want to decide right away whether they would introduce a repealer bill.

At issue is a section of law which says state and local government can't be compelled by the courts or anyone else to grant union recognition or sign any contracts. They may do so voluntarily.

The interpretation given to that section by the Nebraska Supreme Court is that, for one thing, the State Court of Industrial Relations may not compell a school district to recognize a teacher union.

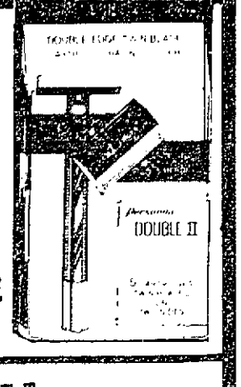

Further, the industrial court may settle disputes over grievances, but can't compel an agency of government to sign agreement contracts.

Aussies Protest Ouster Of Prime Minister

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Demonstrators marched in major cities and seamen and dockworkers struck Australia's waterfronts Tuesday in protest against the dismissal of Prime Minister Gough Whitlam's Labor government. But the business community was buoyed by the ouster.

Whitlam promised an epic struggle for "democracy as we have known it" following his removal in a budgetary crisis by Gov. Gen. Sir John Kerr, Queen Elizabeth II's representative in Australia.

Kerr appointed Malcolm Fraser, a wealthy farmer and leader of the conservative Liberal-Country party coalition, as caretaker prime minister pending a general election expected Dec. 13.

The Oxford-educated Fraser, 45, was considered aloof by his Liberal party rolleagues and didn't attain a ministerial post for the first half of his 20 years in Australian politics. But he rose rapidly thereafter and won the opposition leadership in 1975.

Whitlam, 59, led Labor to victory in 1972 after 23 years in opposition. He ended Australia's participation in the Vietnam war and declared foreign policy independence from the United States. He also instituted costly social measures including national health insurance and free universitty education.

In demonstrations Tuesday night, 3,000 Whitlam supporters marched in Melbourne, where five persons were arrested after fights broke out with police. Windows in the Liberal party headquarters were smashed.

Several thousand other Whitlam backers marched on Liberal party headquarters in Sydney. Similar demonstrations in Perth and Brisbane forced Liberal party offices to close their doors.

AP

Whitlam . . .sacked by governor general.

Kerr fired Whitlam under long dormant constitutional powers 28 days after the opposition-controlled Senate refused to pass Whitlam's 1975-76 budget. It was the first dismissal of a prime minister since the Australian Commonwealth was formed 75 years ago and the first time the Senate had refused to pass an appropriation act.

"This hasn't happened under the Westminster system in 200 years, since George III sacked Lord North," Whitlam said. The ex-prime minister said he had been unconstitutionally removed and promised if re-elected to ensure that no government would ever again be subject to dismissal by the queen's representative.

Fraser told a jammed news conference at Parliament House that his appointment meant "Australia will get a responsible government again." But he said he had agreed not to initiate any policy until elections determine who will head the government.

The business community, which has been urging an end to the Labor government for months, reacted with satisfaction. The Sydney Stock Exchange closed at a yearly high of 419.57 after a 17.32-point rise.

But hundreds of people outside Parliament House in Canberra shouted their support for Whittlam and booed Fraser. A can of beer was dumped on the automobile of one of Fraser's colleagues.

"They won't silence the outskirts of Parliament House even if the inside has been silenced for the next few weeks," Whitlam shouted from the steps.

At his own news conference, Whitlam said Australia could be without effective government for at least two months and without a parliament for more than three until a winner is determined under the country's complicated proportional voting system.

Whitlam warned that this could do serious damage to the already strained economy.

He predicted that he would win what will be the second Senate-forced election in two years. His term normally should run three years.

Tuesday's dramatic events followed in quick succession. Whitlam met with Fraser in midmorning, then went to the Labor party's parliamentary caucus to propose an election for half the Senate that could have resulted in a Labor majority in the upper house, which then would pass Whitlam's budget.

But when Whitlam later went to ask Kerr for permission to hold the half-Senate poll, the governor general withdrew Whitlam's commission as prime minister.

Kerr said with the government fast running out of money and public servants due to get their last paychecks later this month, Whitlam obviously was unable to govern because he couldn't get his money bills through Parliament.

Kerr then dissolved both houses of Parliament in the name of the queen and ordered the new elections. In response, the Senate quickly passed the budget.

Whitlam closed Parliament with the traditional declaration, "God save the Queen."

"Well may we say God save the queen, because nothing will save the governor general," Whitlam said angrily afterward.

Observers expect another close result in the upcoming elections and say the roles could be reversed — with Labor gaining control of the Senate and the conservative parties controlling the House.

Labor had a 65-61 margin in the just dissolved House, with one independent. The Senate contains 27 government members, 30 opposition senators and three independents.

Prince To Release Political Prisoners

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon is planning to free more than 1,000 political prisoners as one of his first acts after becoming Spain's king, a source near the prince reported Tuesday.

Juan Carlos will take power officially on the death of gravely ill Gen. Francisco Franco, whose latest complications point toward bronchial pneumonia.

The source said the prince also will back constitutional reform to establish a democratic government.

Both actions are expected to spark angry reaction from Spain's entrenched political right, but the 37-year-old prince reportedly feels the influence of Franco traditionalists will be limited when the general dies.

Juan Carlos has been advised he will face dangerous opposition from the left unless he grants the amnesty and changes fundamental laws under which Franco ruled Spain for the past 36 years.

"Juan Carlos will swear loyalty to those laws when he takes the oath. He has to under law," the source said. "But he will support a program to change them."

The source told The Associated Press that a general amnesty would not affect an estimated 250 prisoners convicted of terrorism.

Communists have estimated the number of political prisoners at 2,000 and say another 20,000 have been indicted and are awaiting trial. Government sources say both figures are exaggerated.

Political groups from center to left have demanded the release from prison of Spaniards serving 2-19 years for opposing the bfranco regime.

The move would be an explosive issue in the first days of a new regime, but Juan Carlos reportedly is convinced he can weather the political storm despite evidence the ultraright is gaining strength as rightist politicians tour the country and Franco's illness drags on.

Gas Search Invited

Washington (AP) — Rep. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said he has invited representatives of a natural gas corporation to search for possible natural gas deposits in South Dakota.

Folk Singer Donovan Hitches To Concert

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — British folk singer Donovan had to hitchhike more than 60 miles to get to the first stop on his concert tour of Australia.

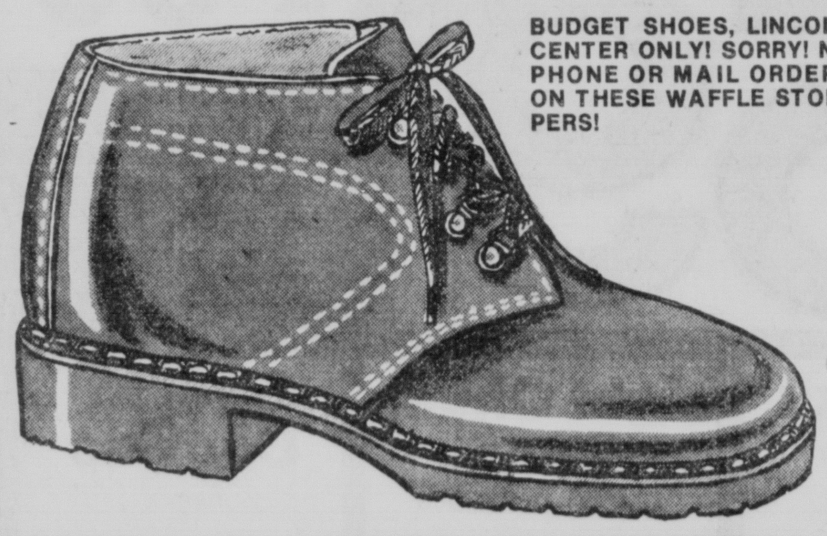

His manager's car was disabled in an accident en route to Newcastle, 100 miles north of Syndey. Donovan wasn't hurt, and stepped out to the curb and hitched a ride the rest of the way to Newcastle. He arrived 35 minutes late for his Sunday concert.

Home Health Care Advocated

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

The convalescent, those with prolonged or chronic or terminal illnesses, even the elderly are contributing to the space crunch in hospitals and nursing homes, a consumer affairs specialist said Tuesday.

Much of that space is taken up unnecessarily, contended Marie Burbidge, consumer affairs director for Homemakers, the nation's largest home and health care delivery service.

"I believe people are being maintained in hospitals at least one, two, up to four days longer than they need," Mrs. Burbidge told members of the Nebraska Welfare Association.

She put much of the blame for that on lack of adequate home health care, a service she called the wave of the future. It provides an alternative to hospital care and its high cost for patients who could just as well be bedridden at home.

Surveys have shown that patients convalesce or rest more contentedly in the familiar surroundings of home, Mrs. Burbidge said.

"The biggest problem today" for home health care agencies "is the need for 300,000 more nurse aides" who are the primary deliverers of home health care services, she said.

"The home health care nurse aide goes into the home to look after the medical needs of the patient, but also "promotes good health, good nutrition and stimulates interests" of the homebound.

That person also may be involved in meal preparation, home cleaning, shopping, even serve as "substitute mother" for children, pointed out the former director of the Head Start Program in Kalamazoo, Mich., and a consumer activist whose interests focus on child development, day care and community health care.

The nurse aide in the home may just sit and read to the patient or take him or her to the park, Mrs. Burbidge said.

"Home health care has a lot of advantages," she said, not the least of which is "developing a one-to-one relationship" with the patient.

All told, the home health aide "can do all the things really necessary to maintain people in their home," she said.

Home health care, while previously written out of most insurance policies, may be covered by Medicare or Medicaid — depending on the individual state'slicensing laws — governmental programs or federal social services funds, she said.

However, two states — New York and Arizona — now require home health care benefits to be covered by insurance policies. In addition, the wording of national health insurance bills will provide for home health care, Mrs. Burbidge said.

The latter, she said, may be helpful in upgrading the home health care industry by setting national standards for the home nurse aides.

While there are 200,000 nurse aides certified in the nation, standards vary from state to state, she said. In one state, for example, nurse aides can be certified with 12 hours of training, she said.

Council For Plan To Reroute Fines

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The City Council is endorsing a proposed constitutional amendment which would rechannel municipal court fines from the school districts to city governments.

The money collected from fines imposed by municipal court judges is earmarked for local school districts' use.

Members of the Nebraska League of Municipalities are considering favoring a change in that procedure so that the money will go to local governments instead. The league asked the City Council to take a position on the proposed amendment, which would need voter approval.

Lincoln collected $5,000 in license fees last year. City Atty. Charles Humble said "this isn't much of a moneymaker," since the revenues collected barely cover administrative costs.

For instance, for each $1 dollar parking fine collected, it costs 95 cents to process that fine.

City Finance Director Jim Mallon reported that Lincoln collected $381,000 during the 1974-75 fiscal year to cover city expenses in operating the courts and collecting the fines. Municipal court fines collected during that year totaled around $528,000.

Council members voiced some reservations about supporting a change in the system. They argued if the school districts lost the revenues, the school system will end up levying higher taxes to make up the difference. In the end, the taxpayer still will end up paying the bill, the lawmakers said.

Mayor Helen Boosalis said she hasn't taken a position on the proposed amendment since she is favoring another proposal which also could take money away from the school districts.

The mayor is supporting a proposed city charter change which would reroute almost $1 million in the Lincoln Electric System's in-lieu-of-tax payment.

The charter requires that LES divide 5% of its gross revenues among the school district, city and county. Last year Lincoln received 28% of the total LES payment, which amounted to $972,328.

Mayor Boosalis is proposing the entire in-lieu-of-tax payment be transfered solely to City Hall, since LES is a municipal utility.

The council discussed the proposed constitutional amendment as a part of the city's legislative program.

Workshop Slated

The Lincoln Public Schools will hold a cultural awareness workshop for all interested parents at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 20 in Randolph School, 1024 S. 37th. Loreta Myles, director of the school district programs, will preside.

Legislator May Call Hearings On Veterans' Loans

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The chairman of the Legislature's Government, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee said Tuesday he may schedule hearings on the administration of the state's $150,000 loan program for Vietnam veterans.

The Star reported last week that state auditors have questioned the program, noting that only $13,000 had been loaned to veterans while $10,000 was spent to administer it.

Auditors also found the department lacked a clear criteria for determining who received state loans.

Sen. Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia, committee chairman, said Tuesday, "I haven't read the audit yet. We will meet next week sometime to look into it."

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, a Vietnam veteran himself, said he has also asked state auditors for a report on the program.

In a related development, Jim Smith, director of the federal Veterans Administration in Lincoln, said Tuesday a statement made by a state veterans official concerning federal veterans loans was false.

J. Harold Pine, deputy director of the State Department of Veterans Affairs, had said more veterans may be seeking loans from the federal government because they are not required to show need for a federal loan.

Smith said veterans seeking federal loans are required to demonstrate need. Roughly one-third of the applicants for federal loans are refused, many on the basis of need, he said. VA student loans were made to 180 veterans last year, Smith said; the average loan was $500.

He also noted that the VA charges 8% interest on the loans, while the state loan program only charges 5% interest.

The audit said that based on application information veterans with higher incomes and net worth were given loans from the Deprtment of Veterans Affairs while veterans with little or no assets were denied.

State Auditor Ray A.C. Johnson's staff concluded, "Based on the information contained on the application, we cannot distinguish the absences of need for those loans denied and the presence of need for those loans approved."

Asked about the situation, Pine said he assumed some other factor not listed on the application determined why certain veterans were turned down.

The 1973 Legislature appropriated $150,000 for the loan program; auditors said only $13,000 in actual loans were made while the balance lapsed into the state general fund.

Auditors also questioned the high administration costs (77 cents for every dollar loaned) and procedures for computing interest on loans when due.

They noted the cost of administering the loan over its life could exceed the return if the individual chose to make minimum monthly payments.

They Didn't Want To Leave

It was their first day of school and they didn't want to go home. So they came back.

Five Vietnamese brothers and sisters enrolled in Randolph School Tuesday morning — six days after their arrival in Lincoln with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bang Van, and two younger siblings. The family is being sponsored by the Immanuel Lutheran Church.

Principal Marlan Kaufman and eight school staff members arrived at the Bang Van home, at 881 S. 40, early Tuesday morning to acquaint themselves with the youngsters and transport them to school.

The five, ranging in age from 5 to 14, speak no English, so an interpreter was on hand.

They spent two hours at school learning where their rooms were and adding about a dozen words of English to their vocabularies. Then Kaufman walked them all home.

Much to the principal's surprise, the five "just appeared at the door" of the school two hours later. "I'm amazed they didn't get lost," Kaufman said.

Hardly able to turn the wide-eyed and anxious youngsters away, Kaufman let them settle into their classrooms.

It seems no gradual adjustment is in order for this group; they'll begin full-day classes at once.

Scottsbluff Wants To Put Zoo Monkeys In UP Depot

Scottsbluff (AP) — The City of Scottsbluff is approaching the Union Pacific Railroad with a proposal to turn the railroad's depot at Lyman into a home for Scottsbluff's zoo monkeys.

The UP will formally close the Lyman depot Saturday.

Scottsbluff city officials feel the depot can be used for the needed monkey house, a concessions and waiting room area, plus a zoo attendant's apartment, for about one-half what they have budgeted to spend for such a facility.

The City of Scottsbluff has Riverside Zoo, but under new federal regulations, the city will have to get rid of the monkeys over the next several years, or provide suitable quarters.

The city budgeted $55,000 for this purpose this year, but bids received in two lettings were described as too high.

The City Council voted to contact the railroad on the request.

City officials said they plan to retain the waiting room and agent's office in as near as possible the existing condition because of historical value.

Faculty Senate: Teachers Can't Cut Classes

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

University of Nebraska-Lincoln teachers must show up for class or report why they're absent, the UNL Faculty Senate decided unanimously Thursday.

The group also heard a report listing objections to more stringent tenure rules, which NU Regents will consider putting into effect Saturday.

Lincoln Regent Ed Schwartzkopf last month cited reports of numerous UNL faculty who allegedly skip classes for weeks at a time, and the board agreed the senate should police its ranks to improve the situation.

Faculty approved the resolution offered by the senate professional conduct committee, to set procedures under the academic responsibility section of Regents' Bylaws.

In emergency situations, such as illness or death in the family, the resolution requires each faculty member to obtain a substitute instructor if possible and to notify students.

For absences associated with university business, such as attending professional meetings, faculty must find substitutes, provide alternate assignments or offer make-up classes approved by department chairman and their students.

"In all instances where a class is not met at the scheduled time, a report shall be made by the faculty member involved to the department chairman," the measure states, "identifying the class, the reason (it) was not met and the arrangements for class make-up."

Department chairmen are directed to keep the absence reports for a year. Deviating from officially scheduled class times must have academic supervisers' and students' approval.

Prof. Donald Haack, chairman of the professional conduct committee, said the only "grave situation" would result from faculty who fake emergency or UNL business absences.

Faculty Senate President Franklin Eldridge said abuses he's aware of usually involve young staff members, not tenured faculty.

"I can't really tell you how severe the problem is," Dr. Haack responded to a faculty member's question, nor has anyone "pinned it down for me." Eldridge guessed absences are negligible.

There's no reciprocal requirement for faculty notification by students for their absences, he said, but, "When a student fails to get to class, it is probably a great inconvenience only to himself."

Questioned about the value of the absence procedures when the senate is already on record in support of complying, Haack replied that Regents' Bylaws have no provision for record-keeping on class absences. That will now allow faculty to "protect ourselves" from unwarranted charges, he said.

On the tenure issue, the Faculty Senate academic freedom and tenure committee reported it "believes that a rigid seven-year rule (before awarding tenure) could work to lower quality of the faculty."

And a similarly "rigid four-year rule (for UNL eligibility) for persons previously holding tenure elsewhere would make recruitment of highly qualified senior faculty difficult, if not impossible," the report said.

The committee noted those provisions, as well as the definition of probationary period and notice requirement violate, American Association of University Professors standards.

Further, any campus tenure review committee advising top NU administrators should be at the UNL college or school level, the report said. That would avoid diffusing responsibility for tenure decisions, and retain current methods that idenfity who makes them.

The report also recommends a campus advisory committee should represent faculty and not be appointed by an NU administrator.

NU Vice President Steve Sample, who prepared the study on tenure data for the regents, recommended strict enforcement of the full probationary period and stringent review procedures.

The regents academic affairs committee will act on Sample's and faculty proposals at 9 a.m. Saturday, in Regents Hall, at 3835 Holdrege. The full board will ratify them in December after they've been implemented to meet deadlines.

2,000 Names On Petitions In Call For Grand Jury

About 2,000 signatures have been gathered on petitions for a grand jury investigation into the shooting of two citizens this year by law enforcement officers.

The number of signatures requiring that the grand jury be called is 4,828.

The petition drive began after Lancaster County Att. Ron Lahners decided not to file charges against a deputy sheriff who shot Sherdell Lewis through the front storm door of his home during a drug raid.

Elijah Childers was killed on Feb. 1, when officers went to his home to question him about a knifing earlier that evening in a tavern. Police said he charged from his doorway with a paring knife in his hand.

The number of signatures requiring Lancaster district judges to call a grand jury is determined under a state law which sets it at 10% of the number of votes cast for governor in the law election.

Petitions have been circulated since Oct. 13. According to state law the signatures must have been gathered within 90 days of the time they are filed with the clerk of the district court.

If the petition drive is successful, it will be the first grand jury called in Lancaster County since 1922.

Firestone Co. Recalls Tires

Akron, Ohio (AP) — A recall of about 800 Deluxe Champion Sup-R-Belt tires for light trucks has been announced by Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

The blackwall tires, size L78-15, have insufficient ply material in the bead area and could break with rapid loss of air, Firestone said.

Owners were advised to contact a Firestone dealership to determine whether their tires bear the affected serial numbers.

Selecting a Turkey . . . What to Look For

When November rolls around we begin to look forward to the biggest food feast day of the year, Thanksgiving. Turkey is the traditional center of that feast, even though it's a good choice anytime.

When starting your holiday menu plans, consider what size turkey to choose. The highest proportion of meat to bone will be on the larger birds. For big family meals or buffets, a large tom turkey, about 20 lbs. or so may be the answer. Hens weighing 12-16 lbs. are about right for smaller groups. (Or have a larger bird cut in half—freeze one half for later. Most butchers will do this for you . . .)

How many servings can you plan per turkey? When selecting a turkey 12 lbs. or under, allow ¾-1 lb. per serving. For medium sized birds over 12 lbs. allow ½-¾ lb. per person. Correct cooking and carving can increase the number of servings somewhat.

When properly defrosted, a fresh-frozen turkey seems so fresh even many experts cannot tell if it was frozen. To thaw—leave the turkey in the unopened plastic bag and use one of the following methods: 1. No hurry—leave in the refrigerator 3-4 days. 2. Faster—place turkey in a brown grocery bag—or wrap in several thicknesses of newspaper and leave at room temperature one hour per pound. Never leave an unwrapped, or unbagged, turkey at room temperature for long periods of time. 3. Fastest—cover with cold water, changing the water occasionally to keep cold, 30 minutes per pound. Refrigerate or cook as soon as thawed. Refreezing is not recommended.

Aussies Protest Ouster Of Prime Minister

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Demonstrators marched in major cities and seamen and dockworkers struck Australia's waterfronts Tuesday in protest against the dismissal of Prime Minister Gough Whitlam's Labor government. But the business community was buoyed by the ouster.

Whitlam promised an epic struggle for "democracy as we have known it" following his removal in a budgetary crisis by Gov. Gen. Sir John Kerr, Queen Elizabeth II's representative in Australia.

Kerr appointed Malcolm Fraser, a wealthy farmer and leader of the conservative Liberal-Country party coalition, as caretaker prime minister pending a general election expected Dec. 13.

The Oxford-educated Fraser, 45, was considered aloof by his Liberal party colleagues and didn't attain a ministerial post for the first half of his 20 years in Australian politics. But he rose rapidly thereafter and won the opposition leadership in 1975.

Whitlam, 59, led Labor to victory in 1972 after 23 years in opposition. He ended Australia's participation in the Vietnam war and declared foreign policy independence from the United States. He also instituted costly social measures including national health insurance and free universitty education.

In demonstrations Tuesday night, 3,000 Whitlam supporters marched in Melbourne, where five persons were arrested after fights broke out with police. Windows in the Liberal party headquarters were smashed.

Several thousand other Whitlam backers marched on Liberal party headquarters in Sydney. Similar demonstrations in Perth and Brisbane forced Liberal party offices to close their doors.

Whitlam . . .sacked by governor general.

Kerr fired Whitlam under long dormant constitutional powers 28 days after the opposition-controlled Senate refused to pass Whitlam's 1975-76 budget. It was the first dismissal of a prime minister since the Australian Commonwealth was formed 75 years ago and the first time the Senate had refused to pass an appropriation act.

"This hasn't happened under the Westminster system in 200 years, since George III sacked Lord North," Whitlam said. The ex-prime minister said he had been unconstitutionally removed and promised if re-elected to ensure that no government would ever again be subject to dismissal by the queen's representative.

Fraser told a jammed news conference at Parliament House that his appointment meant "Australia will get a responsible government again." But he said he had agreed not to initiate any policy until elections determine who will head the government.

The business community, which has been urging an end to the Labor government for months, reacted with satisfaction. The Sydney Stock Exchange closed at a yearly high of 419.57 after a 17.32-point rise.

But hundreds of people outside Parliament House in Canberra shouted their support for Whittlam and booed Fraser. A can of beer was dumped on the automobile of one of Fraser's colleagues.

"They won't silence the outskirts of Parliament House even if the inside has been silenced for the next few weeks," Whitlam shouted from the steps.

At his own news conference, Whitlam said Australia could be without effective government for at least two months and without a parliament for more than three until a winner is determined under the country's complicated proportional voting system.

Whitlam warned that this could do serious damage to the already strained economy.

He predicted that he would win what will be the second Senate-forced election in two years. His term normally should run three years.

Tuesday's dramatic events followed in quick succession. Whitlam met with Fraser in midmorning, then went to the Labor party's parliamentary caucus to propose an election for half the Senate that could have resulted in a Labor majority in the upper house, which then would pass Whitlam's budget.

But when Whitlam later went to ask Kerr for permission to hold the half-Senate poll, the governor general withdrew Whitlam's commission as prime minister.

Kerr said with the government fast running out of money and public servants due to get their last paychecks later this month, Whitlam obviously was unable to govern because he couldn't get his money bills through Parliament.

Kerr then dissolved both houses of Parliament in the name of the queen and ordered the new elections. In response, the Senate quickly passed the budget.

Whitlam closed Parliament with the traditional declaration, "God save the Queen."

"Well may we say God save the queen, because nothing will save the governor general," Whitlam said angrily afterward.

Observers expect another close result in the upcoming elections and say the roles could be reversed — with Labor gaining control of the Senate and the conservative parties controlling the House.

Labor had a 65-61 margin in the just dissolved House, with one independent. The Senate contains 27 government members, 30 opposition senators and three independents.

Prince To Release Political Prisoners

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon is planning to free more than 1,000 political prisoners as one of his first acts after becoming Spain's king, a source near the prince reported Tuesday.

Juan Carlos will take power officially on the death of gravely ill Gen. Francisco Franco, whose latest complications point toward bronchial pneumonia.

The source said the prince also will back constitutional reform to establish a democratic government.

Both actions are expected to spark angry reaction from Spain's entrenched political right, but the 37-year-old prince reportedly feels the influence of Franco traditionalists will be limited when the general dies

Juan Carlos has been advised he will face dangerous opposition from the left unless he grants the amnesty and changes fundamental laws under which Franco ruled Spain for the past 36 years.

"Juan Carlos will swear loyalty to those laws when he takes the oath. He has to under law," the source said. "But he will support a program to change them."

The source told The Associated Press that a general amnesty would not affect an estimated 250 prisoners convicted of terrorism.

Communists have estimated the number of political prisoners at 2,000 and say another 20,000 have been indicted and are awaiting trial. Government sources say both figures are exaggerated.

Political groups from center to left have demanded the release from prison of Spaniards serving 2-19 years for opposing the Franco regime.

The move would be an explosive issue in the first days of a new regime, but Juan Carlos reportedly is convinced he can weather the political storm despite evidence the ultraright is gaining strength as rightist politicians tour the country and Franco's illness drags on.

Folk Singer Donovan Hitches To Concert

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — British folk singer Donovan had to hitchhike more than 60 miles to get to the first stop on his concert tour of Australia.

His manager's car was disabled in an accident en route to Newcastle, 100 miles north of Syndey. Donovan wasn't hurt, and stepped out to the curb and hitched a ride the rest of the way to Newcastle. He arrived 35 minutes late for his Sunday concert.

Fiddlers Endangered Species?

Story by
J. L. Schmidt

An art of nearly 5,000 years is facing extinction.

The art? Fiddling. The prognosticators? Old-time fiddlers.

"Therein lies part of the problem," according to one Lincoln fiddling enthusiast.

"Eleven years ago there were a great number of fiddlers active across Nebraska and from the surrounding states participating in the Nebraska Old-time Fiddlers activities," said fiddling De DeRyke, head of the group and a fiddle instructor.

"Now many are gone, or on their last legs waiting for the gates of Fiddler's Green to open for them," she added.

Many of the able fiddlers are so old that someone has to drive them to gatherings like the one held recently at Miss DeRyke's home in Havelock, 6141 Morrill Ave.

But the lack of mobility is apparent only in their travel, as they never seem short of foot-stomping, which is in some cases reduced to toe-tapping, during the sessions which last for hours on end.

'Not Commercialized'

"These people are playing the real old style, that which has been passed down by individual instruction," Miss DeRyke said. "It's not the commercialized or immitative styles which we've been forced to accept by the mass communications media."

The fact that the music is traditional is evident in the obvious lack of sheet music, the sometime inability of the players to even remember the name of the song they're playing, and the peaceful smiles of the spectators.

Miss DeRyke's speech glimmers with nostalgia as she talks of the old blind man and others who taught her "the old style." It speaks a sad note of concern, though, as she notes the often obvious failing spirits of some of the players.

Fiddlers have a tradition of gathering at places like the DeRykes. It all started back when "canned" music became popular for dances and the fiddler was without the job that he had held so prestigiously in many a small community.

Dates To 3,000 B.C.

Fiddling, according to a French acoustical engineer who researched the subject, dates back to the year 3,000 B.C. when a group in India was playing an instrument similar to the modern day fiddle, or violin, depending on who's playing what kind of music on the thing.

The music came to this country with the early settlers, a fact that can be proven by any musicologist who can see the similarities in many of the tunes with those of the Troubadors of the 11th and 12th Century.

Somewhere along the way, fiddling became linked with the devil, or some such evil spirit, and churches banned the use of the instruments in their buildings.

"Now," says Miss DeRyke, "we are putting on quite a few concerts and demonstrations for church groups."

This "spell" carried on into the late Forties and early Fifties in the Ozark regions of this country as fiddlers were often forced to keep their instruments hidden for fear of having them confiscated and destroyed.

Some of this mysticism might be attributed to Nicolo Paganini, according to Miss DeRyke. He was an Italian violinist and composer whose works played a prominent part in the shaping of fiddling music. "He was also epileptic and given to fits," she said, noting that it was these fits which were to have overcome everyone who played.

Fiddling managed to fight off the odds and exist as a popular form of musical expression, mostly because of the dedication of the old-timers.

"We need to get interested youngsters exposed to these grand old fiddlers before they die or lose their ability to pass on the art," Miss DeRyke said.

"Many of these fiddlers would like to see the art preserved and would gladly impart their knowledge to others," she added.

Several Lincoln groups are composed of younger persons who have taken to the picking and fiddling of the older generations, and they often show up at gatherings with their predecessors.

"It's fun for all ages," said Miss DeRyke, noting that her youngest pupil is 4-year-old, Natasha Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Weston Crawford, 2808 Jefferson. She and her older brother are both students who may help to preserve the art.

"If we do not get the younger folks to these old timers, we shall be losing a great deal of our folk heritage," said Miss DeRyke.

Home Health Care Advocated

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

The convalescent, those with prolonged or chronic or terminal illnesses, even the elderly are contributing to the space crunch in hospitals and nursing homes, a consumer affairs specialist said Tuesday.

Much of that space is taken up unnecessarily, contended Marie Burbidge, consumer affairs director for Homemakers, the nation's largest home and health care delivery service.

"I believe people are being maintained in hospitals at least one, two, up to four days longer than they need," Mrs. Burbidge told members of the Nebraska Welfare Association.

She put much of the blame for that on lack of adequate home health care, a service she called the wave of the future. It provides an alternative to hospital care and its high cost for patients who could just as well be bedridden at home.

Surveys have shown that patients convalesce or rest more contentedly in the familiar surroundings of home, Mrs. Burbidge said.

"The biggest problem today" for home health care agencies "is the need for 300,000 more nurse aides" who are the primary deliverers of home health care services, she said.

"The home health care nurse aide goes into the home to look after the medical needs of the patient, but also "promotes good health, good nutrition and stimulates interests" of the homebound.

That person also may be involved in meal preparation, home cleaning, shopping, even serve as "substitute mother" for children, pointed out the former director of the Head Start Program in Kalamazoo, Mich., and a consumer activist whose interests focus on child development, day care and community health care.

The nurse aide in the home may just sit and read to the patient or take him or her to the park, Mrs. Burbidge said.

"Home health care has a lot of advantages," she said, not the least of which is "developing a one-to-one relationship" with the patient.

All told, the home health aide "can do all the things really necessary to maintain people in their home," she said.

Home health care, while previously written out of most insurance policies, may be covered by Medicare or Medicaid — depending on the individual state'slicensing laws — governmental programs or federal social services funds, she said.

However, two states — New York and Arizona — now require home health care benefits to be covered by insurance policies. In addition, the wording of national health insurance bills will provide for home health care, Mrs. Burbidge said.

The latter, she said, may be helpful in upgrading the home health care industry by setting national standards for the home nurse aides.

While there are 200,000 nurse aides certified in the nation, standards vary from state to state, she said. In one state, for example, nurse aides can be certified with 12 hours of training, she said.

Council For Plan To Reroute Fines

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The City Council is endorsing a proposed constitutional amendment which would rechannel municipal court fines from the school districts to city governments.

The money collected from fines imposed by municipal court judges is earmarked for local school districts' use.

Members of the Nebraska League of Municipalities are considering favoring a change in that procedure so that the money will go to local governments instead. The league asked the City Council to take a position on the proposed amendment, which would need voter approval.

Lincoln collected $5,000 in license fees last year. City Atty. Charles Humble said "this isn't much of a moneymaker," since the revenues collected barely cover administrative costs.

For instance, for each $1 dollar parking fine collected, it costs 95 cents to process that fine

City Finance Director Jim Mallon reported that Lincoln collected $381,000 during the 1974-75 fiscal year to cover city expenses in operating the courts and collecting the fines. Municipal court fines collected during that year totaled around $528,000.

Council members voiced some reservations about supporting a change in the system. They argued if the school districts lost the revenues, the school system will end up levying higher taxes to make up the difference. In the end, the taxpayer still will end up paying the bill, the lawmakers said.

Mayor Helen Boosalis said she hasn't taken a position on the proposed amendment since she is favoring another proposal which also could take money away from the school districts.

The mayor is supporting a proposed city charter change which would reroute almost $1 million in the Lincoln Electric System's in-lieu-of-tax payment.

The charter requires that LES divide 5% of its gross revenues among the school district, city and county. Last year Lincoln received 28% of the total LES payment, which amounted to $972,328.

Mayor Boosalis is proposing the entire in-lieu-of-tax payment be transfered solely to City Hall, since LES is a municipal utility

The council discussed the proposed constitutional amendment as a part of the city's legislative program.

Workshop Slated

The Lincoln Public Schools will hold a cultural awareness workshop for all interested parents at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 20 in Randolph School, 1024 S. 37th Loreta Myles, director of the school district programs, will preside.

Legislator May Call Hearings On Veterans' Loans

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The chairman of the Legislature's Government, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee said Tuesday he may schedule hearings on the administration of the state's $150,000 loan program for Vietnam veterans.

The Star reported last week that state auditors have questioned the program, noting that only $13,000 had been loaned to veterans while $10,000 was spent to administer it.

Auditors also found the department lacked a clear criteria for determining who received state loans.

Sen. Dennis Rasmussen of Scotia, committee chairman, said Tuesday, "I haven't read the audit yet. We will meet next week sometime to look into it."

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, a Vietnam veteran himself, said he has also asked state auditors for a report on the program.

In a related development, Jim Smith, director of the federal Veterans Administration in Lincoln, said Tuesday a statement made by a state veterans official concerning federal veterans loans was false.

J. Harold Pine, deputy director of the State Department of Veterans Affairs, had said more veterans may be seeking loans from the federal government because they are not required to show need for a federal loan.

Smith said veterans seeking federal loans are required to demonstrate need. Roughly one-third of the applicants for federal loans are refused, many on the basis of need, he said. VA student loans were made to 180 veterans last year, Smith said; the average loan was $500.

He also noted that the VA charges 8% interest on the loans, while the state loan program only charges 5% interest.

The audit said that based on application information veterans with higher incomes and net worth were given loans from the Deprtment of Veterans Affairs while veterans with little or no assets were denied.

State Auditor Ray A.C. Johnson's staff concluded, "Based on the information contained on the application, we cannot distinguish the absences of need for those loans denied and the presence of need for those loans approved."

Asked about the situation, Pine said he assumed some other factor not listed on the application determined why certain veterans were turned down.

The 1973 Legislature appropriated $150,000 for the loan program; auditors said only $13,000 in actual loans were made while the balance lapsed into the state general fund.

Auditors also questioned the high administration costs (77 cents for every dollar loaned) and procedures for computing interest on loans when due.

They noted the cost of administering the loan over its life could exceed the return if the individual chose to make minimum monthly payments.

They Didn't Want To Leave

It was their first day of school and they didn't want to go home. So they came back.

Five Vietnamese brothers and sisters enrolled in Randolph School Tuesday morning — six days after their arrival in Lincoln with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bang Van, and two younger siblings. The family is being sponsored by the Immanuel Lutheran Church.

Principal Marlan Kaufman and eight school staff members arrived at the Bang Van home, at 881 S. 40, early Tuesday morning to acquaint themselves with the youngsters and transport them to school.

The five, ranging in age from 5 to 14, speak no English, so an interpreter was on hand.

They spent two hours at school learning where their rooms were and adding about a dozen words of English to their vocabularies. Then Kaufman walked them all home.

Much to the principal's surprise, the five "just appeared at the door" of the school two hours later. "I'm amazed they didn't get lost," Kaufman said.

Hardly able to turn the wide-eyed and anxious youngsters away, Kaufman let them settle into their classrooms.

It seems no gradual adjustment is in order for this group; they'll begin full-day classes at once.

Scottsbluff Wants To Put Zoo Monkeys In UP Depot

Scottsbluff (AP) — The City of Scottsbluff is approaching the Union Pacific Railroad with a proposal to turn the railroad's depot at Lyman into a home for Scottsbluff's zoo monkeys.

The UP will formally close the Lyman depot Saturday.

Scottsbluff city officials feel the depot can be used for the needed monkey house, a concessions and waiting room area, plus a zoo attendant's apartment, for about one-half what they have budgeted to spend for such a facility.

The City of Scottsbluff has Riverside Zoo, but under new federal regulations, the city will have to get rid of the monkeys over the next several years, or provide suitable quarters.

The city budgeted $55,000 for this purpose this year, but bids received in two lettings were described as too high.

The City Council voted to contact the railroad on the request.

City officials said they plan to retain the waiting room and agent's office in as near as possible the existing condition because of historical value.

Faculty Senate: Teachers Can't Cut Classes

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

University of Nebraska-Lincoln teachers must show up for class or report why they're absent, the UNL Faculty Senate decided unanimously Thursday.

The group also heard a report listing objections to more stringent tenure rules, which NU Regents will consider putting into effect Saturday.

Lincoln Regent Ed Schwartzkopf last month cited reports of numerous UNL faculty who allegedly skip classes for weeks at a time, and the board agreed the senate should police its ranks to improve the situation.

Faculty approved the resolution offered by the senate professional conduct committee, to set procedures under the academic responsibility section of Regents' Bylaws.

In emergency situations, such as illness or death in the family, the resolution requires each faculty member to obtain a substitute instructor if possible and to notify students.

For absences associated with university business, such as attending professional meetings, faculty must find substitutes, provide alternate assignments or offer make-up classes approved by department chairman and their students.

"In all instances where a class is not met at the scheduled time, a report shall be made by the faculty member involved to the department chairman," the measure states, "identifying the class, the reason (it) was not met and the arrangements for class make-up."

Department chairmen are directed to keep the absence reports for a year. Deviating from officially scheduled class times must have academic supervisers' and students' approval.

Prof. Donald Haack, chairman of the professional conduct committee, said the only "grave situation" would result from faculty who fake emergency or UNL business absences.

Faculty Senate President Franklin Eldridge said abuses he's aware of usually involve young staff members, not tenured faculty.

"I can't really tell you how severe the problem is," Dr. Haack responded to a faculty member's question, nor has anyone "pinned it down for me." Eldridge guessed absences are negligible.

There's no reciprocal requirement for faculty notification by students for their absences, he said, but, "When a student fails to get to class, it is probably a great inconvenience only to himself."

Questioned about the value of the absence procedures when the senate is already on record in support of complying, Haack replied that Regents' Bylaws have no provision for record-keeping on class absences. That will now allow faculty to "protect ourselves" from unwarranted charges, he said.

On the tenure issue, the Faculty Senate academic freedom and tenure committee reported it "believes that a rigid seven-year rule (before awarding tenure) could work to lower quality of the faculty."

And a similarly "rigid four-year rule (for UNL eligibility) for persons previously holding tenure elsewhere would make recruitment of highly qualified senior faculty difficult, if not impossible," the report said.

The committee noted those provisions, as well as the definition of probationary period and notice requirement violate, American Association of University Professors standards.

Further, any campus tenure review committee advising top NU administrators should be at the UNL college or school level, the report said. That would avoid diffusing responsibility for tenure decisions, and retain current methods that idenfity who makes them.

The report also recommends a campus advisory committee should represent faculty and not be appointed by an NU administrator.

NU Vice President Steve Sample, who prepared the study on tenure data for the regents, recommended strict enforcement of the full probationary period and stringent review procedures.

The regents academic affairs committee will act on Sample's and faculty proposals at 9 a.m. Saturday, in Regents Hall, at 3835 Holdrege. The full board will ratify them in December after they've been implemented to meet deadlines.

2,000 Names On Petitions In Call For Grand Jury

About 2,000 signatures have been gathered on petitions for a grand jury investigation into the shooting of two citizens this year by law enforcement officers.

The number of signatures requiring that the grand jury be called is 4,828.

The petition drive began after Lancaster County Att. Ron Lahners decided not to file charges against a deputy sheriff who shot Sherdell Lewis through the front storm door of his home during a drug raid.

Elijah Childers was killed on Feb. 1, when officers went to his home to question him about a knifing earlier that evening in a tavern. Police said he charged from his doorway with a paring knife in his hand.

The number of signatures requiring Lancaster district judges to call a grand jury is determined under a state law which sets it at 10% of the number of votes cast for governor in the law election.

Petitions have been circulated since Oct. 13. According to state law the signatures must have been gathered within 90 days of the time they are filed with the clerk of the district court.

If the petition drive is successful, it will be the first grand jury called in Lancaster County since 1922.

Firestone Co. Recalls Tires

Akron, Ohio (AP) — A recall of about 800 Deluxe Champion Cup-R-Belt tires for light trucks has been announced by Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

The blackwall tires, size L78-15, have insufficient ply material in the bead area and could break with rapid loss of air, Firestone said.

Owners were advised to contact a Firestone dealership to determine whether their tires bear the affected serial numbers.

Center Trains Family Practice Doctors

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

When Dr. John C. Finegan gave up his private medical practice of 20 years, he didn't sell his examination tables, his stethoscopes, his blood pressure gauges.

Nor did he turn his back on general practice.

Although satisfied that he was serving his patients adequately, Finegan faced up to a gnawing concern: that he was not training someone to follow in his footsteps in general practice, a field whose supply wasn't, and isn't, meeting demand in this age of specialization.

As the director of Lincoln's Family Practice Center, Finegan is training his replacement — and then some.

Young physicians fresh out of medical school are using the examination tables, stethoscopes, blood pressure gauges removed from Finegan's old offices to get more experience before stepping into practices of their own.

Family Medicine

They make up the first class enrolled in the Family Medicine Residency Program, a postgraduate education program leading to certification in family practice.

The new program, sponsored by the Lincoln Medical Educational Foundation and affiliated with the University of Nebraska College of Medicine, is designed to meet Nebraska's need for more general, or family, practice doctors.

According to a recent survey, a significant number of Nebraska physicians will retire in the next decade; nearly one-fifth of the 271 doctors in the Lincoln area will need to be replaced in that time.

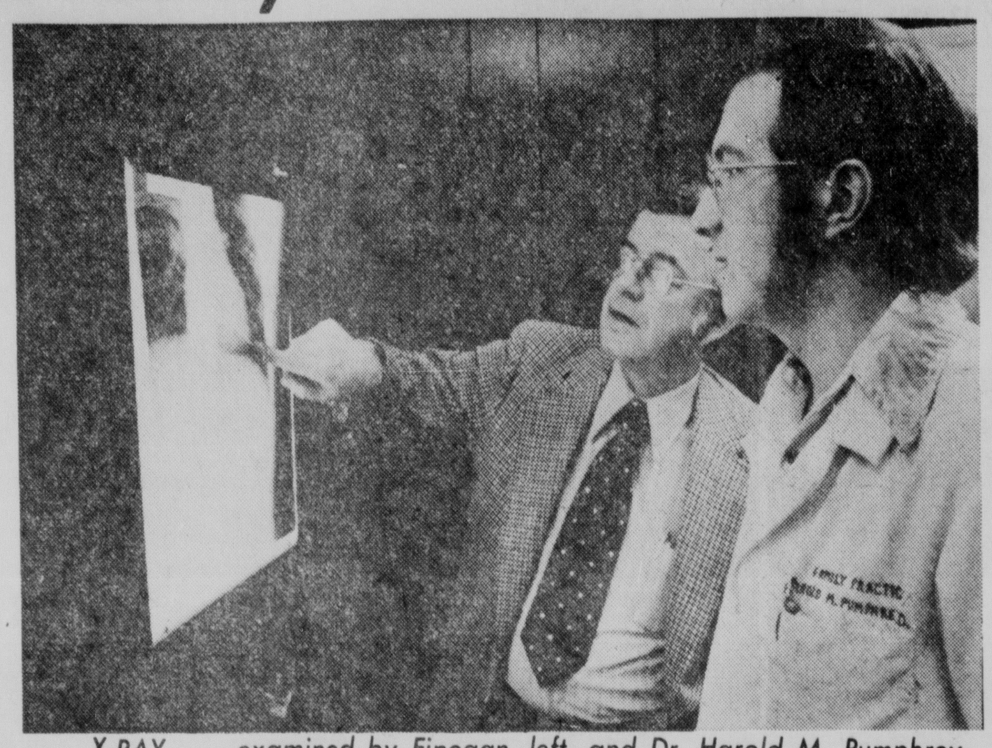

And, with the elimination of internship requirements before a medical school graduate could step into a practice, Lincoln was finding it increasingly difficult to attract young physicians, Finegan said.

Backed By Grant

As a result, the Lincoln Medical Educational Foundation, a coalition of hospital administrators and physicians, settled on the Family Medicine Residency Program. Setting up the clinic was accomplished with a sizeable grant from the Lincoln Foundation.

Six young physicians, one in his second year of residency, currently are enrolled. Eventually, 15 residents will be enrolled, five in each year of the three-year program.

They are training to be "people doctors" or family practice physicians, similar to the old general practitioner, but "more highly qualified," Finegan said. While the general practitioners of yesterday had one year of internship following medical school, the prospective family practitioners in Lincoln's residency program will have three years of practice before striking out on their own.

Family practice is "a relatively new concept," Finegan said, explaining that certification in that area was not offered until 1970.

Physicians in that field are "people who take care of people . . . rather than sick stomachs or sick eyeballs," he said.

They specialize in not specializing, he said.

Dr. Mark Allison, first-year resident in the program, spends one afternoon a week at the Family Practice Center, 525 N. 48th St. His patients come in with sore throats, hurt fingers, the flu, for prenatal examinations, physical examinations, minor surgery.

Allison performs the examinations under supervision; the rest of his time is spent practicing at hospitals or in other physicians' offices, concentrating in one area for two months, then moving on to another. He also participates in seminars conducted by private Lincoln physicians.

Allison, graduate of the NU Medical College, said he decided on family practice because it is "something that gives you the opportunity to be involved in all aspects of medicine . . . you do a little bit of everything" and "have close patient contact."

Although Family Practice is the newest of medical specialties it already is a front-runner, Finegan said. It is the only one "requiring recertification every six years: others are beginning to show signs of following suit, with pediatrics "the farthest along."

And, he predicted, "all specialties will eventually" have similar requirements aimed at maintaining the desired level of continuing education and quality control.

A "spinoff" benefit of the educational program is the clinic, available to anyone and everyone, Finegan said, pointing out that, for the young residents "to get their education, they have to take care of people."

Now that the former general practitioner is working on training his "replacement" Finegan has another goal, one that hails back to the days when there were not enough hours in the day to spend the time he desired with each and every patient.

The goal is to produce enough family practice physicians "so they're not so busy they don't have to walk around the (examination) table, take a quick look at the patient, and walk back out again.

"That's what it was like, you know."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
4 ♠

Good bidding will get you to the best contract a very high percentage of the time. Every bid you make sends partner a message, to which he attempts to reply in kind, so that your side can exchange maximum information. Eventually, one player or the other chooses the final contract.

Thus, when South opens one heart, he announces the values for an opening bid, though he does not indicate all at once just how strong his hand is. North's raise to two hearts is much more precise. It states he has from 6 to 9 points, which may or may not include distributional values.

Two spades announces values above a minimum opening bid, since otherwise South would pass. It furthermore proposes spades as trumps in case North has better spades than hearts.

Three spades guarantees four-card support and a willingness to go to game. Four spades ends the auction.

There is one big disadvantage to such precise exchanges of information. While the players are sending these messages back and forth for their own edification, their opponents are busily listening in, and what they overhear often helps them to find the best defense.

A shrewd West took advantage of the bidding here to find the killing opening lead. He started with the ace and another heart, and South could not stop him from giving East a heart ruff later on to put the contract down one.

West reasoned that North-South had at least eight hearts for the opening heart bid and raise. This meant that East had specifically one or two hearts and could ruff a heart either immediately or eventually.

Had South been less scientific and jumped directly to four hearts over two, he could not have been stopped from scoring a game.

Embezzling By Boss Should Be Reported

DEAR ABBY: The partners who own the company I work for don't have time to check every detail of our company. The man they hired as manager (my boss) has been embezzling funds from the company.

I noticed the shortage when I returned from a sick leave about six months ago. When I confronted my boss with the first shortage I found, he promptly told me as long as he was the boss he would run things his way. I was then told to write off the shortages as "entertainment expense."

Things have been getting gradually worse. Funds amounting to $100 in cash are missing at the end of the week, company gas runs his family's three cars, checks for large amounts to companies with whom we have no dealings are made out for personal items he has purchased.

Should I tell the owners or wait until they find the shortages? I handle the money and pay the expenses of the company. I'm very upset by this and fear if I don't say something, I could be accused of covering up the shortage.

DISTRESSED EMPLOYEE

DEAR DISTRESSED: You are being maneuvered into the crime of "misprison" — concealment of another's felony. And if you knowingly falsify records, you then become an accessory to the crime. Of course you should tell the owners what your boss is doing! Failing to do so could get you into big trouble.

DEAR ABBY: Four months ago, I met this man. He's 22, handsome, sweet and kind. He's new in this city and lives down the street in a boarding home.

I suppose I should be honest and tell you that we had sex the first time we were together, and I've been going to his place as often as I can ever since.

He told me he loved me, and I think I am in love with him.

Last week he said his landlady doesn't approve of my coming to visit him, and she wants it stopped. How old am I? Just 14. My parents don't let me take company, and I have to sneak out to see him, but I can't stay away from him.

I don't want to get hurt, but I haven't the willpower to stop. Please help.

YOUNG AND FOOLISH

DEAR YOUNG: You named yourself appropriately. This man has used you, and now he is trying to tell you that he's lost interest in you. You are a minor, and as such, you could both be in serious trouble if the landlady decides to call the law. Stay away from him! He's bad news!

DEAR ABBY: I've never seen this problem in your column, and I really would like to know if there is a solution:

When a person drives her (or his) own car and agrees to pick up others, why should the driver have to pay for the parking?

I think it's enough that the driver uses her (his)car and pays for the gas without having to pay for the parking.

Of all the times I've been the "chauffeur," not once has one of the "shleppalongs" offered to pay for even part of the parking.

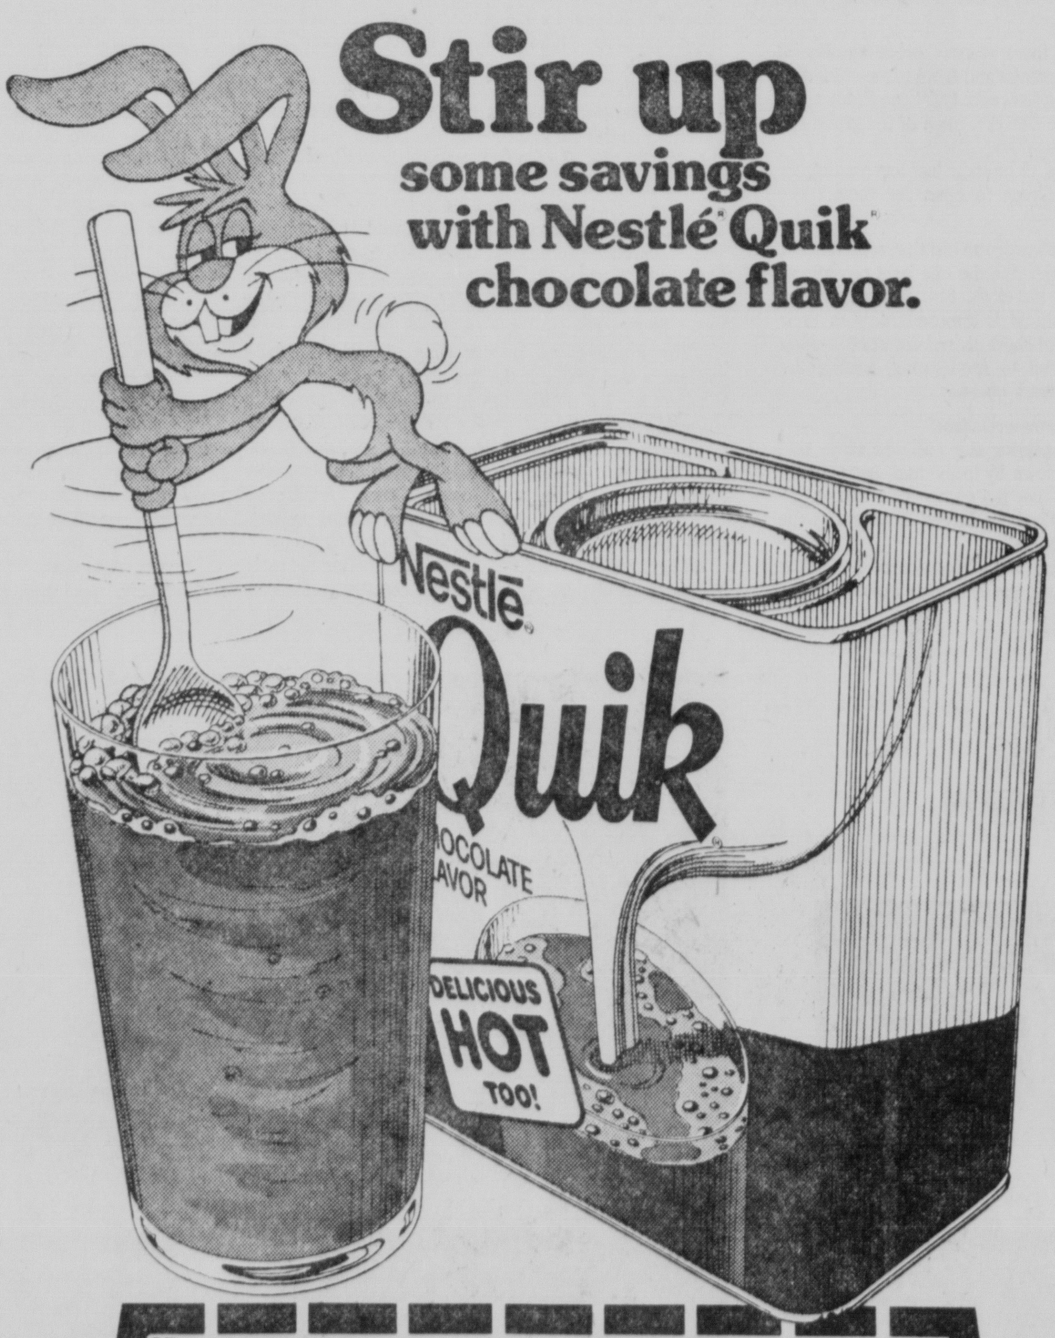

Please print this, Abby. Most people aren't really cheap; they're just thoughtless.

"THE DRIVER"

DEAR DRIVER: Here's your letter. Are you listening "Shlep-palongs"?

Blackburn Said Dismal Choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ben B. Blackburn, an ex-congressman nominated to head the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, once used official House Banking Committee stationery to solicit funds from bankers, a former colleague told the Senate Banking Committee Tuesday.

The testimony came as other committee witnesses denounced Blackburn's voting record on civil rights and antipoverty bills and said his allegedly extremist views disqualify him to head the board which administers the national fair housing act.

Senate sources reported that the nomination apparently was in severe difficulty.

Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., who served with Blackburn on the House Banking Committee said that he received a copy of the Blackburn letter in his former capacity as an Oakland, Calif., bank president.

He said the letter was written on a facsimile House Banking Committee stationery and contained "a violent denunciation of our labor unions and a fund-raising plea in support of right-to-work-laws" which bar closed-shop unions.

Stark said that because Blackburn then served on the committee which writes the banking laws, "I submit that this shows a blatant disregard for the ethics and propriety that members of Congress expect and demand from each other."

"Ben Blackburn clearly had no such concern," Stark said.

Other pleas to reject the nomination came from the National Urban League, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NACCP), The National Housing Conference and by a panel of California officials including Sen. John Tunney.

They referred to Blackburn's votes against all the civil rights bills to come before the House during his three terms in Congress, including the fair housing act which the bank board administers.

They also quoted from his public statements including remarks made to the House Banking Committee in which he advocated public hanging as a cure for public housing tenants who do not pay their rent.

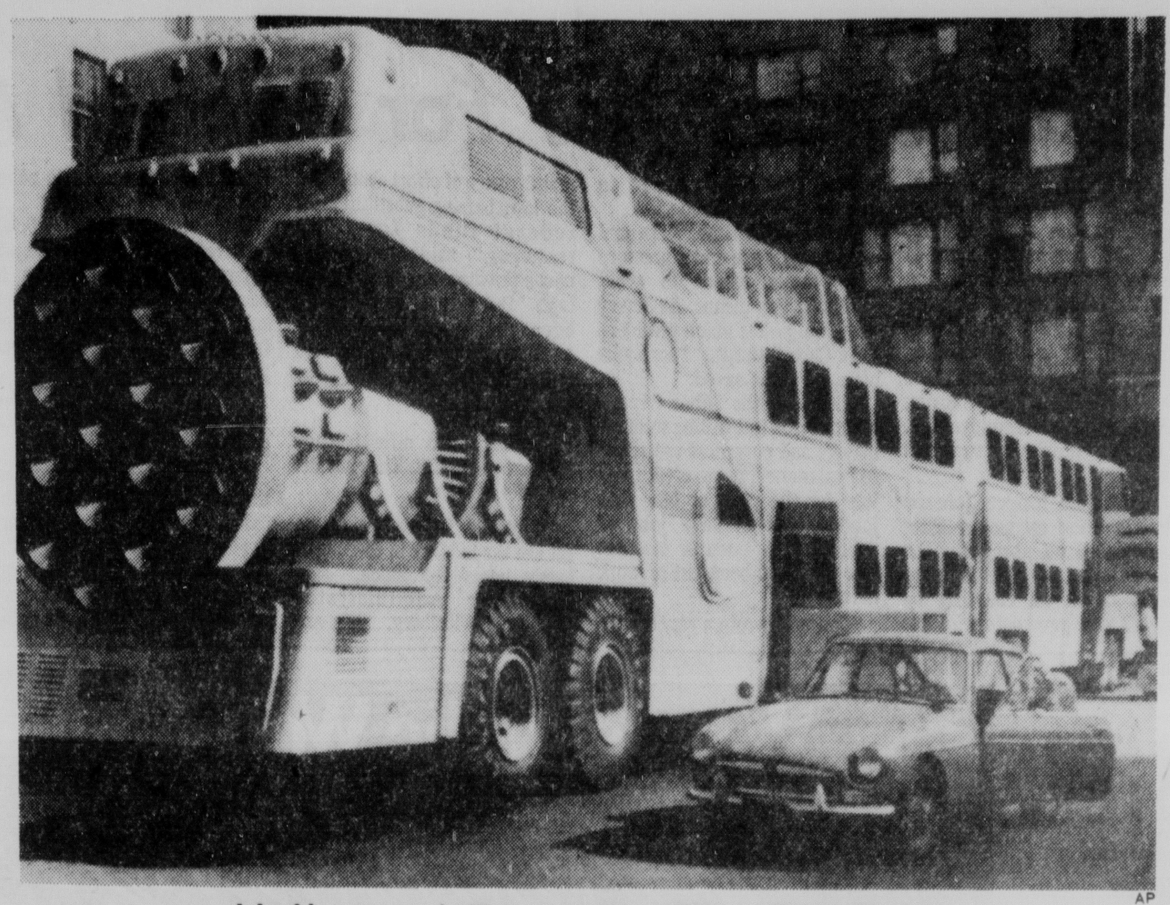

He now says he cannot remember making the statement which appears in the official transcript of committee proceedings. But he was quoted earlier as saying he meant it only in jest.

"His actions and his rhetoric — whether in jest or not — have more than clearly demonstrated his blatant contempt for minorities and the poor and a seeming disregard toward enforcing the civil rights and equal opportunity laws of the land," said Vernon E. Jordan Jr., executive director of the Urban League.

Chairman William Proxmire, D—Wis., and Sen. Joseph Biden, D—Del., a committee member, said after Tuesday's hearing they both would vote to reject Blackburn's nomination.

Blackburn appeared in his own behalf Monday and said that in hindsight he might now change some of his votes against civil rights bills.

He promised if confirmed to uphold laws relating to the duties of the bank board and said he would do nothing to denigrate the rights of blacks and other minorities while serving as chairman.

Hollywood Presents 'The Big Bus'

The star of the movie, "The Big Bus," is of course a big bus, otherwise known as Coyote in the film. Photographed in downtown Los Angeles, the monster weighs 75 tons, is 106 feet long and rides on 32 enormous wheels. It cost $250,000 to be especially built for the picture. The vehicle was brought to its downtown location at 3 a.m. to avoid panic on the Los Angeles freeway system.

Oil Industry Seeks Aid Against Breakup

Chicago (AP) — The petroleum industry's largest trade group is urging other businesses to support its fight against congressional proposals to break up major oil companies.

Charles E. Spahr, chairman of the American Petroleum Institute, said Tuesday the divestiture proposals represent the first step toward nationalization of one industry that eventually would spread to others.

"This attempt to dismember the petroleum industry threatens disaster to the United States," Spahr told 2,000 oil dealers attending the concluding session of the institute's annual meeting.

"Dismemberment would cause an immense disruption of the petroleum industry with the inevitable result of producing less energy at higher cost to the consumer," said Spahr, who is chairman of Standard Oil Co. (Ohio).

Three divestiture proposals were defeated last month as the Senate debated an energy bill, but the proposals drew support from 45, 40 and 39 senators, respectively.

Under a variety of formulas, the bills would have required integrated companies to divorce themselves of one or more of the industry's four major segments — production, transportation, refining and marketing.

Supporters of the bills contend divestiture would lower prices and break up monopolies.

Spahr said he was startled by the suddenness and magnitude of the Senate votes. He said the votes make it obvious that the industry which supplies 70% of the nation's energy production is in a battle for survival.

Charles J. DiBona, the institute's executive vice president, said the industry is seeking help and expects help from other industries.

"We are getting cooperation from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers and others," DiBona said.

"These groups have shown every indication of broad cooperation. They recognize this is a direct, real, immediate threat to business. The proposals amount ot the opening gun in a broad, major social battle in this country," DiBona said.

Anderson, 80, Dies; Ex-Senator

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Clinton P. Anderson, a four-term U.S. senator from New Mexico and secretary of agriculture under President Harry S. Truman, died Tuesday.

Anderson, 80, collapsed at his home shortly after dinner, apparently of a stroke, said his son, Sherburne P. Anderson.

The New Mexico Democrat had been ill since he retired from the Senate in 1972.

He served three terms in the House before being named secretary of agriculture by Truman in 1945.

He left that post in 1948 and was elected to the Senate, where he served until retiring in 1972.

He was chairman of the Aeronautics and Space Sciences Committee from 1963 until 1972 and served as a member of the Finance, Interior, Joint Atomic Energy and Joint Internal

'Rocking Chair Deserters' Involved In Life Of The City

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

Some Lincoln citizens are off their rockers.

Senior citizens that is. Off their rocking chairs and playing a vital part in the life of the city, according to participants in a panel discussion concerning "Rocking Chair Deserters," at Tuesday night's Pieces of a City session.

As a general rule society tends to see old age as "a problem, not a resource," according to Melody Voyles, administrative assistant of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Commission on Aging.

In Lancaster County there are 21,000 to 22,000 persons over age 65, according to Pauline Anderson, director of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program. Of this group, only 25% live alone, she said, noting, "People very often tend to think of older persons as being very lonely."

Statistics show that there are 4,830 male heads of households over 65, 722 female heads of households in that age group, 1,165 in institutions and 111 persons over 65 living in communes or similar group environments, she said.

"Our relationship with our parents is very important in that we mustn't add to the many burdens they already have to bear," she said in noting how some senior citizens are kept in their children's homes almost like "indentured slaves."

"The one thing I can strongly urge is that we keep our parents as independent as possible," she concluded.

Delayne Peck, director of Lincoln Information Services for the Elderly, spoke of what he called "acceptable transitions for successful aging." These include a variety of things from driving the family car being reduced to using public transportation to dealing with the "natural forces" that shape an individual life.

"We often find that there's a terrific paper barrier between an elderly person and the services they need," he added.

Sister Phyllis Hunhoff, administrator of Madonna Professional Care Service, spoke of sexuality and aging after asking the question, "Have you ever seen a double bed in a nursing home?"

Institutional rigidity needs to be "greatly reassessed" in terms of recognizing the views of masculinity and femininity in the aging, she explained.

Spiritual and moral views play a great part in this process, she added, and "we have to study every possible aspect of care, right down to how we touch a person . . . is it forceful or tender?"

Two panel members dealt with political activism among senior citizens. Mrs. Esther Hamon, a retired school teacher, said, "The best way to stay out of a rocking chair is to walk around a precinct and distribute pamphlets."

She discussed her role as a lobbyist which began after "I got tired of wasting postage writing complaints to my congressman, so I went out and worked to get a different man elected."

Her most successful lobby to date has been when she and another "older" lady were asked to lobby in support of the sexual assault bill. "Younger women had tried, but were often the brunt of jokes from the male politicians," she said.

"When this lady with white hair, and me with my cane, walked into the office, they knew we meant business," she said. The bill passed.

"I don't mind being older, I do mind being called elderly," she concluded.

Martha Kniffin, a parttime counselor, said that the Grey Panthers have come to Lincoln. The group, a nationally recognized coalition of young and old alike, is "about 40 strong" in Lincoln, she said.

The name, a label attached by the news media, is used because it clearly expresses the "activism of the group," she added.

"The challenge is that we make living longer, worth it," she concluded.

I Can't 'Stop The Music'

The film presentation at Tuesday night's Pieces of a City session was titled, "Don't Stop the Music."

But coordinators of the session spent about an hour trying to stop the music that was coming from the public address system speakers in the ceiling of the meeting room at the Lincoln Center Building where the session was being held.

Building maintenance personnel finally disconnected the microphone and the speaker system and the annoying music stopped.

Stern Release Asked By Levi

PARIS (AP) — Dr. Jean-Louis Levy, grandson of Capt. Alfred Dreyfus, has asked the Soviet Union to follow the example of France in the Dreyfus case and release Dr. Mikhail Stern, a Jewish physician serving eight years in a labor camp on charges of swindling and bribe taking.

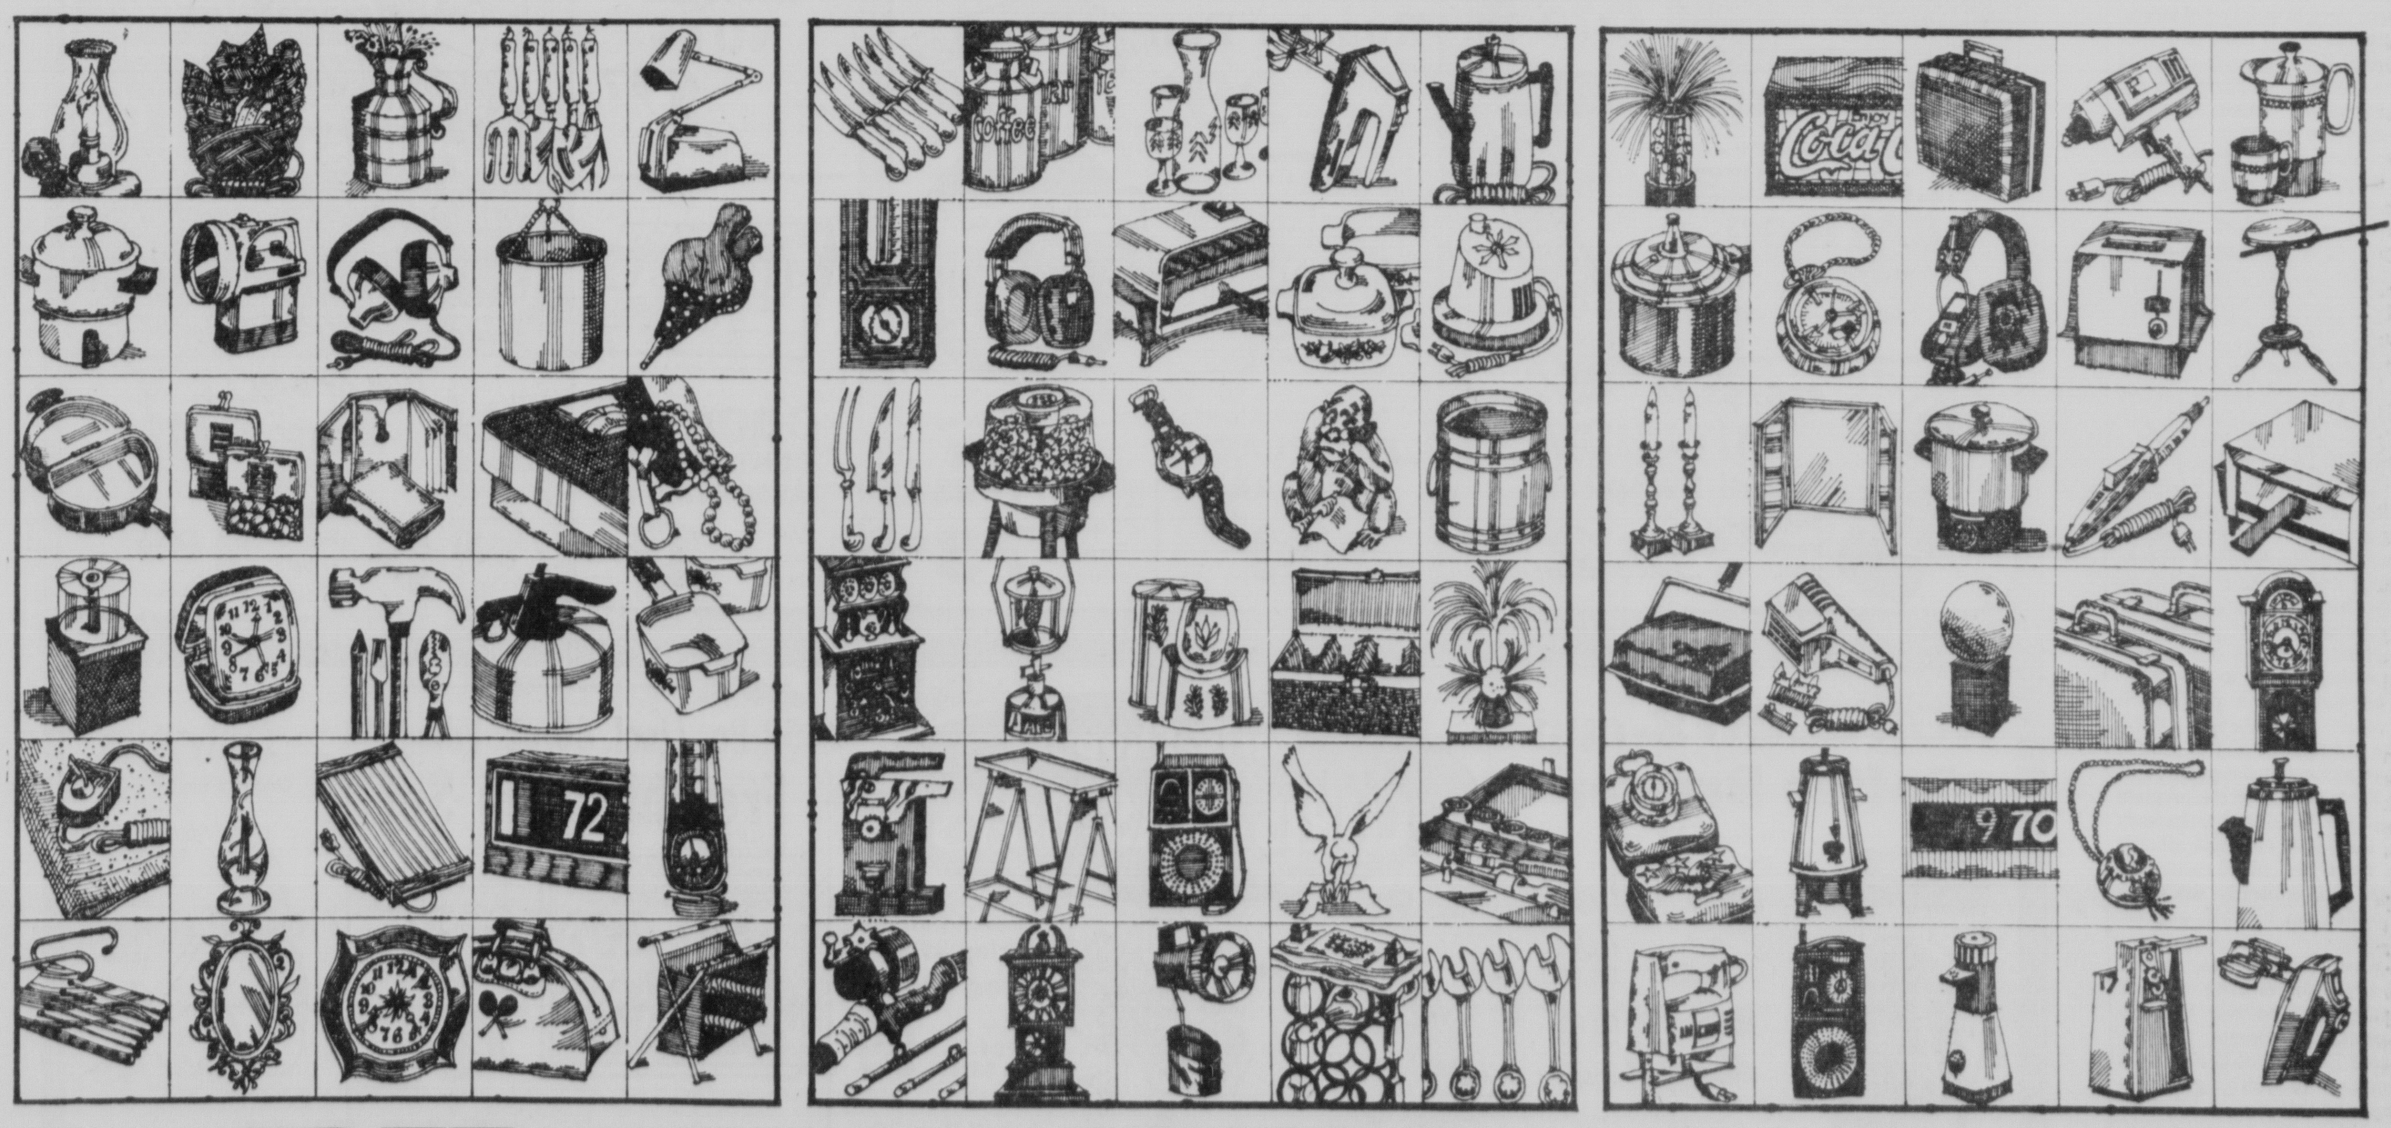

Levy said the 57-year-old endicrinologist was arrested and convicted on false testimony.

"Seventy years ago France honored itself in recognizing the greatest 'judicial error' of its history. In annuling the judgments of two military courts, it put an end to the martyrdom of my grandfather, Capt. Dreyfus," Levy said. "Today the Soviet Union would honor itself in recognizing the judicial error . . . in putting an end . . . to the martyrdom of Dr. Stern, his wife and children.

Fiddlers Endangered Species?

Story by
J. L. Schmidt

An art of nearly 5,000 years is facing extinction.

The art? Fiddling. The prognosticators? Old-time fiddlers.

"Therein lies part of the problem," according to one Lincoln fiddling enthusiast.

"Eleven years ago there were a great number of fiddlers active across Nebraska and from the surrounding states participating in the Nebraska Old-time Fiddlers activities," said fiddling De DeRyke, head of the group and a fiddle instructor.

"Now many are gone, or on their last legs waiting for the gates of Fiddler's Green to open for them," she added.

Many of the able fiddlers are so old that someone has to drive them to gatherings like the one held recently at Miss DeRyke's home in Havelock, 6141 Morrill Ave.

But the lack of mobility is apparent only in their travel, as they never seem short of foot-stomping, which is in some cases reduced to toe-tapping, during the sessions which last for hours on end.

'Not Commercialized'

"These people are playing the real old style, that which has been passed down by individual instruction," Miss DeRyke said. "It's not the commercialized or imitative styles which we've been forced to accept by the mass communications media."

The fact that the music is traditional is evident in the obvious lack of sheet music, the sometime inability of the players to even remember the name of the song they're playing, and the peaceful smiles of the spectators.

Miss DeRyke's speech glimmers with nostalgia as she talks of the old blind man and others who taught her "the old style." It speaks a sad note of concern, though, as she notes the often obvious failing spirits of some of the players.

Fiddlers have a tradition of gathering at places like the DeRykes. It all started back when "canned" music became popular for dances and the fiddler was without the job that he had held so prestigiously in many a small community.

Dates To 3,000 B.C.

Fiddling, according to a French acoustical engineer who researched the subject, dates back to the year 3,000 B.C. when a group in India was playing an instrument similar to the modern day fiddle, or violin, depending on who's playing what kind of music on the thing.

The music came to this country with the early settlers, a fact that can be proven by any musicologist who can see the similarities in many of the tunes with those of the Troubadors of the 11th and 12th Century.

Somewhere along the way, fiddling became linked with the devil, or some such evil spirit, and churches banned the use of the instruments in their buildings.

"Now," says Miss DeRyke, "we are putting on quite a few concerts and demonstrations for church groups."

This "spell" carried on into the late Forties and early Fifties in the Ozark regions of this country as fiddlers were often forced to keep their instruments hidden for fear of having them confiscated and destroyed.

Some of this mysticism might be attributed to Nicolo Paganini, according to Miss DeRyke. He was an Italian violinist and composer whose works played a prominent part in the shaping of fiddling music. "He was also epileptic and given to fits," she said, noting that it was these fits which were to have overcome everyone who played.

Fiddling managed to fight off the odds and exist as a popular form of musical expression, mostly because of the dedication of the old-timers.

"We need to get interested youngsters exposed to these grand old fiddlers before they die or lose their ability to pass on the art," Miss DeRyke said.

"Many of these fiddlers would like to see the art preserved and would gladly impart their knowledge to others," she added.

Several Lincoln groups are composed of younger persons who have taken to the picking and fiddling of the older generations, and they often show up at gatherings with their predecessors.

"It's fun for all ages," said Miss DeRyke, noting that her youngest pupil is 4-year-old, Natasha Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Weston Crawford, 2808 Jefferson. She and her older brother are both students who may help to preserve the art.

"If we do not get the younger folks to these old timers, we shall be losing a great deal of our folk heritage," said Miss DeRyke.

Public Jobs Program Under Fire For Alleged Mismanagement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's public service employment program, designed to create 310,000 jobs in state and local government, is peppered with instances of alleged mismanagement by mayors and governors, an Associated Press study shows.

Labor Department officials concede some problems exist, but say they are under control and concentrated mostly in the Northeast.

But reports of nepotism, political hiring and fiscal sleight-of-hand have prompted the House Labor Committee to begin drafting plans to put any new jobs under control of private, nonprofit organizations, rather than state or local officeholders.

An AP survey of several hundred Labor Department audits completed during the past fiscal year, plus a spot check of news reports around the country, turned up scores of cases where federal jobs money allegedly was misspent by mayors or governors.

Among the worst examples:

— The Justice Department currently is investigating a Labor Department report that more than 200 federally salaried workers in Boston allegedly were used to conduct a door-to-door survey for Mayor Kevin White.

— Labor Department investigators are looking into similar reports of political abuse in New Brunswick, N.J., where the Home News newspaper found that many of the federally funded jobs went to persons with relatives or other connections in the local government.

— The Labor Department recently stripped the city of Philadelphia of much of its power over the public-jobs program there when hiring was found to be based on political connections. A state body now screens hiring.

— Labor Department auditors earlier this year accused Massachusetts of mishandling its public-jobs program for more than two years, and urged that a cut-off of funds be considered. The department currently is considering whether to ask the state to refund some portion of the $2.2 million that auditors said may have been misspent.

— Department auditors last year urged a cut-off of federal funds for Connecticut's public-jobs program, saying as much as $1.5 million may have been misspent. The funds were not suspended, but the department dispatched a special representative on a two-year mission to shape up the state's program. The department is negotiating with the state over the amount of misspent money to be refunded.

— In a nationwide study released last June, the Labor Department's chief auditor said that 16.5 per cent of a statistical sample of public-job holders were hired in violation of federal rules, or lacked proof of proper hiring. The study also criticized the department's Manpower Administration, which runs the public-jobs program, for being too slow to reclaim misspent money from mayors and governors.

The same report, however, said: "For the most part, the (public jobs) program has been effective in increasing employment opportunities in high unemployment areas, and in providing jobs for eligible unemployed and underemployed persons. ... Both the participants and the public benefitted from the program."

The public-jobs program, which dates back in one form or another to 1971, puts federal money in the hands of mayors, governors and other officials for the hiring of school aides, hospital workers, policemen, firemen, clerks or others providing service to the public. The aim of the program is twofold: To create new jobs for the unemployed and to provide new services to the public.

From the outset the program has been faced with a tendency of some state and local officials to spend the federal money for jobs that ordinarily would be provided out of their own tax money.

When this happens, federal money replaces state or local money, and no new jobs are created. To prevent this the Labor Department has set up a complex of rules, generally requiring that persons hired for the federal jobs be out of work for a certain period prior to hiring.

The problem is illustrated by recent testimony to a House subcommittee by former Manpower administrator Malcolm Lovell, who recalled that early in the program a big-city mayor came to him seeking permission to use federal money to prevent what he claimed would be a mass layoff of city employes.

As Lovell recalled it, the mayor said "We are going to lay off 1,500 people. You have financed 1,000 jobs and we want you to allow us to use these 1,000 jobs not to lay off these people."

"I said, 'No, no, you have to wait 30 days.' " Lovell recalled. "He said, 'You are callous.' I said, 'No, no, Mr. Mayor . . . ' What happened? They didn't lay off 1,500 people."

Lovell said in that case, 900 other poor, unemployed persons were hired with the federal money.

"While we empathize with the problems of all the unemployed, we are particularly concerned with the increasing number of layoffs among our own employes," said San Juan Mayor Carlos Barcelo, testifying for the National Conference of Mayors.

New York Mayor Abraham Beame, at the same hearing, said, "It has become a point of increasing irony and contention with organized labor that we must terminate or lay off city employes due to local revenue deficits on one hand, while we are conducting a massive hiring program for new employes . . . at times to do similar work, on the other."

Critics, like former Johnson administration manpower chief Stanley H. Ruttenberg, say the Labor Department has failed to clamp down on cheating by mayors and governors who use federal public-jobs money to balance their own budgets.

At the same time, state and local officials are under pressure from public unions to avoid layoffs by any means. As Jersey City, N.J. police union president John Carroll put it, "These jobs have got to be saved."

Critics say the Labor Department now is too willing to allow mayors and governors to use the federal money, not to create new jobs for the poor or long-time jobless, but to save jobs of policemen, firemen or teachers who have not been out of work before.

"Congress wrote a very strong maintenance of effort clause into the law, barring substitution of federal funds for local resources," said Ruttenberg, now a private manpower consultant. "But very little effort has been made by the federal government to enforce that provision. In fact, it has been openly disregarded."

Administration officials deny they are going soft. They say the opposite is true.

"Typically, the complaints we get are the feds are in there with heavy boots too much," said Manpower Administrator William H. Kolberg. "We are doing the best we can to police this system."

Some state and local officials reportedly are able to legally bypass federal regulations by using a process called "budget substitation." It enables the officials to place on the federal jobs payroll the salaries of workers who otherwise would have been employed by the local government.

A number of professors estimate that roughly half of the federal public service jobs are swallowed up in this way. If the estimates are correct — and top Labor Department officials say they believe they are — then the 310,000 "new" federally salaries jobs actually amount to only 155,000 jobs that would not otherwise have existed.

Because of the abuses, the House manpower subcommittee has drafted a bill that would put some public-service jobs in the hands of private, nonprofit groups such as charity organizations, local school boards, colleges and antipoverty agencies.

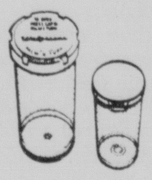

The bill would require that any public-service job be listed publicly for a week before being filled, prohibit nepotism, and require public disclosure of the names and salaries of those hired under the program.

Casinos Open In Late Afternoon

San Juan, P.R. (UPI) — Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon has signed a law permitting Puerto Rico's gambling casinos to be open during the afternoon to accommodate cruise ship passengers and conventioneers.

The law extends casino hours from 4 p.m. to 4 a.m., instead of 8 p.m. to 4 a.m. Casinos operate in the island's luxury hotels. The law also exempts visitors to the casinos from the jacket-and-tie rule from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Center Trains Family Practice Doctors

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

When Dr. John C. Finegan gave up his private medical practice of 20 years, he didn't sell his examination tables, his stethoscopes, his blood pressure gauges.

Nor did he turn his back on general practice.

Although satisfied that he was serving his patients adequately, Finegan faced up to a gnawing concern: that he was not training someone to follow in his footsteps in general practice, a field whose supply wasn't, and isn't, meeting demand in this age of specialization.

As the director of Lincoln's Family Practice Center, Finegan is training his replacement — and then some.

Young physicians fresh out of medical school are using the examination tables, stethoscopes, blood pressure gauges removed from Finegan's old offices to get more experience before stepping into practices of their own.

Family Medicine

They make up the first class enrolled in the Family Medicine Residency Program, a postgraduate education program leading to certification in family practice.

The new program, sponsored by the Lincoln Medical Educational Foundation and affiliated with the University of Nebraska College of Medicine, is designed to meet Nebraska's need for more general, or family, practice doctors.

According to a recent survey, a significant number of Nebraska physicians will retire in the next decade; nearly one-fifth of the 271 doctors in the Lincoln area will need to be replaced in that time.

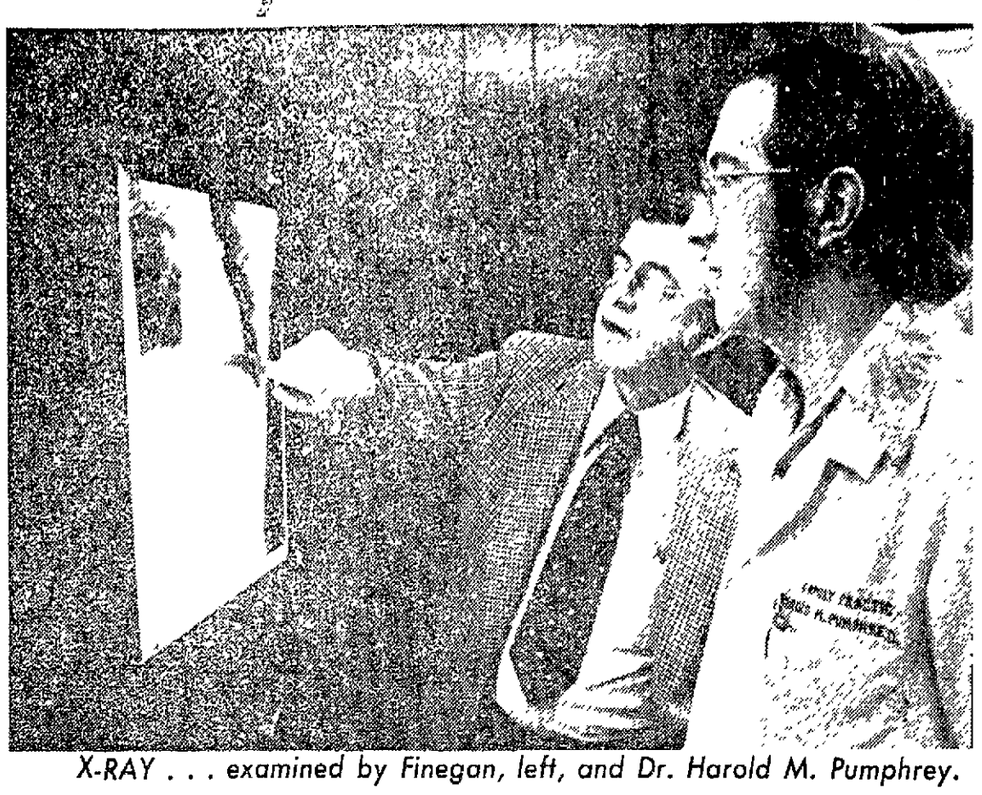

And, with the elimination of internship requirements before a medical school graduate could step into a practice, Lincoln was finding it increasingly difficult to attract young physicians, Finegan said.

Backed By Grant

As a result, the Lincoln Medical Educational Foundation, a coalition of hospital administrators and physicians, settled on the Family Medicine Residency Program. Setting up the clinic was accomplished with a sizeable grant from the Lincoln Foundation.

Six young physicians, one in his second year of residency, currently are enrolled. Eventually, 15 residents will be enrolled, five in each year of the three-year program.

They are training to be "people doctors" or family practice physicians, similar to the old general practitioner, but "more highly qualified," Finegan said. While the general practitioners of yesterday had one year of internship following medical school, the prospective family practitioners in Lincoln's residency program will have three years of practice before striking out on their own.

Family practice is "a relatively new concept," Finegan said, explaining that certification in that area was not offered until 1970.

Physicians in that field are "people who take care of people . . . rather than sick stomachs or sick eyeballs," he said.

They specialize in not specializing, he said.

Dr. Mark Allison, first-year resident in the program, spends one afternoon a week at the Family Practice Center, 525 N. 48th St. His patients come in with sore throats, hurt fingers, the flu, for prenatal examinations, physical examinations, minor surgery.

Allison performs the examinations under supervision; the rest of his time is spent practicing at hospitals or in other physicians' offices, concentrating in one area for two months, then moving on to another. He also participates in seminars conducted by private Lincoln physicians.

Allison, graduate of the NU Medical College, said he decided on family practice because it is "something that gives you the opportunity to be involved in all aspects of medicine . . . you do a little bit of everything" and "have close patient contact."

Although Family Practice is the newest of medical specialties it already is a front-runner, Finegan said. It is the only one "requiring recertification every six years: others are beginning to show signs of following suit, with pediatrics "the farthest along."

And, he predicted, "all specialties will eventually" have similar requirements aimed at maintaining the desired level of continuing education and quality control.

A "spinoff" benefit of the educational program is the clinic, available to anyone and everyone, Finegan said, pointing out that, for the young residents "to get their education, they have to take care of people."

Now that the former general practitioner is working on training his "replacement" Finegan has another goal, one that hails back to the days when there were not enough hours in the day to spend the time he desired with each and every patient.

The goal is to produce enough family practice physicians "so they're not so busy they don't have to walk around the (examination) table, take a quick look at the patient, and walk back out again.

"That's what it was like, you know."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠

Good bidding will get you to the best contract a very high percentage of the time. Every bid you make sends partner a message, to which he attempts to reply in kind, so that your side can exchange maximum information. Eventually, one player or the other chooses the final contract.

Thus, when South opens one heart, he announces the values for an opening bid, though he does not indicate all at once just how strong his hand is. North's raise to two hearts is much more precise. It states he has from 6 to 9 points, which may or may not include distributional values.

Two spades announces values above a minimum opening bid, since otherwise South would pass. It furthermore proposes spades as trumps in case North has better spades than hearts.

Three spades guarantees four-card support and a willingness to go to game. Four spades ends the auction.

There is one big disadvantage to such precise exchanges of information. While the players are sending these messages back and forth for their own edification, their opponents are busily listening in, and what they overhear often helps them to find the best defense.

A shrewd West took advantage of the bidding here to find the killing opening lead. He started with the ace and another heart, and South could not stop him from giving East a heart ruff later on to put the contract down one.

West reasoned that North-South had at least eight hearts for the opening heart bid and raise. This meant that East had specifically one or two hearts and could ruff a heart either immediately or eventually.

Had South been less scientific and jumped directly to four hearts over two, he could not have been stopped from scoring a game.

Embezzling By Boss Should Be Reported

DEAR ABBY: The partners who own the company I work for don't have time to check every detail of our company. The man they hired as manager (my boss) has been embezzling funds from the company.

I noticed the shortage when I returned from a sick leave about six months ago. When I confronted my boss with the first shortage I found, he promptly told me as long as he was the boss he would run things his way. I was then told to write off the shortages as "entertainment expense."

Things have been getting gradually worse. Funds amounting to $100 in cash are missing at the end of the week, company gas runs his family's three cars, checks for large amounts to companies with whom we have no dealings are made out for personal items he has purchased.

Should I tell the owners or wait until they find the shortages? I handle the money and pay the expenses of the company. I'm very upset by this and fear if I don't say something, I could be accused of covering up the shortage.

DISTRESSED EMPLOYEE

DEAR DISTRESSED: You are being maneuvered into the crime of "misprison" — concealment of another's felony. And if you knowingly falsify records, you then become an accessory to the crime. Of course you should tell the owners what your boss is doing! Failing to do so could get you into big trouble.

DEAR ABBY: Four months ago, I met this man. He's 22, handsome, sweet and kind. He's new in this city and lives down the street in a boarding home.

I suppose I should be honest and tell you that we had sex the first time we were together, and I've been going to his place as often as I can ever since.

He told me he loved me, and I think I am in love with him.

Last week he said his landlady doesn't approve of my coming to visit him, and she wants it stopped. How old am I? Just 14. My parents don't let me take company, and I have to sneak out to see him, but I can't stay away from him.

I don't want to get hurt, but I haven't the willpower to stop. Please help.

YOUNG AND FOOLISH

DEAR YOUNG: You named yourself appropriately. This man has used you, and now he is trying to tell you that he's lost interest in you. You are a minor, and as such, you could both be in serious trouble if the landlady decides to call the law. Stay away from him! He's bad news!

DEAR ABBY: I've never seen this problem in your column, and I really would like to know if there is a solution:

When a person drives her (or his) own car and agrees to pick up others, why should the driver have to pay for the parking?

I think it's enough that the driver uses her (his)car and pays for the gas without having to pay for the parking.

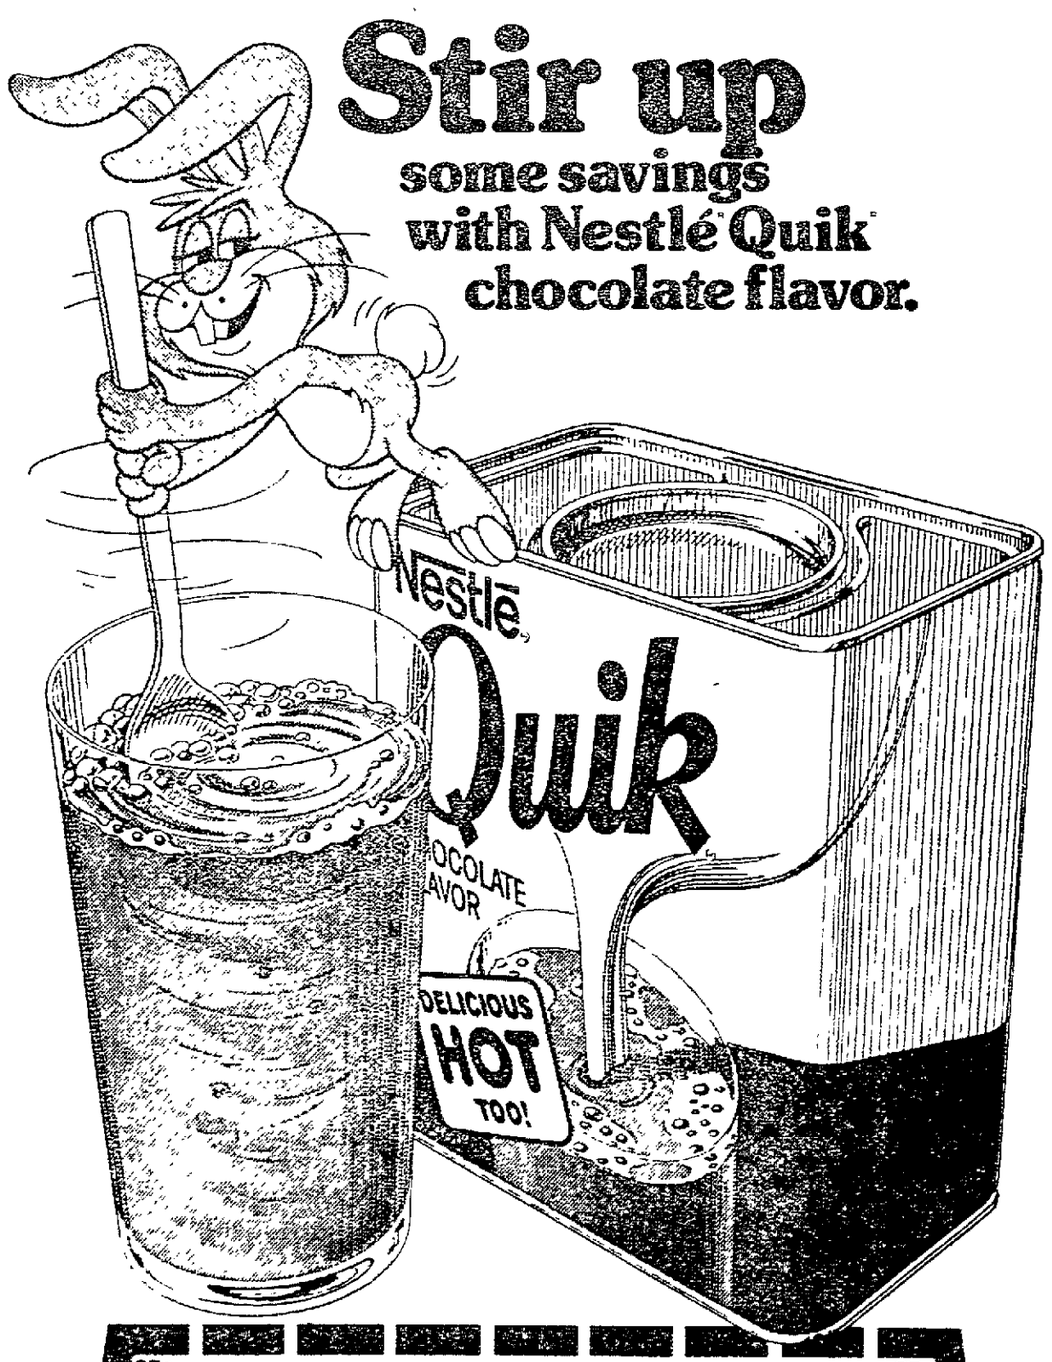

Of all the times I've been the "chauffeur," not once has one of the "shleppalongs" offered to pay for even part of the parking.

Please print this, Abby. Most people aren't really cheap; they're just thoughtless.

"THE DRIVER"

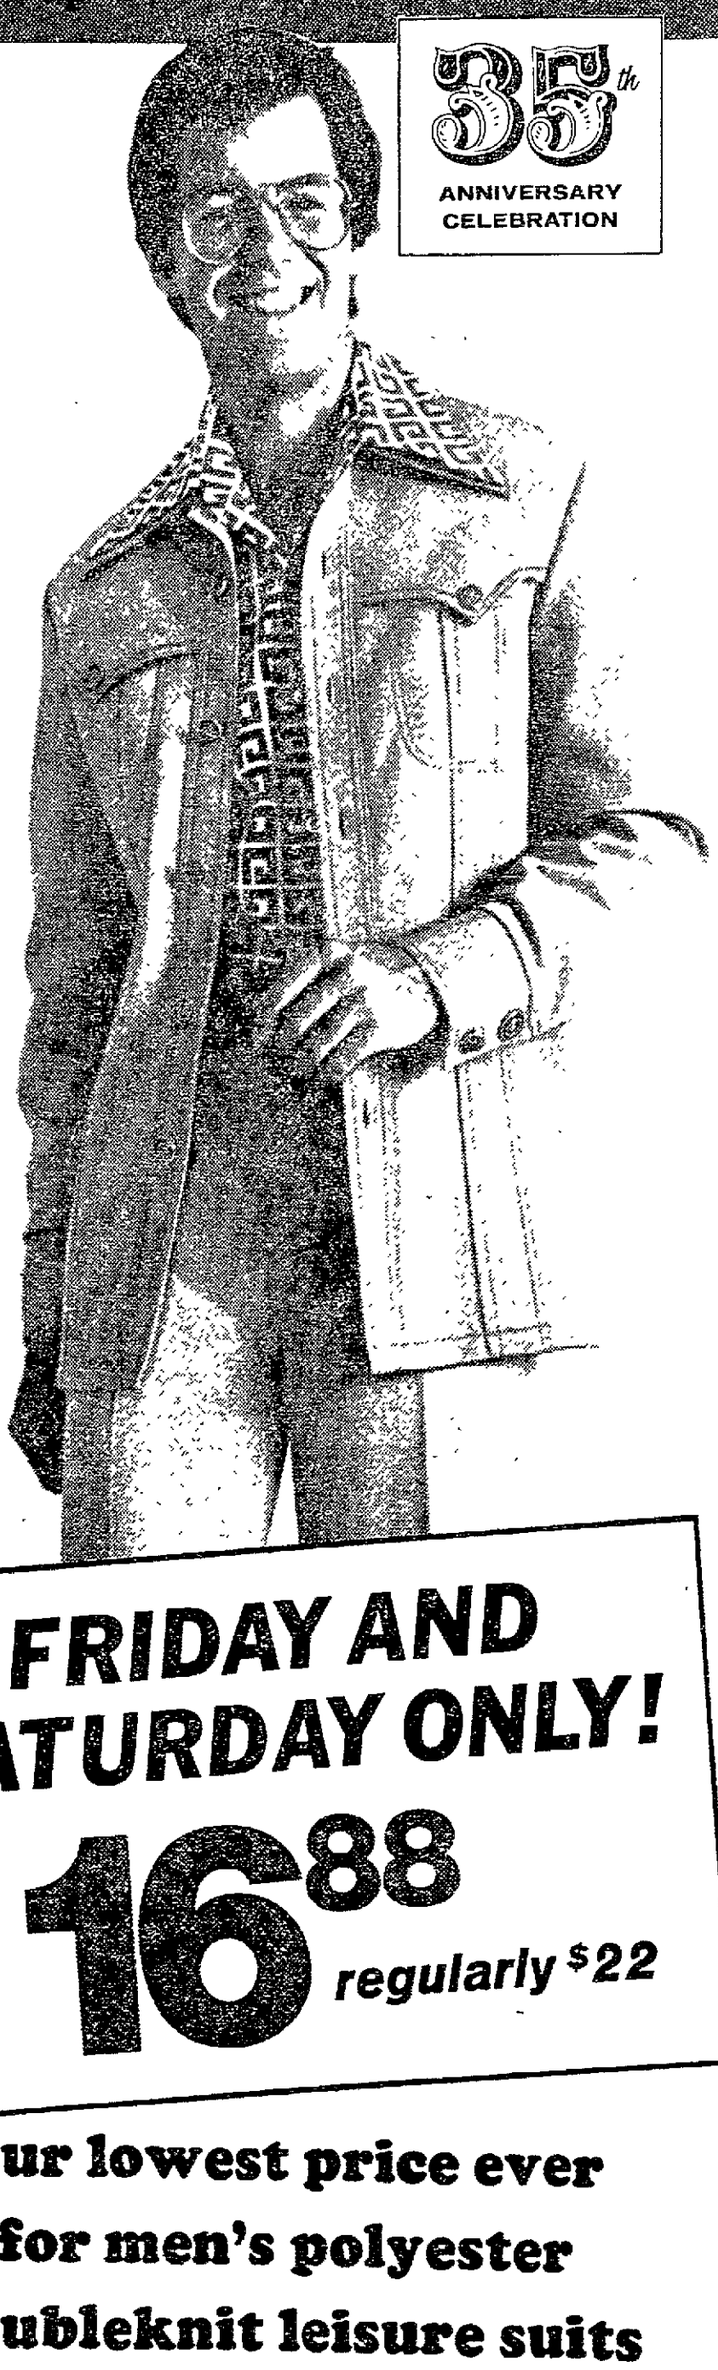

DEAR DRIVER: Here's your letter. Are you listening "Shleppalongs"?

School Boundary Shifts Eyed

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

To stay popular, wise school superintendents say, they must never do two things: change school building attendance boundaries or revise report cards.

Since report cards have already been overhauled recently, Supt. John Prasch went double-or-nothing to disprove the admonition Tuesday, taking the Lincoln Board of Education another step closer to moving boundaries.

But Prasch said the changes may scarcely hamper parents' wishes.

Students will have little trouble transferring to schools outside their home attendance zone, he explained, since fewer buildings will be "closed" to transfers.

Prasch said he'll likely recommend the board deny transfers next school year only to Southeast and East High Schools, Irving Junior High, West Lincoln and Calvert Elementary Schools. Calvert would be "closed" to accommodate a large kindergarten-to-first-grade class.

Because of declining enrollment, Culler Junior High might be replaced on the "open" transfer list, Prasch said.

Significant boundary changes proposed include making West Lincoln Elementary a "walk-in" school only and placing northeast Belmont residents in the McPhee School zone; adjusting the separation lines between Holmes and Calvert, Lefler and Irving, Lincoln High and East High; enlarging the Dawes limit.

Principals have been airing the proposals with parents. The board, after months-long review, will act on the final changes in December or possibly January.

The board unanimously approved a new German exchange program. Students from Kassel will study three weeks in Lincoln schools and stay in homes of Lincoln German students, who later will travel to Kassel, and live with the exchange families while attending German school.

Lincoln teachers will accompany, as sponsors, those eligible students who have studied German for two or more years. Foreign language consultant Mary Grauer said because of the "parent commitment," the exchange program is less costly.

Miss Brauer said study hours for French and Spanish students the past five years have been successful. Students take a 15- to 20-hour language and cultural preparatory course, and earn five credits in the program abroad.

Last year, 93% of the 114 students who participated rated the programs excellent or good. Three of four students were girls, 61% in 9th grade, 23% in 10th and 16% in 11th.

Prasch presented an update on class size in junior and senior high schools, responding to concerns the ratio of students to teachers may be too large.

Few teachers serve more than 36 students, he said, and larger classes of 41 or more are intentionally designed that way to serve music, typing and physical education groups, for example.

But Prasch said he's concerned about some "bunching" in junior high English and social studies classes, as well as some senior high groups of 15 or less which means other classes may be overcrowded.

Drop-outs and mid-year graduates, however, will improve the situation by reducing the size of larger classes, he said.

In other business, the board:

—Won Lincoln Area PTA Council commendation for its conduct of open meetings.

—Accepted a gift in memory of Lincoln High School art department chairman Mrs. Bert Alfrey, and endorsed a memorial fund to support the school permanent art collection.

—Learned that "Nation's Schools" magazine presented two awards to the district publications and information department for producing outstanding brochures serving teachers and kindergarteners.

—Endorsed the Community Bicentennial Astronomical Observatory Project, to be built at Holmes Park and administered by the city. Private building funds will be sought. The observatory will serve Lincoln students and teachers.

—Was told the district received $156,756 or only 14% of its total anticipated first-quarter claim under LB403, state special education law.

—Learned the district was paid $580 in winning a 1974 class action suit against Swift Instruments, regarding microscope purchases.

—Approved $18,553 in bids by Olson Bros. Construction Co. of Lincoln to replace and repair roofing at Mickle Junior High and Calvert Elementary School.

Monthly School Payments Favored

What the Legislature enacted temporarily Tuesday to avert a cash crisis is what the Lincoln Public Schools would like to stay in effect permanently.

LB3 allows the state treasurer to make monthly payments to governmental units such as Lincoln schools. The awards may lag behind what's owed beginning in January, with a final adjustment due in July when state receipts catch up with expenses.

Getting money monthly instead of quarterly is "more appropriate" in the long run, because "we can do better budgeting," said Robert Den Hartog, business affairs associate superintendent. It "reduces the amount of the beginning balance we have to have."

Den Hartog was referring to the often controversial, multimillion dollar cash balance the Lincoln School District preserves to pay bills due before budgeted income arrives.

"I hate to say, 'I told you so,'" Supt. John Prasch said, but indulged: "Had we been right to the bare line on the balance," as critics favored, current cash flow problems "would've been much more serious."

'Good Sense'

Making monthly payments on a permanent basis would "make good sense," Prasch told the Lincoln Board of Education, noting its budget is more than 75% dependent upon property tax receipts. That would put the timing burden on the state instead of local taxpayers.

The district cash reserves will be reduced temporarily, Prasch said, as they apply to the difference in state underpayments, particularly for special education programs, state aid and from educational lands revenues.

The board agreed to oppose two resolutions to be considered Thursday by the Nebraska State School Boards Association (NSSBA) Delegate Assembly.

Called 'Ridiculous'

One resolution would recommend the Legislature kill the Lincoln city sales tax option. Prasch discounted proponents' claims that would allow state school aid increases, and Board President Lou Roper called it "ridiculous."

The city sales tax raises the equivalent of about 12 mills in property taxation, which Lincoln couldn't levy because the city is already near its legal limit, Prasch said.

The second resolution the board pledged to fight would have the NSSBA call for abolishing the Nebraska Professional Practices Commission, the state teacher certification and professional review agency.

Prasch cited "some confusion" that the commission as an outside agency can affect local school boards' decisions on teacher employment, which he said isn't true.

Board members favored NSSBA resolutions which urged increasing state legislators' pay and hiring an attorney for the Nebraska education commissioner. They supported another which would reorganize school districts.

Right Questioned

"I really don't know that it's right for us in Lincoln to jam down the throats" of rural districts their consolidation or reorganization, Roper said. But "in the long run," their inefficiency affects urban districts, Prasch noted.

He said the "real evil" is the "protection of tax islands" which are an issue in sparsely populated districts.

The board also favored local determination of how school board members are elected, at large, by districts, or both. A resolution opposing a federal collective bargaining law won board support.

But Prasch said while such a law is "eventually" needed, it would result in a "power shift." Thus he suggested more study on the "dramatic" differences between benefits for private- and public-sector employes.

Board member Pearl Goldenstein said she'll offer two resolutions for NSSBA consideration. One affirms multicultural school programs; the other urges elimination of educators' discrimination against women and offering opportunities for women to achieve their full potential.

Athletic Building Corp. Decides To Arrange Irving Gym Funding

The Lincoln Schools Athletic Building Corp. decided Tuesday to arrange financing for the recreation center-gym addition at Irving Junior High School, and to consult an advisory committee of local financiers.

The Lincoln Board of Education reviewed bids on the $1.1 million city-school joint project, and agreed to award contracts on Nov. 25.

The corporation board voted to assume the entire debt, which the city and school district will each retire in lease-purchase agreements by April 1978, or possibly mid-1977.

Supt. John Prasch said spreading the payment over two years through the corporation will allow the project to proceed; otherwise, the school district's tight building fund already committed to projects underway could not accommodate Irving contracts.

The school board will consider a recommendation to award the general contract to Kingery Construction Co., whose base bid was $607,810; mechanical to W.R. Lesoing Co., $179,976, and electrical to DND Electric, $74,191.

The board allowed Dwight Nelson Construction Co. to withdraw the low bid of $528,922 because of a technical error.

Board members agreed to consider to a $7,120 deduction from Kingery's base bid for alternate exterior work, and an addition of $7,814 for a locker room floor. But they opposed a recommendation to deduct $2,251 for using paint in showers and rest rooms, favoring that cost for tile.

Prasch proposed the board also approve $65,161 in alternate mechanical bids and $19,227 in electrical alternates for the city's portion and air conditioning.

Total cost to the school district will be $859,820, and city costs will be $251,264 (plus architects' fees), for a grand total of $1,111,104. If the board approves the tile addition, the sum would increase to $1,113,555.

Prasch said he'll recommend further that the board authorize negotiations with Kingery to reduce the contract by $35,352, by removing site work items, and direct the architect to prorate those costs with the city.

School Business Officer's Role Growing

The school business officer is "no longer the head bookkeeper with dollar signs in his eyes. He is a senior partner" in the team of school district managers, Robert Den Hartog said.

Associate superintendent for business affairs of the Lincoln Public Schools, Den Hartog is national president of the Association of School Business Officials (ASBO).

Den Hartog's talk at the recent annual ASBO conference was quoted at length in "Education USA," published by the National School Public Relations Association.

No one person, not even the superintendent, is big enough to run today's complex school district, Den Hartog said. The business officer is increasingly being recognized as having the most knowledge of the district's true operation — though that recognition has much room for growth.

Thus, while talk about the school management team hasn't always matched action, the business officer is starting to take his rightful place at the head of the table, he said.

However, Den Hartog warned that school business officers must always remember they are second in line and must never try to supplant the superintendent, Education USA noted.

"There is a danger of political infighting; an ambitious business officer can withhold information to make the superintendent look inept, and unscrupulous board members can pit the two officials against each other for political reasons," he said.

"The superintendent must always be first," said Den Hartog, a former superintendent himself. "The business officer must be next in line to support the superintendent."

Referring to a three-way power team, Den Hartog said the business officer oversees economic implications of suggested policy, the curriculum officer deals with the instructional implications and the superintendent fits the two into political realities of the school district to reach decisions.

While superintendents average only three years on a job, Education USA reported that the business officer is emerging as the more permanent top executive. Of the $16 billion spent nationally in education last year, chief business officers served in districts that spent 85% of that, or $52 billion.

Yet only 46% of the business officers surveyed considered themselves part of the top administrative team. ASBO won't lobby in Washington, D.C., but will expand its political presence.

"Historically," Den Hartog said, "ASBO has been introverted, but now it needs to be recognized as a body with a part to play in educational decision-making.

"For example, when government officials want to know the effect of energy policies on schools, they should ask ASBO. They have not done so because ASBO has not had any real national recognition."

Supporters Of Picketing Bill Win A Round

Washington (AP) — Supporters of the bill to give striking building trades unions the right to close down entire construction sites won an important initial victory in the Senate Tuesday.

They succeeded in ending debate by a 66-30 vote, six more than required, on Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield's motion to consider the bill.

The measure, known as the common site picketing bill, passed the House in July.

It would make it lawful for a union to picket an entire construction site even though its dispute may be with only one subcontractor.

Cloture, a vote to end debate, will have to be invoked again to stop a filibuster against the measure itself, but the bill's managers said they were confident they could win this test, too.

A few of the senators who voted for the initial cloture oppose the bill and said they would not vote for the second anti-filibuster move. They said they were simply supporting Mansfield's authority to schedule legislation.

Voting to end debate were 48 Democrats and 18 Republicans. Opposed were 11 Democrats and 19 Republicans.

Leaders kept the Senate in session after the cloture vote until it adopted the motion to take up the bill and thus made it the pending business.

However, they had to concede to the measure's opponents a delay in the cloture vote on passage of the bill itself until Friday. The leaders had wanted this test on Thursday.

The opponents made clear they were not dropping their fight and would continue to use every weapon to try to prevent final passage.

Before the Senate adjourned, Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., offered as a substitute for the construction bill the proposal to guarantee New York City bonds.

The measure would, in effect, overturn a 1951 Supreme Court decision holding that a union could picket only the subcontractor involved.

Picketing the entire site would be illegal under the Taft-Hartley Law because it would amount to a secondary boycott, the court held.

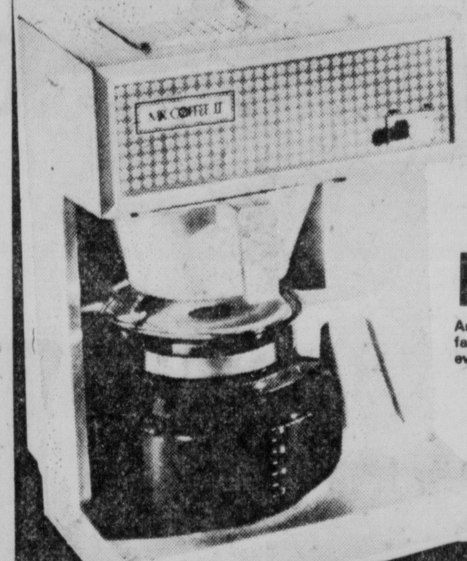

The unions contend they are seeking only the right that industrial unions have to close down an entire factory in a fight with a company.

They say that, in the construction industry, the general contractor and subcontractors are engaged in a single, co-ordinated enterprise and should be treated as one entity.

Two Oppose Move

Washington (AP) — Nebraska's Republican Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska voted Tuesday against limiting debate on the common site picketing bill.

Blackburn Said Dismal Choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ben B. Blackburn, an ex-congressman nominated to head the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, once used official House Banking Committee stationery to solicit funds from bankers, a former colleague told the Senate Banking Committee Tuesday.

The testimony came as other committee witnesses denounced Blackburn's voting record on civil rights and antipoverty bills and said his allegedly extremist views disqualify him to head the board which administers the national fair housing act.

Senate sources reported that the nomination apparently was in severe difficulty.

Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., who served with Blackburn on the House Banking Committee said that he received a copy of the Blackburn letter in his former capacity as an Oakland, Calif., bank president.

He said the letter was written on a facsimile House Banking Committee stationery and contained "a violent denunciation of our labor unions and a fund-raising plea in support of right-to-work-laws" which bar closed-shop unions.

Stark said that because Blackburn then served on the committee which writes the banking laws, "I submit that this shows a blatant disregard for the ethics and propriety that members of Congress expect and demand from each other."

"Ben Blackburn clearly had no such concern," Stark said.

Other pleas to reject the nomination came from the National Urban League, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NACCP), The National Housing Conference and by a panel of California officials including Sen. John Tunney.

They referred to Blackburn's votes against all the civil rights bills to come before the House during his three terms in Congress, including the fair housing act which the bank board administers.

They also quoted from his public statements including remarks made to the House Banking Committee in which he advocated public hanging as a cure for public housing tenants who do not pay their rent.

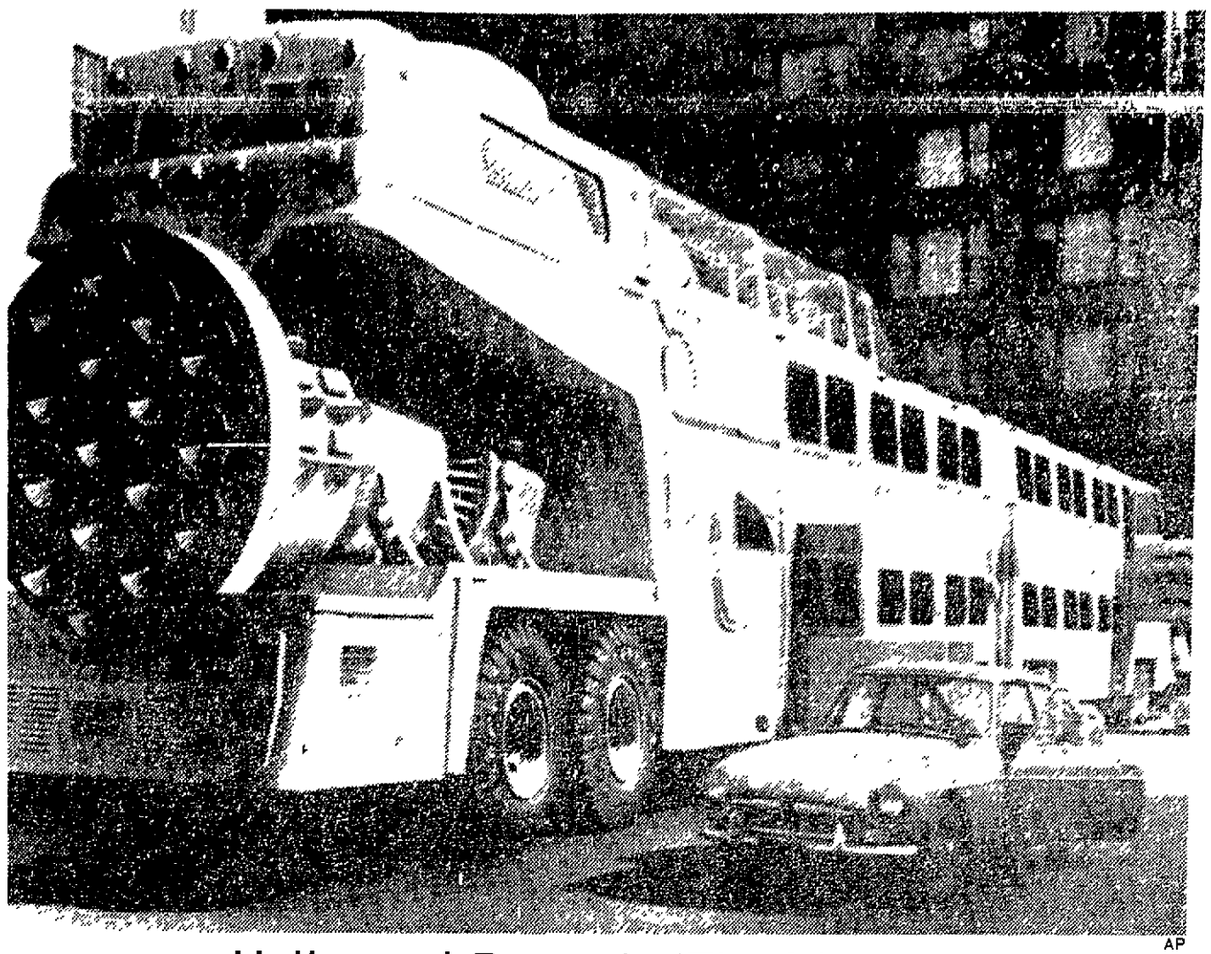

He now says he cannot remember making the statement which appears in the official transcript of committee proceedings. But he was quoted earlier as saying he meant it only in jest.

"His actions and his rhetoric — whether in jest or not — have more than clearly demonstrated his blatant contempt for minorities and the poor and a seeming disregard toward enforcing the civil rights and equal opportunity laws of the land," said Vernon E. Jordan Jr., executive director of the Urban League.

Chairman William Proxmire, D—Wis., and Sen. Joseph Biden, D—Del., a committee member, said after Tuesday's hearing they both would vote to reject Blackburn's nomination.

Blackburn appeared in his own behalf Monday and said that in hindsight he might now change some of his votes against civil rights bills.

He promised if confirmed to uphold laws relating to the duties of the bank board and said he would do nothing to denigrate the rights of blacks and other minorities while serving as chairman.

Hollywood Presents 'The Big Bus'

The star of the movie, "The Big Bus," is of course a big bus, otherwise known as Coyote in the film. Photographed in downtown Los Angeles, the monster weighs 75 tons, is 106 feet long and rides on 32 enormous wheels. It cost $250,000 to be especially built for the picture. The vehicle was brought to its downtown location at 3 a.m. to avoid panic on the Los Angeles freeway system.

Oil Industry Seeks Aid Against Breakup

Chicago (AP) — The petroleum industry's largest trade group is urging other businesses to support its fight against congressional proposals to break up major oil companies.

Charles E. Spahr, chairman of the American Petroleum Institute, said Tuesday the divestiture proposals represent the first step toward nationalization of one industry that eventually would spread to others.

"This attempt to dismember the petroleum industry threatens disaster to the United States," Spahr told 2,000 oil dealers attending the concluding session of the institute's annual meeting.

"Dismemberment would cause an immense disruption of the petroleum industry with the inevitable result of producing less energy at higher cost to the consumer," said Spahr, who is chairman of Standard Oil Co. (Ohio).

Three divestiture proposals were defeated last month as the Senate debated an energy bill, but the proposals drew support from 45, 40 and 39 senators, respectively.

Under a variety of formulas, the bills would have required integrated companies to divorce themselves of one or more of the industry's four major segments — production, transportation, refining and marketing.

Supporters of the bills contend divestiture would lower prices and break up monopolies.

Spahr said he was startled by the suddenness and magnitude of the Senate votes. He said the votes make it obvious that the industry which supplies 70% of the nation's energy production is in a battle for survival.

Charles J. DiBona, the institute's executive vice president, said the industry is seeking help and expects help from other industries.

"We are getting cooperation from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers and others," DiBona said.

"These groups have shown every indication of broad cooperation. They recognize this is a direct, real, immediate threat to business. The proposals amount to the opening gun in a broad, major social battle in this country," DiBona said.

Anderson, 80, Dies; Ex-Senator

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Clinton P. Anderson, a four-term U.S. senator from New Mexico and secretary of agriculture under President Harry S. Truman, died Tuesday.

Anderson, 80, collapsed at his home shortly after dinner, apparently of a stroke, said his son, Sherburne P. Anderson.

The New Mexico Democrat had been ill since he retired from the Senate in 1972.

He served three terms in the House before being named secretary of agriculture by Truman in 1945.

He left that post in 1948 and was elected to the Senate, where he served until retiring in 1972.

He was chairman of the Aeronautics and Space Sciences Committee from 1963 until 1972 and served as a member of the Finance, Interior, Joint Atomic Energy and Joint Internal

'Rocking Chair Deserters' Involved In Life Of The City

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

Some Lincoln citizens are off their rockers.

Senior citizens that is. Off their rocking chairs and playing a vital part in the life of the city, according to participants in a panel discussion concerning "Rocking Chair Deserters," at Tuesday night's Pieces of a City session.

As a general rule society tends to see old age as "a problem, not a resource," according to Melody Voyles, administrative assistant of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Commission on Aging.

In Lancaster County there are 21,000 to 22,000 persons over age 65, according to Pauline Anderson, director of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program. Of this group, only 25% live alone, she said, noting, "People very often tend to think of older persons as being very lonely."

Statistics show that there are 4,830 male heads of households over 65, 722 female heads of households in that age group, 1,165 in institutions and 111 persons over 65 living in communes or similar group environments, she said.

"Our relationship with our parents is very important in that we mustn't add to the many burdens they already have to bear," she said in noting how some senior citizens are kept in their children's homes almost like "indentured slaves."

"The one thing I can strongly urge is that we keep our parents as independent as possible," she concluded.

Delayne Peck, director of Lincoln Information Services for the Elderly, spoke of what he called "acceptable transitions for successful aging." These include a variety of things from driving the family car being reduced to using public transportation to dealing with the "natural forces" that shape an individual life.

"We often find that there's a terrific paper barrier between an elderly person and the services they need," he added.

Sister Phyllis Hunhoff, administrator of Madonna Professional Care Service, spoke of sexuality and aging after asking the question, "Have you ever seen a double bed in a nursing home?"

Institutional rigidity needs to be "greatly reassessed" in terms of recognizing the views of masculinity and femininity in the aging, she explained.

Spiritual and moral views play a great part in this process, she added, and "we have to study every possible aspect of care, right down to how we touch a person . . . is it forceful or tender?"

Two panel members dealt with political activism among senior citizens. Mrs. Esther Hamon, a retired school teacher, said, "The best way to stay out of a rocking chair is to walk around a precinct and distribute pamphlets."

She discussed her role as a lobbyist which began after "I got tired of wasting postage writing complaints to my congressman, so I went out and worked to get a different man elected."

Her most successful lobby to date has been when she and another "older" lady were asked to lobby in support of the sexual assault bill. "Younger women had tried, but were often the brunt of jokes from the male politicians," she said.

"When this lady with white hair, and me with my cane, walked into the office, they knew we meant business," she said. The bill passed.

"I don't mind being older, I do mind being called elderly," she concluded.

Martha Kniffin, a parttime counselor, said that the Grey Panthers have come to Lincoln. The group, a nationally recognized coalition of young and old alike, is "about 40 strong" in Lincoln, she said.

The name, a label attached by the news media, is used because it clearly expresses the "activism of the group," she added.

"The challenge is that we make living longer, worth it," she concluded.

I Can't 'Stop The Music'

The film presentation at Tuesday night's Pieces of a City session was titled, "Don't Stop the Music."

But coordinators of the session spent about an hour trying to stop the music that was coming from the public address system speakers in the ceiling of the meeting room at the Lincoln Center Building where the session was being held.

Building maintenance personnel finally disconnected the microphone and the speaker system and the annoying music stopped.

Stern Release Asked By Levi

PARIS (AP) — Dr. Jean-Louis Levy, grandson of Capt. Alfred Dreyfus, has asked the Soviet Union to follow the example of France in the Dreyfus case and release Dr. Mikhail Stern, a Jewish physician serving eight years in a labor camp on charges of swindling and bribe taking.

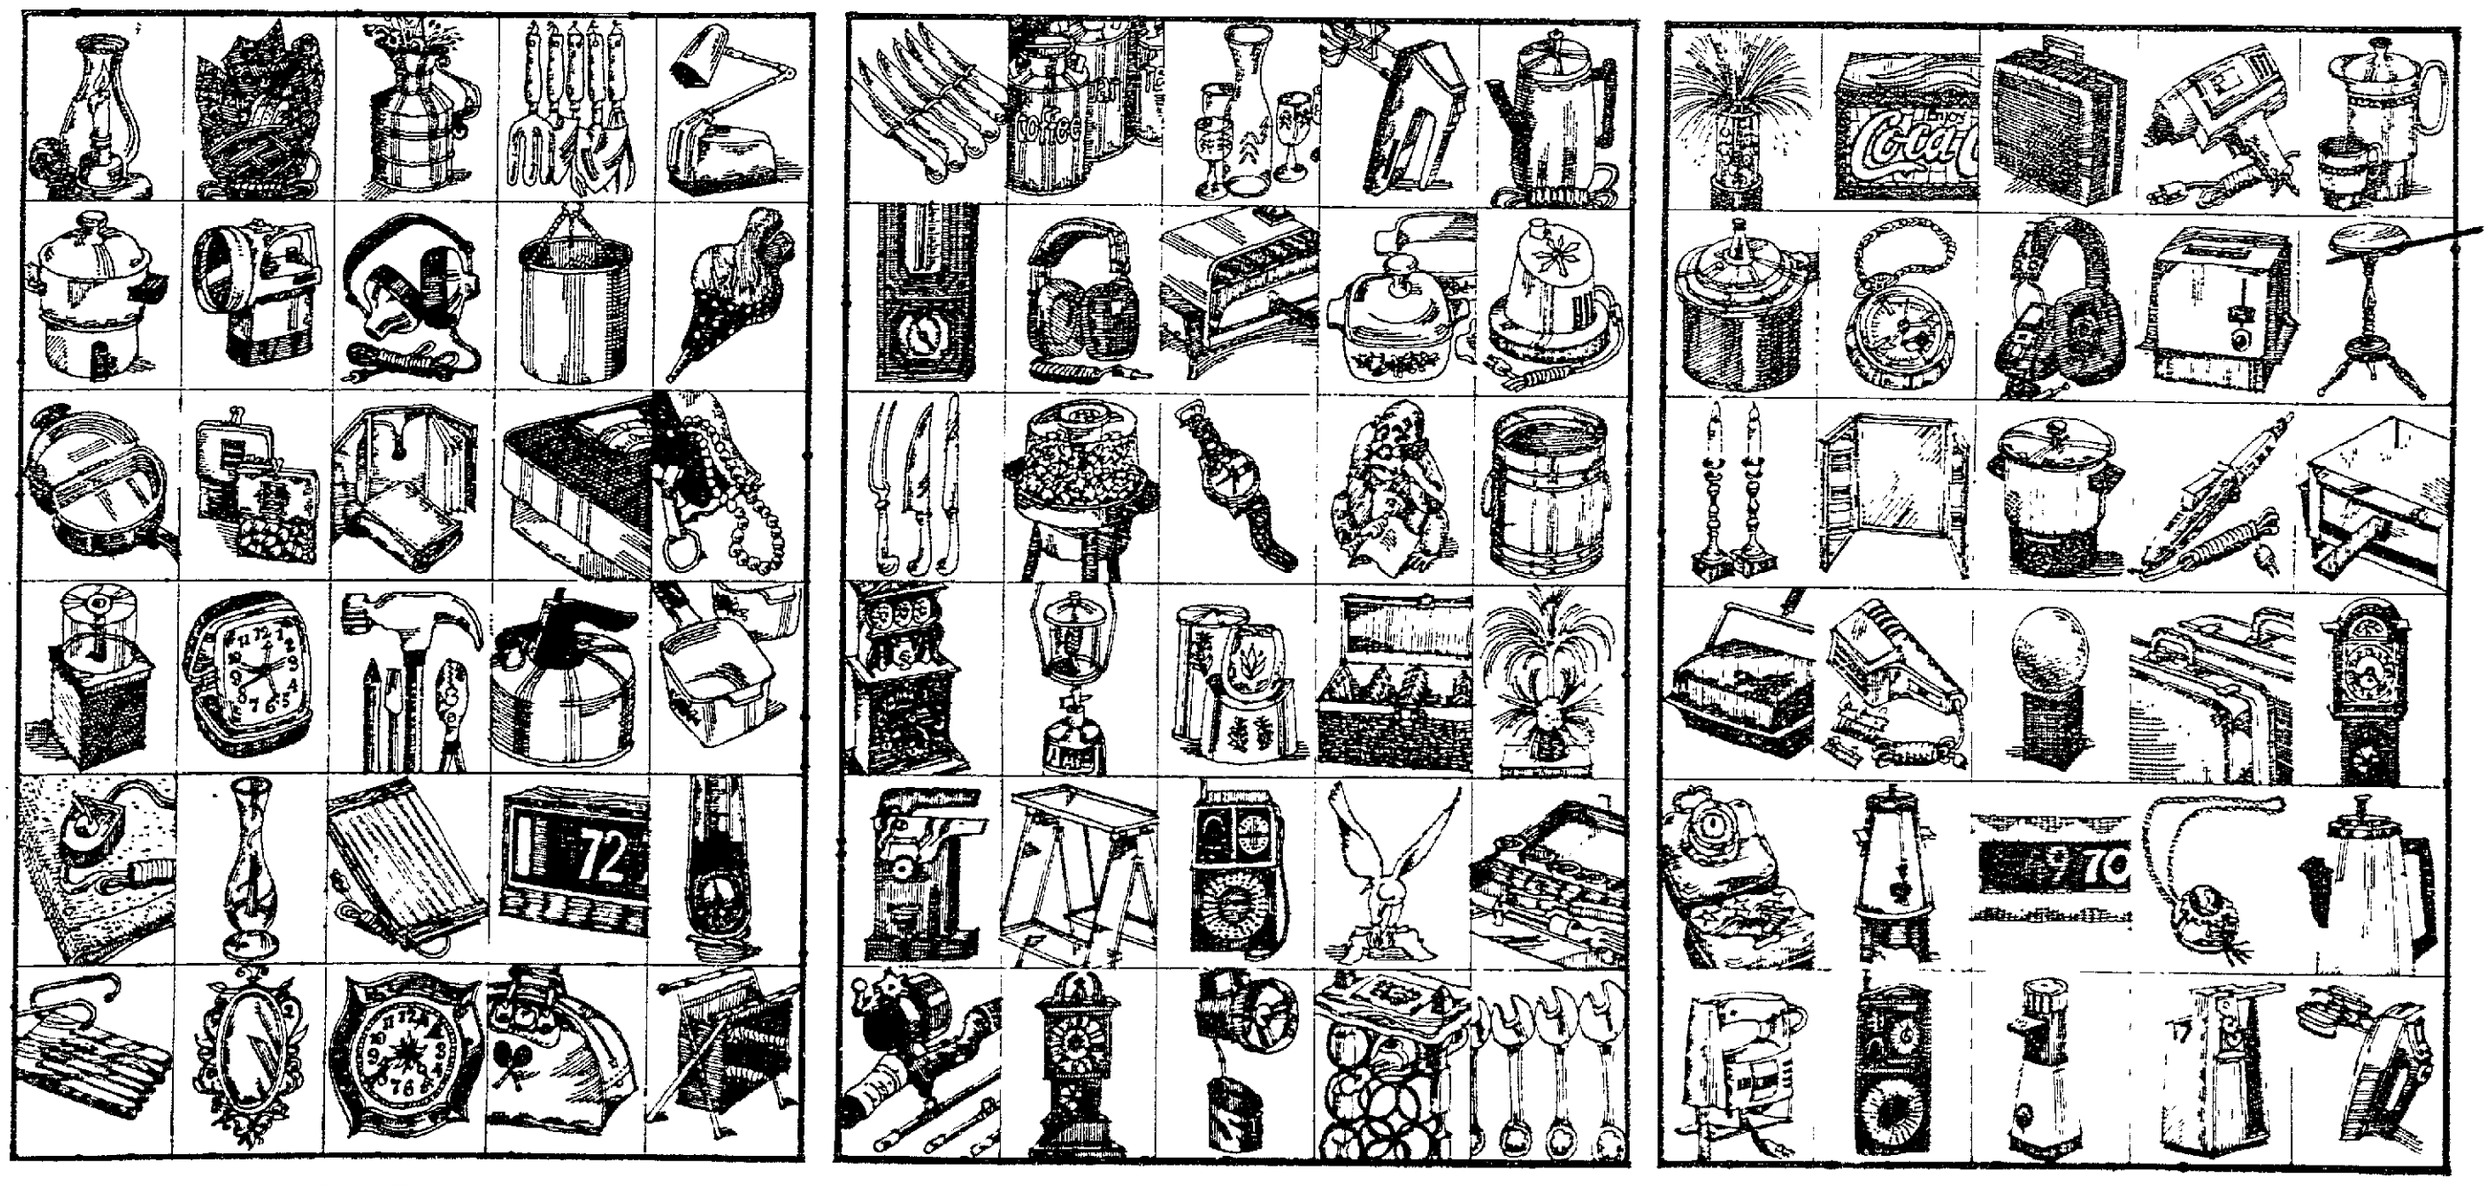

Levy said the 57-year-old endicrinologist was arrested and convicted on false testimony.

"Seventy years ago France honored itself in recognizing the greatest 'judicial error' of its history. In annuling the judgments of two military courts, it put an end to the martyrdom of my grandfather, Capt. Dreyfus," Levy said. "Today the Soviet Union would honor itself in recognizing the judicial error . . . in putting an end . . . to the martyrdom of Dr. Stern, his wife and children.

A Word From Helen!

Helen Davis, Hinky Dinky's Home Economist

THE FRUITS OF SUMMER will be with us all year 'round now that the harvest is over, thanks to modern processing and canning. New pack fruits should be plentiful and economical.

Take the chill off early school mornings with a bowl of warm breakfast fruit. In saucepan, heat the children's favorite fruit, canned peach slices, fruit cocktail, etc. Serve as is or with a sprinkle of cinnamon or a dollop of vanilla ice cream with biscuits or muffins on the side.

For an easy yet elegant holiday dessert, whip some cream and sweeten lightly with powdered sugar. Fold in 2 tablespoons green creme de menthe and chill. Fold in well drained canned peach slices. Serve in Sherbet glasses.

Public Jobs Program Under Fire For Alleged Mismanagement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's public service employment program, designed to create 310,000 jobs in state and local government, is peppered with instances of alleged mismanagement by mayors and governors, an Associated Press study shows.

Labor Department officials concede some problems exist, but say they are under control and concentrated mostly in the Northeast.

But reports of nepotism, political hiring and fiscal sleight-of-hand have prompted the House Labor Committee to begin drafting plans to put any new jobs under control of private, nonprofit organizations, rather than state or local officeholders.

An AP survey of several hundred Labor Department audits completed during the past fiscal year, plus a spot check of news reports around the country, turned up scores of cases where federal jobs money allegedly was misspent by mayors or governors.

Among the worst examples:

— The Justice Department currently is investigating a Labor Department report that more than 200 federally salaried workers in Boston allegedly were used to conduct a door-to-door survey for Mayor Kevin White.

— Labor Department investigators are looking into similar reports of political abuse in New Brunswick, N.J., where the Home News newspaper found that many of the federally funded jobs went to persons with relatives or other connections in the local government.

— The Labor Department recently stripped the city of Philadelphia of much of its power over the public-jobs program there when hiring was found to be based on political connections. A state body now screens hiring.

— Labor Department auditors earlier this year accused Massachusetts of mishandling its public-jobs program for more than two years, and urged that a cut-off of funds be considered. The department currently is considering whether to ask the state to refund some portion of the $2.2 million that auditors said may have been misspent.

— Department auditors last year urged a cut-off of federal funds for Connecticut's public-jobs program, saying as much as $1.5 million may have been misspent. The funds were not suspended, but the department dispatched a special representative on a two-year mission to shape up the state's program. The department is negotiating with the state over the amount of misspent money to be refunded.

— In a nationwide study released last June, the Labor Department's chief auditor said that 16.5 per cent of a statistical sample of public-job holders were hired in violation of federal rules, or lacked proof of proper hiring. The study also criticized the department's Manpower Administration, which runs the public-jobs program, for being too slow to reclaim misspent money from mayors and governors.

The same report, however, said: "For the most part, the (public jobs) program has been effective in increasing employment opportunities in high unemployment areas, and in providing jobs for eligible unemployed and underemployed persons. ... Both the participants and the public benefitted from the program."

The public-jobs program, which dates back in one form or another to 1971, puts federal money in the hands of mayors, governors and other officials for the hiring of school aides, hospital workers, policemen, firemen, clerks or others providing service to the public. The aim of the program is twofold: To create new jobs for the unemployed and to provide new services to the public.

From the outset the program has been faced with a tendency of some state and local officials to spend the federal money for jobs that ordinarily would be provided out of their own tax money.

When this happens, federal money replaces state or local money, and no new jobs are created. To prevent this the Labor Department has set up a complex of rules, generally requiring that persons hired for the federal jobs be out of work for a certain period prior to hiring.

The problem is illustrated by recent testimony to a House subcommittee by former Manpower administrator Malcolm Lovell, who recalled that early in the program a big-city mayor came to him seeking permission to use federal money to prevent what he claimed would be a mass layoff of city employes.

As Lovell recalled it, the mayor said "We are going to lay off 1,500 people. You have financed 1,000 jobs and we want you to allow us to use these 1,000 jobs not to lay off these people."

"I said, 'No, no, you have to wait 30 days.' " Lovell recalled. "He said, 'You are callous.' I said, 'No, no, Mr. Mayor ... ' What happened? They didn't lay off 1,500 people."

Lovell said in that case, 900 other poor, unemployed persons were hired with the federal money.

"While we empathize with the problems of all the unemployed, we are particularly concerned with the increasing number of layoffs among our own employes," said San Juan Mayor Carlos Barcelo, testifying for the National Conference of Mayors.

New York Mayor Abraham Beame, at the same hearing, said, "It has become a point of increasing irony and contention with organized labor that we must terminate or lay off city employes due to local revenue deficits on one hand, while we are conducting a massive hiring program for new employes ... at times to do similar work, on the other."

Critics, like former Johnson administration manpower chief Stanley H. Ruttenberg, say the Labor Department has failed to clamp down on cheating by mayors and governors who use federal public-jobs money to balance their own budgets.

At the same time, state and local officials are under pressure from public unions to avoid layoffs by any means. As Jersey City, N.J. police union president John Carroll put it, "These jobs have got to be saved."

Critics say the Labor Department now is too willing to allow mayors and governors to use the federal money, not to create new jobs for the poor or long-time jobless, but to save jobs of policemen, firemen or teachers who have not been out of work before.

"Congress wrote a very strong maintenance of effort clause into the law, barring substitution of federal funds for local resources," said Ruttenberg, now a private manpower consultant. "But very little effort has been made by the federal government to enforce that provision. In fact, it has been openly disregarded."

Administration officials deny they are going soft. They say the opposite is true.

"Typically, the complaints we get are the feds are in there with heavy boots too much," said Manpower Administrator William H. Kolberg. "We are doing the best we can to police this system."

Some state and local officials reportedly are able to legally bypass federal regulations by using a process called "budget substitution." It enables the officials to place on the federal jobs payroll the salaries of workers who otherwise would have been employed by the local government.

A number of professors estimate that roughly half of the federal public service jobs are swallowed up in this way. If the estimates are correct — and top Labor Department officials say they believe they are — then the 310,000 "new" federally salaries jobs actually amount to only 155,000 jobs that would not otherwise have existed.

Because of the abuses, the House manpower subcommittee has drafted a bill that would put some public-service jobs in the hands of private, nonprofit groups such as charity organizations, local school boards, colleges and antipoverty agencies.

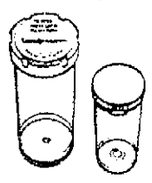

The bill would require that any public-service job be listed publicly for a week before being filled, prohibit nepotism, and require public disclosure of the names and salaries of those hired under the program.

Casinos Open In Late Afternoon

San Juan, P.R. (UPI) — Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon has signed a law permitting Puerto Rico's gambling casinos to be open during the afternoon to accommodate cruise ship passengers and conventioneers.

The law extends casino hours from 4 p.m. to 4 a.m., instead of 8 p.m. to 4 a.m. Casinos operate in the island's luxury hotels. The law also exempts visitors to the casinos from the jacket-and-tie rule from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Strong Winds Bring Cold Front To State

Strong blustery winds, gusting up to around 50 miles per hour in the Panhandle and northern Nebraska, accompanied a cold front moving eastward across the state Tuesday.

The northwesterly winds, with gusts reaching 51 m.p.h. at Valentine and 46 m.p.h. at Alliance, caused blowing dust in some areas.

Drought conditions throughout the entire state make topsoil and dry grasslands dangerously vulnerable to high winds at this time, agricultural experts warned.

Precipitation Tuesday was confined to a few sprinkles in central Nebraska, from south of Broken Bow to east of Ainsworth.

A drop in temperatures, as low as 28 degrees at Imperial, was associated with the cold front.

Winds in Lincoln Tuesday gusted up to 35 m.p.h. while temperatures ranged from a high of 59 down to 44.

Cooler weather is predicted Wednesday in the east with highs only in the 40s. Lows in the state Wednesday are expected to drop into the 20s and upper teens.

Mostly sunny and warmer weather is forecast for the state Thursday with highs in the 50s.

AFL-CIO Chief Says Chances Are Brighter

OMAHA (AP) — The head of the Nebraska AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education said Tuesday he has had a change of mind since he wrote pessimistically about Democratic chances in the 1976 Senate race.

Victor Meyers said in a column in the October edition of The Unionist, AFL-CIO state newspaper: "Without Jim Exon in the Senate race, the chances are slim that the Democratic party can capture the Senate seat."

Gov. Exon announced he would not be a candidate for the nomination.

"Chances have brightened," Meyers said Tuesday.

In the column, Meyers listed the party's likeliest candidates for the Senate race as former party chairman Hess Dyas of Lincoln and Richard Fellman, former state senator from Omaha.

Meyers said his column was written before there were reports that Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky would change his registration from Republican and seek the Democratic nomination.

He said the column also was written before Rep. John McCollister, a candidate for the Republican nomination, introduced New York City's financial plight as an issue in the Nebraska campaign.

The New York situation "is going to play a major part in the campaign," Meyers said.

He said the AFL-CIO and other unions with about 78,000 members in Nebraska disagree with McCollister's statement Saturday that default by New York would hace a "positive effect" in this area.

Meyers said he believes a New York City default could adversely affect the Midlands economy.

He said he did not know how an entry by Zorinsky into the Senate campaign as a Democrat would affect the party's chances or whether the AFL-CIO would support Zorinsky if he were the party's nominee.

Meyers said "we would decide that at the state convention in August."

Zorinsky has declined to comment on a report by Dyas, an announced Senate candidate, that Zorinsky informed him he has made up his mind to enter the race as a Democrat.

"I think it's time the mayor announced what he plans to do," Meyers said.
said.

Turkey Once Timely

New York (UPI)—Turkey as a holiday main dish is a throwback to the days when turkey poults were hatched only in the spring, and matured in time for Thanksgiving and other winter festivals. Although turkey farms now produce birds all year, the November-December holiday season accounts for nearly half the yearly output.

Prince Charles Is Nonsmoker Of The Year

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles has been named "nonsmoker of the year" by the National Society of Non-Smokers because he refused to allow fellow guests to smoke until the end of a recent dinner party he attended.

British custom bans smoking at dinners until after a toast to the monarch's health. At one time, this toast was delivered as coffee was served, but in recent years the toast has been coming after the soup course in order to allow heavy smokers, such as the prince's aunt, Princess Margaret, to light up between courses.

At a dinner given by a cricket fans organization recently, Charles was asked to propose the toast after the soup course, but he refused. All diners had to wait until coffee was served before they could smoke.

Rape Suspect Held

Police apprehended an 18-year-old Lincoln man Tuesday night in connection with the rape of an 18-year-old Lincoln woman Sunday night. The suspect is being held pending the filing of charges, Police said.

Krupp Home Robbed

Munich, West Germany (AP) — Three masked gunmen broke into a Krupp family home in suburban Munich, threatened elderly Anneliese von Bohlen und Halbach and escaped with jewels valued at $800,000, police said.

Labels Won't List Ingredients

Washington (UPI) — After three years of study the government Tuesday scrapped plans to require that ingredients be listed on the labels of beer, wine and liquor.

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said cost, international trade relations and the "question of whether there was any actual consumer benefit" prompted it to abandon the project.

Dr. Michael Jacobson, co-director for the Center for Science in the Public Interest who petitioned the agency for the labels in 1972, called the action another example of "a government regulatory agency bowing to industry pressure, and consumers are left to fend for themselves."

Jacobson's 1972 petition claimed that several years before the "absence of labeling contributed to the deaths of a number of men who were poisoned by a cobalt additive in their beer."

School Boundary Shifts Eyed

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

To stay popular, wise school superintendents say, they must never do two things: change school building attendance boundaries or revise report cards.

Since report cards have already been overhauled recently, Supt. John Prasch went double-or-nothing to disprove the admonition Tuesday, taking the Lincoln Board of Education another step closer to moving boundaries.

But Prasch said the changes may scarcely hamper parents' wishes.

Students will have little trouble transferring to schools outside their home attendance zone, he explained, since fewer buildings will be "closed" to transfers.

Prasch said he'll likely recommend the board deny transfers next school year only to Southeast and East High Schools, Irving Junior High, West Lincoln and Calvert Elementary Schools. Calvert would be "closed" to accommodate a large kindergarten-to-first-grade class.

Because of declining enrollment, Culler Junior High might be replaced on the "open" transfer list, Prasch said.

Significant boundary changes proposed include making West Lincoln Elementary a "walk-in" school only and placing northeast Belmont residents in the McPhee School zone; adjusting the separation lines between Holmes and Calvert, Lefler and Irving, Lincoln High and East High; enlarging the Dawes limit.

Principals have been airing the proposals with parents. The board, after months-long review, will act on the final changes in December or possibly January.

The board unanimously approved a new German exchange program. Students from Kassel will study three weeks in Lincoln schools and stay in homes of Lincoln German students, who later will travel to Kassel, and live with the exchange families while attending German school.

Lincoln teachers will accompany, as sponsors, those eligible students who have studied German for two or more years. Foreign language consultant Mary Grauer said because of the "parent commitment," the exchange program is less costly.

Miss Brauer said study hours for French and Spanish students the past five years have been successful. Students take a 15- to 20-hour language and cultural preparatory course, and earn five credits in the program abroad.

Last year, 93% of the 114 students who participated rated the programs excellent or good. Three of four students were girls, 61% in 9th grade, 23% in 10th and 16% in 11th.

Prasch presented an update on class size in junior and senior high schools, responding to concerns the ratio of students to teachers may be too large.

Few teachers serve more than 36 students, he said, and larger classes of 41 or more are intentionally designed that way to serve music, typing and physical education groups, for example.

But Prasch said he's concerned about some "bunching" in junior high English and social studies classes, as well as some senior high groups of 15 or less which means other classes may be overcrowded.

Drop-outs and mid-year graduates, however, will improve the situation by reducing the size of larger classes, he said.

In other business, the board:

—Won Lincoln Area PTA Council commendation for its conduct of open meetings.

—Accepted a gift in memory of Lincoln High School art department chairman Mrs. Bert Alfrey, and endorsed a memorial fund to support the school permanent art collection.

—Learned that "Nation's Schools" magazine presented two awards to the district publications and information department for producing outstanding brochures serving teachers and kindergarteners.

—Endorsed the Community Bicentennial Astronomical Observatory Project, to be built at Holmes Park and administered by the city. Private building funds will be sought. The observatory will serve Lincoln students and teachers.

—Was told the district received $156,756 or only 14% of its total anticipated first-quarter claim under LB403, state special education law.

—Learned the district was paid $580 in winning a 1974 class action suit against Swift Instruments, regarding microscope purchases.

—Approved $18,553 in bids by Olson Bros. Construction Co. of Lincoln to replace and repair roofing at Mickle Junior High and Calvert Elementary School.

Monthly School Payments Favored

What the Legislature enacted temporarily Tuesday to avert a cash crisis is what the Lincoln Public Schools would like to stay in effect permanently.

LB3 allows the state treasurer to make monthly payments to governmental units such as Lincoln schools. The awards may lag behind what's owed beginning in January, with a final adjustment due in July when state receipts catch up with expenses.

Getting money monthly instead of quarterly is "more appropriate" in the long run, because "we can do better budgeting," said Robert Den Hartog, business affairs associate superintendent. It "reduces the amount of the beginning balance we have to have."

Den Hartog was referring to the often controversial, multimillion dollar cash balance the Lincoln School District preserves to pay bills due before budgeted income arrives.

"I hate to say, 'I told you so,' " Supt. John Prasch said, but indulged: "Had we been right to the bare line on the balance," as critics favored, current cash flow problems "would've been much more serious."

'Good Sense'

Making monthly payments on a permanent basis would "make good sense." Prasch told the Lincoln Board of Education, noting its budget is more than 75% dependent upon property tax receipts. That would put the timing burden on the state instead of local taxpayers.

The district cash reserves will be reduced temporarily, Prasch said, as they apply to the difference in state underpayments, particularly for special education programs, state aid and from educational lands revenues.

The board agreed to oppose two resolutions to be considered Thursday by the Nebraska State School Boards Association (NSSBA) Delegate Assembly.

Called 'Ridiculous'

One resolution would recommend the Legislature kill the Lincoln city sales tax option. Prasch discounted proponents' claims that would allow state school aid increases, and Board President Lou Roper called it "ridiculous."

The city sales tax raises the equivalent of about 12 mills in property taxation, which Lincoln couldn't levy because the city is already near its legal limit, Prasch said.

The second resolution the board pledged to fight would have the NSSBA call for abolishing the Nebraska Professional Practices Commission, the state teacher certification and professional review agency.

Prasch cited "some confusion" that the commission as an outside agency can affect local school boards' decisions on teacher employment, which he said isn't true.

Board members favored NSSBA resolutions which urged increasing state legislators' pay and hiring an attorney for the Nebraska education commissioner. They supported another which would reorganize school districts.

Right Questioned

"I really don't know that it's right for us in Lincoln to jam down the throats" of rural districts their consolidation or reorganization, Roper said. But "in the long run," their inefficiency affects urban districts, Prasch noted.

He said the "real evil" is the protection of tax islands" which are an issue in sparsely populated districts.

The board also favored local determination of how school board members are elected, at large, by districts, or both. A resolution opposing a federal collective bargaining law won board support.

But Prasch said while such a law is "eventually" needed, it would result in a "power shift." Thus he suggested more study on the "dramatic" differences between benefits for private- and public-sector employes.

Board member Pearl Goldenstein said she'll offer two resolutions for NSSBA consideration. One affirms multicultural school programs; the other urges elimination of educators' discrimination against women and offering opportunities for women to achieve their full potential.

Athletic Building Corp. Decides To Arrange Irving Gym Funding

The Lincoln Schools Athletic Building Corp. decided Tuesday to arrange financing for the recreation center-gym addition at Irving Junior High School, and to consult an advisory committee of local financiers.

The Lincoln Board of Education reviewed bids on the $1.1 million city-school joint project, and agreed to award contracts on Nov. 25.

The corporation board voted to assume the entire debt, which the city and school district will each retire in lease-purchase agreements by April 1978, or possibly mid-1977.

Supt. John Prasch said spreading the payment over two years through the corporation will allow the project to proceed; otherwise, the school district's tight building fund already committed to projects underway could not accommodate Irving contracts.

The school board will consider a recommendation to award the general contract to Kingery Construction Co., whose base bid was $607,810; mechanical to W.R. Lesoing Co., $179,976, and electrical to DND Electric, $74,191.

The board allowed Dwight Nelson Construction Co. to withdraw the low bid of $528,922 because of a technical error.

Board members agreed to consider to a $7,120 deduction from Kingery's base bid for alternate exterior work, and an addition of $7,814 for a locker room floor.

But they opposed a recommendation to deduct $2,251 for using paint in showers and rest rooms, favoring that cost for tile.

Prasch proposed the board also approve $65,161 in alternate mechanical bids and $19,227 in electrical alternates for the city's portion and air conditioning.

Total cost to the school district will be $859,820, and city costs will be $251,264 (plus architects' fees), for a grand total of $1,111,104. If the board approves the tile addition, the sum would increase to $1,113,555.

Prasch said he'll recommend further that the board authorize negotiations with Kingery to reduce the contract by $35,352, by removing site work items, and direct the architect to prorate those costs with the city.

School Business Officer's Role Growing

The school business officer is "no longer the head bookkeeper with dollar signs in his eyes. He is a senior partner" in the team of school district managers, Robert Den Hartog said.

Associate superintendent for business affairs of the Lincoln Public Schools, Den Hartog is national president of the Association of School Business Officials (ASBO).

Den Hartog's talk at the recent annual ASBO conference was quoted at length in "Education USA," published by the National School Public Relations Association.

No one person, not even the superintendent, is big enough to run today's complex school district, Den Hartog said. The business officer is increasingly being recognized as having the most knowledge of the district's true operation — though that recognition has much room for growth.

Thus, while talk about the school management team hasn't always matched action, the business officer is starting to take his rightful place at the head of the table, he said.

However, Den Hartog warned that school business officers must always remember they are second in line and must never try to supplant the superintendent, Education USA noted.

"There is a danger of political infighting; an ambitious business officer can withhold information to make the superintendent look inept, and unscrupulous board members can pit the two officials against each other for political reasons," he said.

"The superintendent must always be first," said Den Hartog, a former superintendent himself. "The business officer must be next in line to support the superintendent."

Referring to a three-way power team, Den Hartog said the business officer oversees economic implications of suggested policy, the curriculum officer deals with the instructional implications and the superintendent fits the two into political realities of the school district to reach decisions.

While superintendents average only three years on a job, Education USA reported that the business officer is emerging as the more permanent top executive. Of the $16 billion spent nationally in education last year, chief business officers served in districts that spent 85% of that, or $52 billion.

Yet only 46% of the business officers surveyed considered themselves part of the top administrative team. ASBO won't lobby in Washington, D.C., but will expand its political presence.

"Historically," Den Hartog said, "ASBO has been introverted, but now it needs to be recognized as a body with a part to play in educational decision-making.

"For example, when government officials want to know the effect of energy policies on schools, they should ask ASBO. They have not done so because ASBO has not had any real national recognition."

Supporters Of Picketing Bill Win A Round

Washington (AP) — Supporters of the bill to give striking building trades unions the right to close down entire construction sites won an important initial victory in the Senate Tuesday.

They succeeded in ending debate by a 68-30 vote, six more than required, on Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield's motion to consider the bill.

The measure, known as the common site picketing bill, passed the House in July.

It would make it lawful for a union to picket an entire construction site even though its dispute may be with only one subcontractor.

Cloture, a vote to end debate, will have to be invoked again to stop a filibuster against the measure itself, but the bill's managers said they were confident they could win this test, too

A few of the senators who voted for the initial cloture oppose the bill and said they would not vote for the second anti-filibuster move. They said they were simply supporting Mansfield's authority to schedule legislation.

Voting to end debate were 48 Democrats and 18 Republicans. Opposed were 11 Democrats and 19 Republicans.

Leaders kept the Senate in session after the cloture vote until it adopted the motion to take up the bill and thus made it the pending business.

However, they had to concede to the measure's opponents a delay in the cloture vote on passage of the bill itself until Friday. The leaders had wanted this test on Thursday.

The opponents made clear they were not dropping their fight and would continue to use every weapon to try to prevent final passage.

Before the Senate adjourned, Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., offered as a substitute for the construction bill the proposal to guarantee New York City bonds.

The measure would, in effect, overturn a 1951 Supreme Court decision holding that a union could picket only the subcontractor involved.

Picketing the entire site would be illegal under the Taft-Hartley Law because it would amount to a secondary boycott, the court held.

The unions contend they are seeking only the right that industrial unions have to close down an entire factory in a fight with a company.

They say that, in the construction industry, the general contractor and subcontractors are engaged in a single, co-ordinated enterprise and should be treated as one entity

Two Oppose Move

Washington (AP) — Nebraska's Republican Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska voted Tuesday against limiting debate on the common site picketing bill.

Amateur Leaves Worry To Professional Actors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — You might think that a rookie film actor would have qualms about being thrown into a cast with such stars as Alec Guinness, David Niven, Maggie Smith and Peter Sellers.

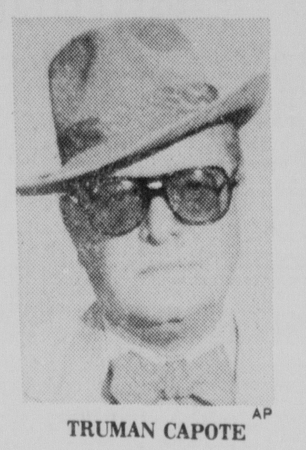

Not Truman Capote. He comments with his customary hauteur: "I have absolutely nothing to lose. I'm an amateur. They're professionals. They're the ones who should be worried."

Capote was preparing to start his role in "Murder by Death," the Neil Simon comedy in which he plays a millionaire eccentric who assembles the five greatest detectives in the world to solve a murder mystery. Or is there a real murder?

"It's hard to say," comments Capote. "The whole story is mad, a kind of 'Alice in Wonderland' in which no one is sure of anything."

The casting seems apt. With his broad forehead and a scowl behind dark glasses, Capote conveys the menace of Sydney Greenstreet, though without the same girth. Never one to shun the limelight, the fledgling actor seems to be having the time of his life.

How did it all happen?

TRUMAN CAPOTE AP

"Some time ago Saint Subber, who produced most of Simon's plays, told me, 'Neil is writing a screenplay for you.' I forgot all about it until a few months ago when a script arrived for me at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel. Then (producer) Ray Stark called and asked if I would do it. I said I would have to think about it. I did, and accepted.

Some of his detractors might say that Truman Capote has been acting all along, but his performing has been limited to readings of his own works for recordings and for college audiences. "That's acting, really," he said. "As I read, I take on all the parts, the same as Charles Dickens and Mark Twain did with their readings. I think I do it rather well."

Capote added that he is not exactly a novice to film making, having written several scripts and being present during the filming of such movies as "Beat the Devil" and "The Innocents," the 1962 version of "The Turn of the Screw."

The author shrugs off suggestions that such activities as movie acting and TV talk show appearances have diminished his literary output. He has not produced a major work since "In Cold Blood," his 1969 account of a Kansas family murder.

"I am not a compulsive writer like Tennessee (Williams), who has a heart attack if he doesn't get something written before noon," he admitted. "Writing is extremely hard work; only amateurs like to write.

"It's my work. It's my life. I have to bear the brunt of how my works are received, and I don't intend to throw any of them out before I believe they are ready."

He pointed out that he spent six years in researching and writing "In Cold Blood" and he expects to require as much or more time on his next book, "Answered Prayers."

A portion of the new book was published this month in Esquire magazine, and it provides a tantalizing glimpse. Not to mention scandalizing. It depicts a long luncheon at a posh New York restaurant, with real-life and fictional characters gossiping about peccadillos of the jet and other sets.

Among the real figures portrayed are Mrs. Walter Matthau, Gloria Vanderbilt, Jackie Kennedy Onassis and Lee Radziwill. Readers naturally wonder how Capote could dare put such revealing words into their mouths.

"I showed them the story, of course," Capote said. "They not only gave their permissions; they were delighted. Well, perhaps Jackie was not entirely so."

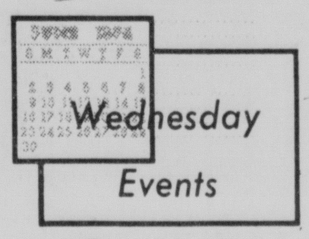

Only one of the short story's characters, a listener called Jonesie, will be a principal figure in the novel, he said. He will continue releasing pieces of the novel, but not to his old stomping grounds, The New Yorker — "They insist on polite language over there."

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — A day of sunshine and joy around the scatter. Moppets off to school — "Can I have a dollar?" I said: "For heaven's sake, when I was your age I was lucky to get a dime."

Inflation is catching up with us even in the dawning hours. The government has a lot of fuzzy reasons for this. But I think it begins before school. Children start off the inflated day.

A few years ago, a 13-year-old boy named Richard took a Kennedy half dollar to a coin shop. The owner offered him $10,000 for it.

The coin was dated 1961. Kennedy half dollars were not minted until 1964. Coin collectors are wild about such mistakes. They pay enormous prices for them.

☆ ☆ ☆

How did Richard pick up this lucky half? He said: "One day I saw my mother spill some coins on the kitchen table. I looked through them and saw the Kennedy with the 1961 date."

Richard had been reading coin catalogues, and he was not behind the door when the brains were passed out.

Said Richard: "I casually walked to my room and got five dimes from my dime bank. I came back to the kitchen and very casually, in my most normal voice, I said: 'Hey Mom, how about trading me this half dollar for the five dimes?' "

☆ ☆ ☆

Richard said: "I waited for her answer and when she said 'yes,' I quietly laid the dimes down and picked up the half."

So when other boys might have showed excitement or anxiety, Richard kept his cool. Euchred his mama out of ten Gs.

Richard should be about 21 now. A wolf of Wall Street unleashed on the economy. Find Richard and you'll find how we are being taken to the inflation cleaners. That's my solution.

☆ ☆ ☆

Much ado in the journals about New York City which is busted as bad as anybody can be. All the king's horses and all the king's men plus Howard Cosell can't seem to put the Big Apple together again.

Cosell made a passionate plea for New York, coast to coast, the other night on "Cosell Live."

At the same time, the lively New York Daily News headlined the President's answer:

FORD TO CITY
"DROP DEAD"

☆ ☆ ☆

Can't remember Cosell's exact words. But it was something like "we're all in this together. No man is an island" and other for whom the bell tolls thoughts.

New York's troubles don't seem to trouble anybody around here. Most people think New York is kind of an uppity, smart Alec town anyway. They enjoy seeing city slickers suffer a little.

Author Of Bestseller Is Former Detective

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Hi, Joe, you're doing great. We're real proud of you."

That was the kind of greeting Joseph Wambaugh received when he paid a return visit to an East Los Angeles cafe he frequented as a cop on the beat. The waitress gave him a hug, an assistant district attorney exchanged a few memories, a gas station owner talked over old times.

They remembered Joe Wambaugh as a detective in the burglary division of Hollenbeck Station. No matter that he was now a frequenter of bestseller lists and TV talk shows and on his way to being a millionaire.

His latest book, "The Choirboys," will help him along the way. It is selling faster and getting better reviews than any of his three previous books.

"Everything is going so well I'm getting nervous," he remarked.

Wambaugh, 38, wrote his own movie script of "The Choirboys" and sold it to Lorimar Productions, the "Waltons" people. The story of off-duty cops who meet and roister in Los Angeles' MacArthur Park, it is by no means family entertainment.

"The movie will be a hard 'R,' " admitted Wambaugh, referring to the rating code's classification of Restricted.

Right To Charge Account Not Guaranteed By Law

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — The Equal Credit Opportunity Act does not give women a "right" to their own charge accounts, or credit in their own names. In fact, many women who march into stores expecting different treatment under the new law will find things in many respects the same.

All the law promises is equal treatment for "creditworthy" women. And to be creditworthy you need income or property of your own, besides a good credit history. Here's what the law means, for various groups of women:

If you are married and don't work outside the home, you will probably still be unable to get a loan or charge account for which you alone are responsible. But this isn't discrimination; a man without income couldn't get a loan either.

As in the past, you will be asked your husband's income and credit references. The account will be granted on the basis of his creditworthiness, and he (or both of you) will be responsible for the bills.

—Wives in community property states are in a stronger position. The law provides that half your husband's earnings are yours; therefore, you may be considered creditworthy in your own right even though you don't hold a job. The lender is entitled to investigate your husband's credit history. If it's good enough to qualify him for a loan, it's good enough for you, too.

—If you are married, with no income, but want to change your charge accounts over to your own name you probably can — as long as your husband's liability for the bills is clearly established. The store cannot force you to use your husband's name rather than your own. However, make sure this change won't prevent your husband from using the account himself.

Also, you can maintain an account in your maiden name that was granted before your marriage (although if you quit your job, your husband may have to guarantee your debts).

—Women who have low-paying jobs will be in about the same boat as the woman who stays home. Her earnings alone won't qualify her for much, if any, credit, so she'll have to depend in part on her husband's income.

Jane Bryant Quinn

—A married woman with enough income or property to be responsible for herself (and not living in a state that restricts her right to manage her property) can apply for a loan based entirely on her own means.

In that case, she must be treated exactly as a man would be in her circumstances: No demands that her father or husband cosign the loan. No stricter credit terms than a man would have. No assumptions that she's less responsible. However, where her husband has an interest in her income or property, as in a community property states, his signature can still be required.

—A single woman, who supports herself, must receive the same consideration a man would in her circumstances.

—Women who are newly divorced or widowed, and signal that fact to the store by changing the name on their accounts, will find their credit situation improved but not secured. If you got your account based in any way on your husband's income, the store can require you to reapply for credit in your own right. Should they find you uncreditworthy, they can close or limit the account.

But you are ahead in two respects: You can use the past history of the account as proof of your personal reliability. And the store can't automatically discount your alimony income (if you rely on it) without examining whether it's likely to be paid.

If you were previously granted an account in your own right, and then are divorced or widowed, the store cannot automatically close your account or change its terms. They first must have evidence that you can't pay. Skipping two monthly bills in a row, however, is considered "evidence." So even if you're going through an emotionally difficult period, don't let the bills stack up. Once lost, a charge account may be hard to get back.

—The Equal Credit Act grants rights, but also imposes responsibilities. Married women can no longer be denied the benefits of a good family credit record — but neither can they be sheltered from the effects of a bad one. Credit bureaus will be carrying the credit history in both your names.

If you and your husband are sloppy about paying your bills, this fact will return to haunt you should you ever find yourself on your own. The new law makes it just as important for you, as for your husband, to keep your financial house in order.

Lee Enterprises Net Income Up 31% For Year

Davenport, Iowa (AP) — Lee Enterprises, Inc., Tuesday reported a 31 per cent increase in net income for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30.

Fourth quarter net income for the newspaper and broadcast firm was up 38 per cent. Officials said a significant part of the increases were contributed by NAPP Systems USA, Inc., the company's half owned photo polymer printing plate venture.

Lloyd Schermer, Lee president, said fiscal year net income totaled $7.2 million or $2.15 per common share compared with $5.5 million or $1.65 per common share a year ago.

Net income in the fourth quarter was $2,041,000 or 61 cents per common share, compared with $1.5 million or 44 cents per share last year.

Lee operates newspapers in Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Montana and Oregon in addition to The Lincoln Star, and has broadcast properties in Illinois, Iowa and West Virginia.

Stock Mart Records Mild Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Intimations that Washington attitudes against federal help for New York City might be softening helped produce a mild advance in the stock market Tuesday.

Trading was restrained by the observance of Veterans Day in many states.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks registered a 3.07 gain to 838.55.

The over-all count on the New York Stock Exchange showed a more emphatic 870-to-483 edge for gainers over losers among the 1,810 issues changing hands.

Big Board volume came to 14.64 million shares, down from 14.91 million on Monday.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, told a group of Republican congressmen Tuesday morning he had become increasingly concerned over the possible effects a default by New York City might bring.

He said he hadn't yet switched to the view that federal aid to the financially strapped city was necessary. But he added that he was "perhaps closer to such a conclusion than I have been in the past."

Burns has been a prominent opponent of the idea of such aid, along wih President Ford and Treasury Secretary William E. Simon.

Analysts said the market also drew some support from downward leanings in interest rates.

The government reported late Monday that yields on 13-week Treasury bills fell to a five-month low at the latest auction. And speculation continued to circulate that the Fed might soon cut its discount rate—the rate it charges on loans to its member commercial banks.

On the negative side, analysts said, the slowness of other major banks to match a prime rate reduction posted last Friday by New York's First National City Bank raised some questions over how much further the downtrend in rates would go.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was up .53 to 89.87 on the day, and the NYSE composite index gained .29 to 47.52.

Otis Elevator, the Big Board volume leader, jumped 3¼ to 44¼. United Technologies raised its bid for Otis stock from $42 to $44 a share, and Otis directors said they wouldn't take a position either for or against the new offer.

United Technologies declined ⅞ to 49⅛.

Alcoa, also active, dipped ¾ to 36⅜. The company said it had decided against building an aluminum rolling mill at a previously selected site near Brandeburg, Ky.

Bergman Visits Hollywood Studio

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Swedish film maker Ingmar Bergman made his first trip to Hollywood a busman's holiday by visiting a movie set.

The reclusive director flew here from Stockholm last Sunday to complete contracts with producer Dino De Laurentiis, who backed the latest Bergman film, "Face to Face." Bergman paid a call on the location of "St. Ives," and learned from star Charles Bronson how movie machine guns spray cars with bullets.

Declining interviews, Bergman returned to Stockholm after a five-day visit.

A Word From Helen!

Helen Davis, Hinky Dinky's Home Economist

THE FRUITS OF SUMMER will be with us all year 'round now that the harvest is over, thanks to modern processing and canning. New pack fruits should be plentiful and economical.

Take the chill off early school mornings with a bowl of warm breakfast fruit. In saucepan, heat the children's favorite fruit, canned peach slices, fruit cocktail, etc. Serve as is or with a sprinkle of cinnamon or a dollop of vanilla ice cream with biscuits or muffins on the side.

For an easy yet elegant holiday dessert, whip some cream and sweeten lightly with powdered sugar. Fold in 2 tablespoons green creme de menthe and chill. Fold in well drained canned peach slices. Serve in Sherbet glasses.

Strong Winds Bring Cold Front To State

Strong blustery winds, gusting up to around 50 miles per hour in the Panhandle and northern Nebraska, accompanied a cold front moving eastward across the state Tuesday.

The northwesterly winds, with gusts reaching 51 m.p.h. at Valentine and 46 m.p.h. at Alliance, caused blowing dust in some areas.

Drought conditions throughout the entire state make topsoil and dry grasslands dangerously vulnerable to high winds at this time, agricultural experts warned.

Precipitation Tuesday was confined to a few sprinkles in central Nebraska, from south of Broken Bow to east of Ainsworth.

A drop in temperatures, as low as 28 degrees at Imperial, was associated with the cold front.

Winds in Lincoln Tuesday gusted up to 35 m.p.h. while temperatures ranged from a high of 59 down to 44.

Cooler weather is predicted Wednesday in the east with highs only in the 40s. Lows in the state Wednesday are expected to drop into the 20s and upper teens.

Mostly sunny and warmer weather is forecast for the state Thursday with highs in the 50s.

AFL-CIO Chief Says Chances Are Brighter

OMAHA (AP) — The head of the Nebraska AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education said Tuesday he has had a change of mind since he wrote pessimistically about Democratic chances in the 1976 Senate race.

Victor Meyers said in a column in the October edition of The Unionist, AFL-CIO state newspaper: "Without Jim Exon in the Senate race, the chances are slim that the Democratic party can capture the Senate seat."

Gov. Exon announced he would not be a candidate for the nomination.

"Chances have brightened," Meyers said Tuesday.

In the column, Meyers listed the party's likeliest candidates for the Senate race as former party chairman Hess Dyas of Lincoln and Richard Fellman, former state senator from Omaha.

Meyers said his column was written before there were reports that Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky would change his registration from Republican and seek the Democratic nomination.

He said the column also was written before Rep. John McCollister, a candidate for the Republican nomination, introduced New York City's financial plight as an issue in the Nebraska campaign.

The New York situation "is going to play a major part in the campaign," Meyers said.

He said the AFL-CIO and other unions with about 78,000 members in Nebraska disagree with McCollister's statement Saturday that default by New York would hace a "positive effect" in this area.

Meyers said he believes a New York City default could adversely affect the Midlands economy.

He said he did not know how an entry by Zorinsky into the Senate campaign as a Democrat would affect the party's chances or whether the AFL-CIO would support Zorinsky if he were the party's nominee.

Meyers said "we would decide that at the state convention in August."

Zorinsky has declined to comment on a report by Dyas, an announced Senate candidate, that Zorinsky informed him he has made up his mind to enter the race as a Democrat.

"I think it's time the mayor announced what he plans to do," Meyers said.

Turkey Once Timely

New York (UPI)—Turkey as a holiday main dish is a throwback to the days when turkey poults were hatched only in the spring, and matured in time for Thanksgiving and other winter festivals. Although turkey farms now produce birds all year, the November-December holiday season accounts for nearly half the yearly output.

Prince Charles Is Nonsmoker Of The Year

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles has been named "nonsmoker of the year" by the National Society of Non-Smokers because he refused to allow fellow guests to smoke until the end of a recent dinner party he attended.

British custom bans smoking at dinners until after a toast to the monarch's health. At one time, this toast was delivered as coffee was served, but in recent years the toast has been coming after the soup course in order to allow heavy smokers, such as the prince's aunt, Princess Margaret, to light up between courses.

At a dinner given by a cricket fans organization recently, Charles was asked to propose the toast after the soup course, but he refused. All diners had to wait until coffee was served before they could smoke.

Labels Won't List Ingredients

Washington (UPI) — After three years of study the government Tuesday scrapped plans to require that ingredients be listed on the labels of beer, wine and liquor.

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said cost, international trade relations and the "question of whether there was any actual consumer benefit" prompted it to abandon the project.

Dr. Michael Jacobson, co-director for the Center for Science in the Public Interest who petitioned the agency for the labels in 1972, called the action another example of "a government regulatory agency bowing to industry pressure, and consumers are left to fend for themselves."

Jacobson's 1972 petition claimed that several years before the "absence of labeling contributed to the deaths of a number of men who were poisoned by a cobalt additive in their beer."

For the past two years or so we have been plagued with interference of our TV set by what we believe to be citizen's band or ham radio operators. It sometimes drowns out the audio and obscures the picture. Are there any laws to protect us from this? Who can help us?

—The Smith Family, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: You're one among many families who are getting static from these radio operators. According to a spokesman for the Federal Information Center in Omaha, operators whose radios have more power than the legal limits are causing growing problems of interference with commercial radio and television signals. The Federal Communications Commission attempts to investigate complaints such as yours, but the offending operators often are impossible to identify. You should send your complaint in writing to Federal Communications Commission, 1703 Federal Building, 601 E. 12th St., Kansas City, Mo. 64106.

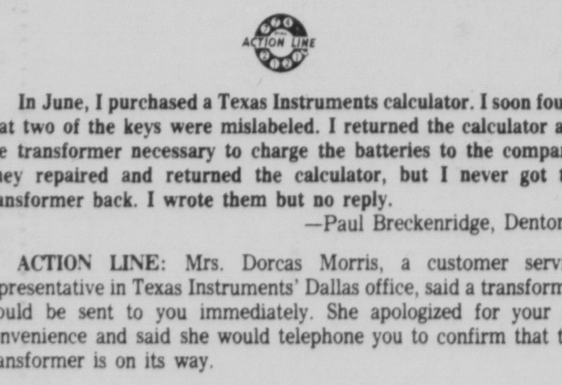

I was wondering when they are going to pave Van Dorn between Normal Blvd. and 70th. It should be called Washboard Ave.

—Mrs. Charles Brady, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The city has no plans to pave that section of road, and the reason for that decision explains all the other sections of unpaved road in Lincoln, too. It's the policy of most cities, including Lincoln, that street improvements such as graveling or paving are the financial responsibility of the persons who own the land bordered by the road. The City Council will consider creating a special graveling or paving district if at least one landowner in the area petitions it to do so. Other area landowners may support or oppose the district at a public hearing, according to Bob Snow, public assistance officer for the Public Works Dept. The required petition forms can be obtained from the Public Works office in the County-City Building. The city arranges for the work to be done, but the landowners pay for it. The city can do some maintenance work at its expense, and Snow said Van Dorn between Normal Blvd. and 70th St. was graded and flushed last week.

I heard on a radio program contest that Nebraska was purchased from Napoleon. Is this true? Who was Nebraska purchased from or where did it come from?

—Josephine, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: What you heard was correct. If Napoleon hadn't had money and foreign policy troubles in the early part of the last century, Nebraskans might be speaking French today. The United States bought what is roughly the western half of the Mississippi River basin, or the central United States today, from Napoleonic France in 1803. President Thomas Jefferson had James Monroe, later a president himself, negotiate the deal with Napoleon, who was eager to sell because of impending war with Great Britain and because France's treasury was depleted. The treaty paying France $27,267,622 for 828,000 square miles was signed May 2, 1803. It doubled the size of the United States for less than 3¢ an acre.

I shipped some lamps via Greyhound Bus Lines to Panhandle, Tex., in August. One box was completely destroyed. Can you help me collect the damages?

—Bill Baird, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Your packages didn't go all the way to Panhandle on Greyhound and that may account for the problem you're having collecting damages. Edwin Dorsey, head Greyhound agent for Lincoln, said your freight was transferred to Continental Trailways Bus Lines at Amarillo, Tex., because Greyhound doesn't serve Panhandle directly. To expedite the settling of your claim, write to Greyhound Bus Lines Baggage and Express Claims, J. B. Widner, 1158 Mission St., San Francisco, Calif. 94103.

In June, I purchased a Texas Instruments calculator. I soon found that two of the keys were mislabeled. I returned the calculator and the transformer necessary to charge the batteries to the company. They repaired and returned the calculator, but I never got the transformer back. I wrote them but no reply.

—Paul Breckenridge, Denton

ACTION LINE: Mrs. Dorcas Morris, a customer service representative in Texas Instruments' Dallas office, said a transformer would be sent to you immediately. She apologized for your inconvenience and said she would telephone you to confirm that the transformer is on its way.

I am asking your assistance in obtaining a refund from Lincoln Interiors, Inc. On April 4, I paid them $422.98 as a down payment on the remodeling of a bathroom. The work was to have started in three weeks. It still hasn't been done.

—Ronald K. Salak, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Peter Campnille, owner of Lincoln Interiors, Inc., 2633 No. 48th St., said the delay resulted from difficulty in obtaining some of the materials for the work and the illness of the carpenter to whom the work was subcontracted. He said he would prefer to complete the job as soon as possible, rather than refund your money, since some items already have been custom-made for your bathroom. Campnille promised to contact you this week and settle the complaint to your satisfaction. Please contact ACTION LINE again if there are further problems.

ACTION TIP: Many persons have heard by now of the medical tests that can be performed on a baby before it is born. One test, amniocentesis, involves the removal by a doctor of a small amount of amniotic fluid from the uterine cavity of the pregnant woman. Examination of cells from the fluid can reveal such diseases as mongolism and cerebral palsy before the child is born. Want to know more? To Your Good Health:

Cigar Smoke May Be More Harmful

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband quit smoking. He quit smoking cigarettes, that is. Now he smokes cigars, and is quite proud of his accomplishment. The only thing wrong is that he (I'm sure of it) inhales the cigar smoke. Isn't this just as bad as inhaling cigarette smoke? I can't convince him of this. — Mrs. B. E.

I have never bought the idea that you can quit smokiking by finding some other tobacco product to smoke. Somehow this doesn't square with my logic.

There is a lot of evidence that smokers who switch to cigars do continue to inhale, some perhaps without even realizing it.

A recent report in the Journal of the American Medical Association confirms this suspicion. In fact, according to the report, inhaling cigar smoke may be more harmful than inhaling cigarette smoke.

Perhaps if you can't convince your husband, Dr. Allen L. Goldman can. He conducted a study in which subjects were tested for a blood factor called "carboxyhemoglobin." This, when present in certain levels in the body, is considered a risk to health. The substance was found to be four times higher among cigarette smokers than among non-smokers. In cigar smokers, it was found to be eight times higher.

Conclusion: if your husband wants to quit, he should quit altogether. Many cigar smokers do not inhale at first, but gradually fall back into their old cigarette smoking habits. The study also indicates, incidentally, that cigar smokers who were never habitual cigarette smokers do not inhale usually.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We have a three-year-old grandson (3 years, 3 months) who can't talk. He is our daughter's child. Her husband is very strict with the boy. Could this cause an emotional problem? It is an unhappy marriage.

The father threatens the boy to make him eat. He gets so upset he vomits. Otherwise, he is a very bright little fellow who seems to understand what you say to him. But he just grunts. — E.A.

You have reason for concern, no matter what the cause is of his silence. A child this age should be using words in meaningful phrases, however brief.

An emotional problem could well cause his failure to talk, but so could a hearing disorder. From your description of the father and the home environment, I have to suspect an emotional factor. You and I know that grandparents do tend at times to color accounts of such things as the status of home environments. However, I can only take your description at face value.

The father scolds the child and badgers him into eating at the table. He should be made to understand what he might be doing to the boy. The inability to talk (or unwillingness to) should be investigated. If it is not corrected, it could lead to serious problems ahead.

I suggest that the boy be seen by a speech therapist to evaluate matters.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read a lot about the importance of early detection of arthritis. How can one know the early signs? I have a sister who is 60 and who has developed rheumatoid arthritis. — Mrs. V.D.

About three fourths of arthritis victims have an onset lasting over months or years. It is difficult to detect through symptoms, because they may be minimal. They include fatigue, tingling sensations in fingers and toes, stiffness, weight loss. They may be present in various combinations and degrees.

Feet are often the first joints to present signs. The onset can, in some cases, be abrupt, with fever and hot, painful joints. The symptoms are usually symmetrical, that is occurring in the same joints on opposite limbs.

X-ray is of little use in diagnosing arthritis in early stages, but it can be helpful in diagnosis as the disease becomes a bit more established. Certain blood tests are helpful in confirming rheumatoid arthritis (not osteoarthritis). Examination of the fluid that typically accumulates in the swollen joints is another means.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a pain every time I sit on a hard seat on my tailbone. My doctor tells me to it on a pillow. I do, but I sit sideways to keep the pressure from it. What do you suggest? — P.S.

This probably what is called coccydynia. The pain originates in the tailbone (or coccyx).

You should sit on a pillow, but you should be sure that the chair itself has a firm bottom to encourage sitting upright. A semi-slouched position can worsen the problem.

Sitting in hot baths and massaging the muscles attaching to the tailbone are helpful measures. The massage is done through the rectum, and it should be done by your physician.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Many homemakers do not realize the dangers of home dry cleaning.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that many cleaners are made from flammable liquids. The word "inflammable" means that it burns or may combust. Inflammable cleaners are flammable, not nonflammable.

The fumes of cleaning liquids can travel throughout a house. Since the fumes are heavier than air, they will seek a lower level. Homes have been blown to bits, when these fumes have reached a pilot light in a basement, hot water heater or stove in a kitchen. The tiniest spark of static electricity caused by rubbing textile materials, together can set off the fumes.

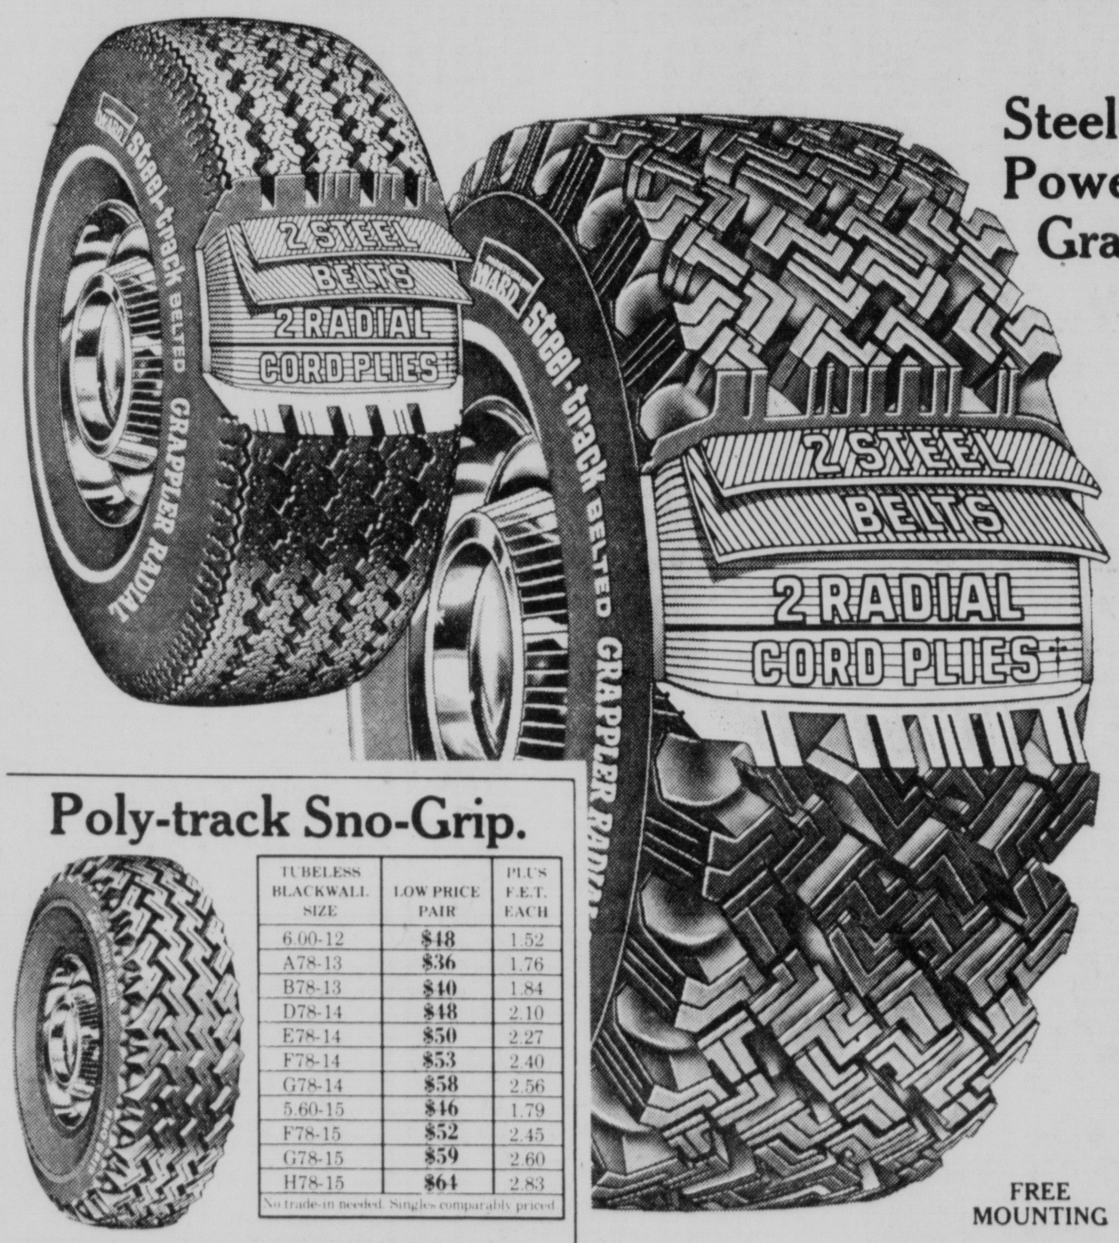

The Nebraska Medical Association recommends if at all possible, not to do your own dry cleaning at home. If you must do it, use a nonflammable liquid. (A fluid may be marked 'nonexplosive' and still be flammable.)

Amateur Leaves Worry To Professional Actors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — You might think that a rookie film actor would have qualms about being thrown into a cast with such stars as Alec Guinness, David Niven, Maggie Smith and Peter Sellers.

Not Truman Capote. He comments with his customary hauteur: "I have absolutely nothing to lose. I'm an amateur. They're professionals. They're the ones who should be worried."

Capote was preparing to start his role in "Murder by Death," the Neil Simon comedy in which he plays a millionaire eccentric who assembles the five greatest detectives in the world to solve a murder mystery. Or is there a real murder?

"It's hard to say," comments Capote. "The whole story is mad, a kind of 'Alice in Wonderland' in which no one is sure of anything."

The casting seems apt. With his broad forehead and a scowl behind dark glasses, Capote conveys the menace of Sydney Greenstreet, though without the same girth. Never one to shun the limelight, the fledgling actor seems to be having the time of his life.

How did it all happen?

TRUMAN CAPOTE AP

"Some time ago Saint Subber, who produced most of Simon's plays, told me, 'Neil is writing a screenplay for you.' I forgot all about it until a few months ago when a script arrived for me at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel. Then (producer) Ray Stark called and asked if I would do it. I said I would have to think about it. I did, and accepted.

Some of his detractors might say that Truman Capote has been acting all along, but his performing has been limited to readings of his own works for recordings and for college audiences. "That's acting, really," he said. "As I read, I take on all the parts, the same as Charles Dickens and Mark Twain did with their readings. I think I do it rather well."

Capote added that he is not exactly a novice to film making, having written several scripts and being present during the filming of such movies as "Beat the Devil" and "The Innocents," the 1962 version of "The Turn of the Screw."

The author shrugs off suggestions that such activities as movie acting and TV talk show appearances have diminished his literary output. He has not produced a major work since "In Cold Blood," his 1969 account of a Kansas family murder.

"I am not a compulsive writer like Tennessee (Williams), who has a heart attack if he doesn't get something written before noon," he admitted. "Writing is extremely hard work; only amateurs like to write.

"It's my work. It's my life. I have to bear the brunt of how my works are received, and I don't intend to throw any of them out before I believe they are ready."

He pointed out that he spent six years in researching and writing "In Cold Blood" and he expects to require as much or more time on his next book, "Answered Prayers."

A portion of the new book was published this month in Esquire magazine, and it provides a tantalizing glimpse. Not to mention scandalizing. It depicts a long luncheon at a posh New York restaurant, with real-life and fictional characters gossiping about peccadillos of the jet and other sets.

Among the real figures portrayed are Mrs. Walter Matthau, Gloria Vanderbilt, Jackie Kennedy Onassis and Lee Radziwill. Readers naturally wonder how Capote could dare put such revealing words into their mouths.

"I showed them the story, of course," Capote said. "They not only gave their permissions; they were delighted. Well, perhaps Jackie was not entirely so."

Only one of the short story's characters, a listener called Jonesie, will be a principal figure in the novel, he said. He will continue releasing pieces of the novel, but not to his old stomping grounds, The New Yorker — "They insist on polite language over there."

Clawson Accused

Manchester, N.H. (UPI) — Carmen Chimento, the American Party candidate in New Hampshire's disputed senate race, told a news conference he believes "Deep Throat," the source who gave Watergate information to the Washington Post, was former White House communications man Kenneth Clawson.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — A day of sunshine and joy around the scatter. Moppets off to school — "Can I have a dollar?" I said: "For heaven's sake, when I was your age I was lucky to get a dime."

Inflation is catching up with us even in the dawning hours. The government has a lot of fuzzy reasons for this. But I think it begins before school. Children start off the inflated day.

A few years ago, a 13-year-old boy named Richard took a Kennedy half dollar to a coin shop. The owner offered him $10,000 for it.

The coin was dated 1961 Kennedy half dollars were not minted until 1964. Coin collectors are wild about such mistakes. They pay enormous prices for them.

☆ ☆ ☆

How did Richard pick up this lucky half? He said: "One day I saw my mother spill some coins on the kitchen table. I looked through them and saw the Kennedy with the 1961 date."

Richard had been reading coin catalogues, and he was not behind the door when the brains were passed out.

Said Richard: "I casually walked to my room and got five dimes from my dime bank. I came back to the kitchen and very casually, in my most normal voice, I said. 'Hey Mom, how about trading me this half dollar for the five dimes?'"

☆ ☆ ☆

Richard said: "I waited for her answer and when she said 'yes,' I quietly laid the dimes down and picked up the half."

So when other boys might have showed excitement or anxiety, Richard kept his cool. Euchred his mama out of ten Gs.

Richard should be about 21 now. A wolf of Wall Street unleashed on the economy. Find Richard and you'll find how we are being taken to the inflation cleaners. That's my solution.

☆ ☆ ☆

Much ado in the journals about New York City which is busted as bad as anybody can be. All the king's horses and all the king's men plus Howard Cosell can't seem to put the Big Apple together again.

Cosell made a passionate plea for New York, coast to coast, the other night on "Cosell Live."

At the same time, the lively New York Daily News headlined the President's answer.

FORD TO CITY
"DROP DEAD"

☆ ☆ ☆

Can't remember Cosell's exact words. But it was something like "we're all in this together. No man is an island" and other for whom the bell tolls thoughts.

New York's troubles don't seem to trouble anybody around here. Most people think New York is kind of an uppity, smart Alec town anyway. They enjoy seeing city slickers suffer a little.

Author Of Bestseller Is Former Detective

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Hi, Joe, you're doing great. We're real proud of you."

That was the kind of greeting Joseph Wambaugh received when he paid a return visit to an East Los Angeles cafe he frequented as a cop on the beat. The waitress gave him a hug, an assistant district attorney exchanged a few memories, a gas station owner talked over old times.

They remembered Joe Wambaugh as a detective in the burglary division of Hollenbeck Station. No matter that he was now a frequenter of bestseller lists and TV talk shows and on his way to being a millionaire.

His latest book, "The Choirboys," will help him along the way. It is selling faster and getting better reviews than any of his three previous books.

"Everything is going so well I'm getting nervous," he remarked.

Wambaugh, 38, wrote his own movie script of "The Choirboys" and sold it to Lorimar Productions, the "Waltons" people. The story of off-duty cops who meet and roister in Los Angeles' MacArthur Park, it is by no means family entertainment.

"The movie will be a hard 'R,'" admitted Wambaugh, referring to the rating code's classification of Restricted.

Nebraska Scout Team Works Hard Despite 'Slim' Chances

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Not all of the Nebraska football players who practiced in Tuesday's chilly environment are really going to play Saturday against Iowa State.

The exceptions: the scout team members. Those are players who run the opposing team's offense and defense against the NU regulars in the afternoon practice sessions.

"We're unique in that most teams use freshmen on their scout teams," explained Nebraska head coach Tom Osborne. "Our freshmen are preparing for games on the freshman schedule, so we use redshirts (players sitting out a year of varsity competition).

"It's discouraging to a lot of freshmen not being able to play. A lot of schools where freshmen are on scout teams have a much higher turnover rate than we do," he said. "Eventually we may use more freshmen because of the scholarship rule."

Osborne praised this year's scout team, noting that most members only receive a limited number of game tickets and the chance to go a bowl game, should NU receive an invitation.

But even going to the bowl game is not a certainty.

"We usually take about 90 or so. Some years we've taken as many as 95 players to the bowl game. But if expenses are high we might only take 85," Osborne said.

"We've told them (scout team members) that we'll take the people we think really have the best chance to play if it's a hard choice for us," he continued. "But some of the cases are awfully hard decisions to make. It's almost like drawing straws."

The two areas that contribute the most to the scout squad are the offensive linemen and the defensive players, Osborne explained. He added that offensive backfield members usually exhibit progress faster.

"Most of our linemen except Bonness (center Rik) spent some time on the scout squad," he said. "I'm sure Weid (defensive tackle Jerry), Ray Phillips (defensive end); Wightman (linebacker Jim), Pillen (linebacker Clete) and Jones (cornerback Chuck) all were on the scout squad."

Osborne said senior wingback Tom Heiser was not a scout team member since he requested not to be redshirted since he wanted to finish his undergraduate work in four years. Heiser wants to attend medical school.

What's the benefit of skipping a year of varsity competition to work on the scout team?

"An added year of growth and maturity helps while they're waiting for someone a year ahead of them to graduate," Osborne noted. "The extra year older, faster and quicker is helpful. They also get a lot of internal practicing which is good."

Beard For Osborne?

Will Nebraska head football coach Tom Osborne grow a beard?

"It's sort of a secret arrangement," he said after Tuesday's practice. "I may if we can win our next two games (against Iowa State and Oklahoma).

"When it comes off, I won't say, but I may let it grow a while. I don't think I'm limited to any set number of days."

Players Return

Three of four regulars who missed Monday's workout returned to Tuesday's practice at Memorial Stadium, Osborne reported.

Fullback Tony Davis, who is suffering from a sore knee sustained in Saturday's 12-0 win over Kansas State at Manhattan, missed Tuesday's drill.

Defensive tackle Mike Fultz, offensive tackle Bob Lingenfelter and monster man Wonder Mondsa are returned to action.

NU Big Favorite

Nebraska has been installed a 23-point favorite to defeat Iowa State, according to odds posted Tuesday by Harrah's Reno-Tahoe Racebook.

Other Big Eight odds include Kansas by one over Colorado, Oklahoma 12 over Missouri and Oklahoma State 15 over Kansas State.

Pius X Offense Faces Continual 'Uphill' Battle

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Vince Aldrich uses what is affectionately known as "the hill" on the Pius X High School football practice field.

When his second team offense is in need of a little boost against the top defensive unit Aldrich sends the offense down the gradual slope of "the hill" of the north end of the practice field with amazing results.

"You'd be surprised how well those kids get off the ball when they're going downhill," Aldrich says. "They really fly."

Aldrich usually sends his first team offense "up the hill," to slow them down a bit.

And he's not just trying to slow down the breakaway speed backs like Tom Doggett and Steve Rohren.

Aldrich has speed and size on his offensive unit that's overlooked by most spectators — all in the interior line.

Line Deserves Credit

"They're a lot more responsible for our success than most people give them credit for," Aldrich says of the interior linemen. "Their size is about perfect for high school ball. All of them are abut six foot or taller and around 200 pounds."

Speedwise, the group stacks up to almost anybody, as all were clocked by Aldrich in either 4.9 or 5.0 for the 40 yard dash. All on an even grade, not down "the hill.'

Aldrich's interior linemen rate a second glance from most opponents with center Gary Vacha and guards Jim Stefkovich and Lonnie Petrzilka all weighing 200-plus, and tackles Scott Krause and Ron Rosburg at 190.

Waverly will be the final foe to glance at the five together during the state championship Class B game at Seacrest Field Friday night at 7:30 p.m.

All five are seniors, and with the exception of Rosburg, all two-year starters.

"The two guards (Petrzilka and Stefkovich) are particularly very good at pulling and leading plays," Aldrich notes. "The line has opened up an awful lot of holes for those backs.

"Quickness and size rates very important with this line," Aldrich adds. "With their height, they can almost hide what's going on behind them."

Vacha, possibly the best of the group, rates an edge on strength.

"Gary has excellent physical strength and good quickness," Aldrich says. "We've had others say he's the best they've seen. He's been pretty effective against anybody he's come up against at noseguard.

"The Omaha Cathedral noseguard was mentioned in Big 8 magazine as one of the best around," Aldrich adds. "And Gary handled him real good in that game."

Vacha, who had worn jersey No. 53 all year, was forced to wear No. 70 in the first round playoff game with Hartington Cedar Catholic after his green jersey had been stolen.

With the Thunderbolts back in white jerseys as the home teams against Waverly, Vacha has optioned back to wearing No. 53 instead of superstitiously wearing the jersey worn when Pius won the first game.

"These kids don't think much about luck," Aldrich says.

After all, luck doesn't make you 9-0 or get you "up the hill" any faster.

ViQueens Future Secure

By RYLY JANE HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Karen Stoner believes in getting volleyball implanted in the minds of every Waverly girl as early as possible.

Stoner, who doubles as an elementary physical education teacher and the Waverly ViQueens volleyball coach, starts her grade school students on volleyball.

"We don't really press it. We just go over the basics," Stoner said. "By the time they get to sixth grade, I start giving them a little more skills."

But Stoner doesn't crack the whip and train the girls when they're too young.

"The real work doesn't start until they're freshmen. Then we start working on the bump and volley and get them started on timing," she said. "Timing is so important and the longer the girls are together, the better their timing."

Expanding Programs

As part of her double duties, Stoner is planning programs for both seventh and eighth graders and one for freshmen.

"You go for more strategy as they play together longer," Stoner explained. "Strategy and serving can never be practiced too much. I don't think we could ever practice serving enough."

But Waverly, despite the concern over practice by Stoner, has built something of a volleyball dynasty. The ViQueens had a 75-game winning streak (about four years) snapped this year by Centennial, but the Waverly team is one of two defending state champions returning to the state meet this weekend in Scottsbluff.

"The girls really were playing under a lot of pressure," Stoner said, referring to the loss to Centennial. "I didn't think they'd been playing up to their potential and the pressure got to them. We didn't have a very good game and really just gave it away.

"But we got our revenge when we played Centennial later this year. The girls were really ready for that one," she said.

Stoner emphasizes the team strength, and is reluctant to single out any one girl for honors. "If you don't have a team, you don't have anything. I mean, you can have a star spiker but maybe she can't set up, so alone she's not a star," she explained.

Stoner has five starting seniors and two sophomores (alternating setters). Lucy Axberg, Cindy Wulf, Erin Dodge, LuAnn Hestermann and Joan Bevans will be playing in their last high school state tournament. The two sophomores are Marcia Hestermann and Rhonda Seymour.

Coyle Holds PAT Mark

A check of the record books by Nebraska sports information director Don Bryant has produced another record for a member of the 1975 Cornhuskers.

Place-kicker Mike Coyle's streak of 36 consecutive point after touchdowns tops the previous mark of 27 in a row set in 1971 by Rich Sanger.

Coyle actually topped the record on his second boot against Colorado when he hit nine of nine. Then after making his first try at Missouri, he failed against the Tigers to end the streak.

Sanger compiled his record over a stretch of six games in 1971, then missed his first try against Alabama in the Orange Bowl. Before Sanger came along, the NU record was 25 in a row held by Paul Rogers in 1969.

Coyle started his streak in the Kansas State game last season with five in a row. He got two more against Oklahoma and another against Florida in the Sugar Bowl. So, he actually had 28 in a row this season before missing.

The senior from Omaha is the leading Husker scorer this season with 54 points. He has kicked eight of 13 field goal attempts. Coyle also is tied for the lead with Tim Gibbons of Missouri in Big Eight games only. Each has 35 points.

Davis Near The Top

Nebraska senior Tony Davis carried the ball 16 times for 74 yards against Kansas State to pass Bobby Reynolds as the No. 2 rusher in Husker history. Now, he's just 161 yards away from Jeff Kinney's record of 2,420 yards.

With three games to play, counting a bowl game, Davis needs to average just 54 each game. While records are made to be broken, everyone is pulling for Tony to make it.

Davis' figures as a pass receiver also are excellent. He has caught 12 for 152 yards this season to go along with his sophomore and junior totals of 39 for 332 yards.

He now has 645 yards in total offense this year, gaining an average of 5.2 yards everytime he touches the football.

For his career, his total offense figure now is 2,743 yards. He has scored 22 touchdowns. Adding a two-point conversion, his point total in three years stands at 134 — seventh best in Husker history.

Guess who is eighth in career scoring? None other than Mr. Coyle, with 117 points. He has made 72 of 78 PAT's and kicked 15 of 26 field goal attempts.

Catching Up On Sports

The Daily Oklahoman reports it has learned the Big Eight's first post-season basketball tournament in March 1977 will be played at the Myriad in Oklahoma City. It said announcement of the decision will be made at a meeting of conference coaches Sunday in Kansas City.

The tournament, which will decide the conference's representative in the NCAA tournament, originally was planned for Kemper Arena in Kansas City, but a near-conflict with the NAIA tourney at Kemper forced the change.

It also has been reported Big Eight baseball coaches has voted to hold their post-season tournament in Oklahoma City with approval scheduled for the conference meeting in December.

Ohio State has a freshman tight end, Jimmy Moore, who is 6-5 and 260. Woody Hayes says he has had it in the back of his mind of sometime making a fullback out of him. "He'd scare hell out of a lot of people," Hayes said. Moore tore ligaments in the Illinois game and has undergone knee surgery.

Nebraska will have its 81st sellout in a row Saturday at the Iowa State game in Memorial Stadium. The Huskers, though, will finish short of a season record for seven games since their six-game total of 457,237 is 77,156 shy of the mark set in 1974.

Nineteen Nebraska seniors will be at the stadium for their final appearance at the dad's day game. During their three-year careers their stadium record is 17-2-0. The 1975 club is the sixth consecutive Husker team to win nine or more games.

Wahoo Neumann Offense Worries Plainview

By TOM VINT
Star Sports Staff

"Hello, Missouri football coaches' office? May I speak to the defensive coordinator? You know, the one who stops wishbone offenses, just like in the Alabama game."

"Who is this please?"

"I'm the Plainview High School coach in Nebraska and I have this problem . . ."

Plainview coach Warren Washburn didn't actually make the call to Missouri. But it wasn't because the former Sandy Creek coach didn't think about it in preparation for Friday's Class C-1 state playoff game against No. 1 ranked Wahoo Neumann.

"I actually thought about calling Missouri's coach, who thought up how to stop Alabama. But I gave that up," Washburn said. "I probably couldn't have gotten through anyway. Besides, we don't have time to put in anything drastically new to try to stop Neumann's wishbone."

Plainview, No. 2 in the Sunday Journal and Star ratings, faces the problem of shutting off Neumann's steamrolling wishbone attack. The Cavaliers have averaged more than 300 yards rushing during the season and have five running backs averaging better than five yards per carry.

Wishbone Perfection

"I got to see them play last Friday against Gibbon," Washburn said of Neumann's 27-21 playoff win. "They run that wishbone offense about to perfection. They'll be awfully hard to stop. I don't think our regular defense (a 5-2 just like Nebraska's) will stop it."

The Cavaliers count on balance to throw other teams into defensive confusion. Quarterback Doug Lanik runs the show, calls the plays and has 419 yards rushing in 10 games. Halfbacks Pat Dailey and Todd Peterson have 803 yards and 730 yards, respectively, and average more than six yards per carry. Fullback Al Meduna has 616 yards and reserve John Cerv adds another 105.

Neumann coach John Lawler put the wishbone in last year when only three seniors returned to the squad. The success was not overwhelming, winning only two games.

"We had very little success with it the first year," Lawler said of the formation, which brought fame and fortune to Oklahoma, Texas and Alabama. "We didn't do a real good job with it but the difference this year has been improvement of our offensive line blocking and our quarterback adjustment."

Lawler said one of the keys to a formidable wishbone attack is having the people to run it. He feels Neumann does.

"There aren't too many teams in the state who have a better quarterback than we have," he said. Lanik runs the option ala Oklahoma's Steve Davis, and the youngster calls all the plays.

"I'd say he's one of the best in the state," halfback Dailey said of Lanik.

Potent Plainview

But while attention is drawn to Neumann's powerhouse wishbone, Lawler says Plainview is no offensive pushover.

"We have an awful lot of respect for them," said the fifth-year Cavalier coach. His main concern is going to be trying to shut off Plainview's ground game headed by Tim McCrady.

McCrady has rushed for 1,393 yards by himself this year. In last Friday's 30-0 crushing of Utica Centennial, the 5-10, 165-pounder rushed for 174 yards and scored two touchdowns.

"We'd use 14 people to stop him if they'd let us," Lawler said of his defensive scheme to stop McCrady. "I'm sure he's gonna get some yards. We just hope we can maintain field position on them."

Washburn also indicates Tim's twin brother, Kim, has averaged better than six yards per carry this year and quarterback Gordon Rasmussen has the ability to throw the ball when needed. Rasmussen hit 9 of 12 passes last week to help blow Centennial out of the game.

"If they're going to bring a lot of people up to stop the run, we'll be prepared to pass," Washburn said. "Passing may be the determining factor in this game when it's all done. I know they're going to try to stop McCrady and we're going to try to stop their wishbone.

"It'll be hard to say who'll come out on top of that battle. I guess it'll come down to the team that wants to win it the most will be the team that's going to take the game."

Grand Island Move To Help Attendance

Wise Decision

Nebraska basketball coach Joe Cipriano perhaps has found the best solution towards increasing attendance at his annual red-white basketball game — moving the game to Grand Island.

For the past 10 years that I've been viewing the annual scrimmage, the attendance has seldom, if ever, reached four figures. That's not a very good average — especially when the students are usually either not attending classes or disinterested in the games.

The game will be played Nov. 24 at the Grand Island Senior High gymnasium. Although I'm more familiar with Grand Island since Fonner Park starts the Nebraska horse racing season each spring, the Third City is one of the most sports-minded cities in Nebraska.

Grand Island doesn't have a college. The closest collegiate athletics are either at Hastings College or Kearney State College.

This will be an ideal opportunity for central Nebraska fans who are unable to travel to Lincoln in the winter weather to receive a sneak preview of Cipriano's NU squad.

"I kind of like the idea of playing the intrasquad game in Grand Island, noted former Fairbury all-stater Bob Siegel. "It'll give us a chance to get away and play a game."

THE PADDOCK

By Mark Gordon
Star Sports Writer

Siegel, who is starting his junior year at NU, is absolutely correct.

Undoubtedly, the players are tiring of daily practices in the NU Coliseum. They want to perform under game conditions — conditions where there are enthusiastic spectators.

The Huskers open the season two weeks from Friday night with a home contest against Illinois. The next night, Northwestern University, with former Kansas State head coach Tex Winter at the controls, invades Lincoln.

Nebraska students will be on Thanksgiving vacation during that period, leaving the general public with first chance at the prime seats for the encounters with the Big Ten teams.

Nebraska should be improved this season with senior sharpshooter Jerry Fort ready to seek his fourth straight Nebraska scoring title.

Whether the new recruits and the extra year of experience can put Nebraska into a challenging position against Big Eight favorites Kansas and Kansas State still remains a question.

It's an open secret that Fort's last year here as been the rallying point for what be the finest team Cipriano has in 13 years in Lincoln.

But Fort needs some offensive assistance — he can't do it alone, which has been the major deficiency the last few years.

If Cipriano can get a balanced attack with is aggressive defense — then a bona fide effort at the two Sunflower State schools is possible.

FINAL REMINDER — the last three days of the long Nebraska horse racing season are set for Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Atokad Park near South Sioux City. Ponies go the post at 1:30 p.m. each day.

Graceland To Mineral Bowl

EXELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — Graceland College of Lamoni, Iowa, and Missouri Western will play here the night of Saturday, Nov. 22, in the annual Mineral Water Bowl, it was announced Tuesday.

The Yellowjackets upset Missouri Valley, 17-7, last week.

Missouri Western, winner last week over Missouri Southern, 45-33, is ranked fifth in Division II of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

—Staying Ahead—

Right To Charge Account Not Guaranteed By Law

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — The Equal Credit Opportunity Act does not give women a "right" to their own charge accounts, or credit in their own names. In fact, many women who march into stores expecting different treatment under the new law will find things in many respects the same.

Jane Bryant Quinn

All the law promises is equal treatment for "creditworthy" women. And to be creditworthy you need income or property of your own, besides a good credit history. Here's what the law means, for various groups of women:

-If you are married and don't work outside the home, you will probably still be unable to get a loan or charge account for which you alone are responsible. But this isn't discrimination; a man without income couldn't get a loan either.

As in the past, you will be asked your husband's income and credit references. The account will be granted on the basis of his creditworthiness, and he (or both of you) will be responsible for the bills.

—Wives in community property states are in a stronger position. The law provides that half your husband's earnings are yours; therefore, you may be considered creditworthy in your own right even though you don't hold a job. The lender is entitled to investigate your husband's credit history. If it's good enough to qualify him for a loan, it's good enough for you, too.

—If you are married, with no income, but want to change your charge accounts over to your own name you probably can — as long as your husband's liability for the bills is clearly established. The store cannot force you to use your husband's name rather than your own. However, make sure this change won't prevent your husband from using the account himself.

Also, you can maintain an account in your maiden name that was granted before your marriage (although if you quit your job, your husband may have to guarantee your debts).

—Women who have low-paying jobs will be in about the same boat as the woman who stays home. Her earnings alone won't qualify her for much, if any, credit, so she'll have to depend in part on her husband's income.

—A married woman with enough income or property to be responsible for herself (and not living in a state that restricts her right to manage her property) can apply for a loan based entirely on her own means.

In that case, she must be treated exactly as a man would be in her circumstances: No demands that her father or husband cosign the loan. No stricter credit terms than a man would have. No assumptions that she's less responsible. However, where her husband has an interest in her income or property, as in a community property states, his signature can still be required.

—A single woman, who supports herself, must receive the same consideration a man would in her circumstances.

—Women who are newly divorced or widowed, and signal that fact to the store by changing the name on their accounts, will find their credit situation improved but not secured. If you got your account based in any way on your husband's income, the store can require you to reapply for credit in your own right. Should they find you uncreditworthy, they can close or limit the account.

But you are ahead in two respects: You can use the past history of the account as proof of your personal reliability. And the store can't automatically discount your alimony income (if you rely on it) without examining whether it's likely to be paid.

If you were previously granted an account in your own right, and then are divorced or widowed, the store cannot automatically close your account or change its terms. They first must have evidence that you can't pay. Skipping two monthly bills in a row, however, is considered "evidence." So even if you're going through an emotionally difficult period, don't let the bills stack up. Once lost, a charge account may be hard to get back.

—The Equal Credit Act grants rights, but also imposes responsibilities. Married women can no longer be denied the benefits of a good family credit record — but neither can they be sheltered from the effects of a bad one. Credit bureaus will be carrying the credit history in both your names.

If you and your husband are sloppy about paying your bills, this fact will return to haunt you should you ever find yourself on your own. The new law makes it just as important for you, as for your husband, to keep your financial house in order.

Davenport, Iowa (AP) — Lee Enterprises, Inc., Tuesday reported a 31 per cent increase in net income for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30.

Fourth quarter net income for the newspaper and broadcast firm was up 38 per cent. Officials said a significant part of the increases were contributed by NAPP Systems USA, Inc., the company's half owned photo polymer printing plate venture.

Lloyd Schermer, Lee president, said fiscal year net income totaled $7.2 million or $2.15 per common share compared with $5.5 million or $1.65 per common share a year ago.

Net income in the fourth quarter was $2,041,000 or 61 cents per common share, compared with $1.5 million or 44 cents per share last year.

Lee operates newspapers in Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Montana and Oregon in addition to The Lincoln Star, and has broadcast properties in Illinois, Iowa and West Virginia.

Stock Mart Records Mild Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Intimations that Washington attitudes against federal help for New York City might be softening helped produce a mild advance in the stock market Tuesday.

Trading was restrained by the observance of Veterans Day in many states.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks registered a 3.07 gain to 838.55.

The over-all count on the New York Stock Exchange showed a more emphatic 870-to-483 edge for gainers over losers among the 1,810 issues changing hands.

Big Board volume came to 14.64 million shares, down from 14.91 million on Monday.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, told a group of Republican congressmen Tuesday morning he had become increasingly concerned over the possible effects a default by New York City might bring.

He said he hadn't yet switched to the view that federal aid to the financially strapped city was necessary. But he added that he was "perhaps closer to such a conclusion than I have been in the past."

Burns has been a prominent opponent of the idea of such aid, along with President Ford and Treasury Secretary William E. Simon.

Analysts said the market also drew some support from downward leanings in interest rates.

The government reported late Monday that yields on 13-week Treasury bills fell to a five-month low at the latest auction. And speculation continued to circulate that the Fed might soon cut its discount rate—the rate it charges on loans to its member commercial banks.

On the negative side, analysts said, the slowness of other major banks to match a prime rate reduction posted last Friday by New York's First National City Bank raised some questions over how much further the downtrend in rates would go.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was up .53 to 89.87 on the day, and the NYSE composite index gained .29 to 47.52.

Otis Elevator, the Big Board volume leader, jumped 3¼ to 44¼. United Technologies raised its bid for Otis stock from $42 to $44 a share, and Otis directors said they wouldn't take a position either for or against the new offer.

United Technologies declined ⅞ to 49⅛.

Alcoa, also active, dipped ¾ to 36⅜. The company said it had decided against building an aluminum rolling mill at a previously selected site near Brandeburg, Ky.

Bergman Visits Hollywood Studio

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Swedish film maker Ingmar Bergman made his first trip to Hollywood a busman's holiday by visiting a movie set.

The reclusive director flew here from Stockholm last Sunday to complete contracts with producer Dino De Laurentiis, who backed the latest Bergman film, "Face to Face." Bergman paid a call on the location of "St. Ives," and learned from star Charles Bronson how movie machine guns spray cars with bullets.

Declining interviews, Bergman returned to Stockholm after a five-day visit.

Hawks Snap Celt String At Four

From News Wires

The Atlanta Hawks snapped a Boston Celtic string with a 100-91 National Basketball Association win over the Celtics Tuesday night.

The string the Hawks snapped was a four-game domination last year of the Celtics over the Hawks.

In other NBA games, Washington downed Buffalo 105-90; Milwaukee bumped Philadelphia 108-81; Phoenix overpowered New York 112-81 and Golden State defeated Cleveland 103-98. In a West Coast game, New Orelans was at Portland.

Guard Lou Hudson was high for Atlanta with 21 points. Jo Jo White led the Celtics with 24 points.

With the game tied 48-48 at halftime, Atlanta outscored the Celtics by six points in the third quarter, 28-22, and kept the lead for the rest of the game.

In Buffalo, Clem Haskins led a Washington third-quarter surge with eight of his 18 points for the Bullets. The Braves scored just eight points in the third period while the Bullets poured in 20.

Both Bob McAdoo of the Braves and Wes Unseld of the Bullets missed the game because of injuries.

Milwaukee's Bob Dandridge scored 28 points and the Bucks neutralized George McGinnis to post their fourth win of the year. The 76ers stumbled in the second quarter when they dropped to a 55-41 halftime deficit.

Doug Collins led the 76ers with 24 points while McGinnis was held to just 15 points and five rebounds.

The Phoenix Suns turned a 53-39 halftime lead over the Knicks into a rout. Paul Westphal had 21 points to top five Suns in double figures. John Shumate came off the bench to get 19, Alvan Adams had 16, Dick Van Arsdale 14 and Keith Erickson 12.

Spencer Haywood and Earl Monroe led the Knicks with 17 and 12 respectively. The Knicks never came closer than 14 points in the second half.

Guards Phil Smith and Charles Dudley each scored six points as the Golden State Warriors outscored the Cavaliers 20-9 in the final eight one-half minutes of play.

The Cavaliers had a 91-83 lead but by 4:34 left, the Warriors had taken the lead for good. The Warriors were paced by Rick Barry with 23 points, followed by Smith with 20.

Bobby Smith topped all scores for Cleveland with 27 points.

In the American Basketball Association, the Denver Spurs defeated the Indiana Pacers, 126-117 and the Kentucky Colonels downed the Virginia Squires.

Rookie David Thompson scored 26 points to lead the Spurs to victory. Dan Issel scored 24 and Bobby Jones added 20.

Billy Knight, the ABA's second leading scorer, had 28 points to lead Indiana.

Artis Gilmore and Lou Dampier scored 21 points and Bird Averitt had 20 to lead the Colonels. The Colonels took the lead from the Squires midway in the second period and never relinquished it.

Virginia was led by guards Johnny Neumann and Ticky Burden with 21 and 20 points respectively.

Spike Tourney Scheduled Soon

A round-robin volleyball tournament is scheduled for this Friday and Saturday.

The tournament, sponsored by KBHL-FM and the People's City Mission, will be non-stop for 24 hours from 6 p.m. Friday until 6 p.m. Saturday.

Registration forms may be picked up at the Nebraska Union from the Concerned Pro Life Students, from the radio station or the mission. All deadlines must be postmarked Nov. 12 and should include the $15 entry fee.

ISU's Rodgers May Face NU

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State, faced with the unenviable task of meeting nationally secend-rated Nebraska in a Big Eight Conference football game Saturday at Lincoln, ran through a one-hour, 45-minute workout Tuesday to develop its game plan.

Coach Earle Bruce said he hoped to regain the services of regular defensive end Otis Rodgers, who missed the Missouri game last week with a three-week old hyperextended elbow injury.

Middle guard Maynard Stensrud was also expected to be ready to start Saturday. He missed two games before playing part-time against Missouri with a broken hand, but came through in good shape, Bruce said.

Bruce called the Huskers "a fine football team," adding, "They have excellent quarterbacking from Vince Ferragamo and Terry Luck. Bobby Thomas is a super receiver. Tony Davis, Monte Anthony and John O'Leary are outstanding running backs.

"But then you also have to worry about the counter-plays by their wingbacks, Tom Heiser and Curtis Craig."

Husker Foe Spani Cited

Kansas City (AP) — Gary Spani just kinda slips up on you.

The Kansas State linebacker goes about his business quietly. The first thing you know he has made a lot of tackles en route to a consistent and outstanding performance.

That's the way it was last Saturday against Nebraska. He harrassed the Huskers all afternoon and was a big factor in the Wildcats being able to hold heavily favored Nebraska to a mere 12-0 victory.

Spani, only a sophomore, was so outstanding he was named Big Eight Conference defensive player of the week. He made 19 tackles, seven unassisted, and tossed Husker backs three times for losses totaling 16 yards.

Spani won the honor by a split vote over Colorado linebacker Gary Campbell.

"This game was probably Spani's best of the season," said K-State Coach Ellis Rainsberger. "He was super. He made tackles all over the place. They went right at Gary at times, and he shut 'em off."

Campbell was credited with 23 tackles, nine unassisted, in Colorado's 17-7 triumph over Oklahoma State. He made one tackle for a loss of seven yards and recovered a fumble.

"Gary Campbell played outstanding," said Colorado Coach Bill Mallory. "He made some super plays. He's aggressive . . . tough."

Nolan Cromwell and Laverne Smith, both of Kansas, were selected the week's top offensive players for their performances in the Jayhawk's 23-3 upset over Oklahoma.

Besides Spani and Campbell, defensive players nominated were Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma, Cletus Pillen and Jim Wightman of Nebraska, Jim Randolph of Iowa State, Phillip Dokes of Oklahoma State, Ken Downing of Missouri and Harry Murphy of Kansas.

ABA Sails Go Way Of Clipper Ships

NEW YORK (AP) — The San Diego Sails folded Tuesday, joining the Minnesota Muskies, Pittsburgh Pipers and Baltimore Hustlers in the lore of American Basketball Association trivia fans.

A terse one-paragraph statement issued by the league during a day-long meeting of owners here told of the team's demise.

"San Diego confirmed today they were ceasing business operations effective immediately," the statement said. "In accordance with league by-laws, this action automatically terminates the membership of the franchise in the league."

A dispersal draft of San Diego's players will be held Wednesday afternoon, although final details have yet to be worked out, a league spokesman said. Despite a 3-8 record this season, the Sails have several outstanding players, including Caldwell Jones, Kevin Joyce, Dwight Lamar, Dave Robisch and Mark Olberding.

Sails' owner Frank Goldberg left the meeting in a midtown New York hotel shortly after the league announcement was made and returned immediately to San Diego.

San Diego, the ABA's only expansion team in the league's nine years, drew only 7,126 fans in three home dates this season. That, plus being a poor drawing card on the road, were considered the reasons for the folding.

San Diego was the second ABA team to fold this year. The Baltimore Claws failed just four days before the regular season began. The Claws' players were distributed among the other clubs in a dispersal draft.

Coach Bill Musselman, who left the University of Minnesota to join the Sails before the season began, said the team's demise came as a shock to him.

"I had no idea," Musselman said. "I'm stunned. I can't believe the team was given a fair trial. I can't explain it."

The players were mute.

San Diego joined the ABA in 1972 as the Conquistadors with Wilt Chamberlain as player-coach. However, a lawsuit by the National Basketball Association's Los Angeles Lakers kept Chamberlain from playing, although he did coach the team one year.

When the original owner, Dr. Leonard Bloom, failed to meet league obligations, the ABA took over the club last February, then turned it over to Goldberg, a San Diego businessman, in June.

The ABA began in 1967 with 11 teams. However, only three—the Kentucky Colonels, Indiana Pacers and Denver Nuggets—have survived without moving. And the Nuggets originally were known as the Rockets.

The Pittsburgh Pipers moved to Minneapolis, then back to Pittsburgh where they changed their name to the Condors before folding. The Minnesota Muskies became the Miami Floridians, then just the Floridians before their demise.

And the New Orleans Buccaneers became the Memphis Pros, who changed their name to the Tams, then to the Sounds before becoming the Baltimore Hustlers, a name they kept for just a week or two. But the Baltimore Claws never played a regular-season game.

The other ABA pioneer teams included the Jersey Americans (now the New York Nets), the Dallas (then Texas) Chaparrals (now the San Antonio Spurs), the Houston Mavericks (who became the Carolina Cougars before becoming the Spirits of St. Louis), the Anaheim Amigos (later the Los Angeles Stars and now the Utah Stars), and the Oakland Oaks (who became the Washington Capitols before moving to Virginia and calling themselves the Squires).

Omaha Clubs Eyeing Smoker

The Omaha boxing clubs and one club from Hastings will try again to top Lincoln fighters Wednesday night at 8 p.m. at Pershing Auditorium in a local amateur boxing smoker sponsored by the Lincoln Association of Master Barbers.

Local clubs include Easterday Recreation Center coached by Randy Nelson, Ray Menefee's club and Ron Stutzman's team.

The Easterday fighters captured three wins in the last smoker. Don Paez, a 165-pounder won by a technical knockout over Fran Burke of the Menefee club, while other Easterday winners included Neil Wilhelm at 140-pounds, and heavyweight Ben Berry winning over Stan Holen.

Hastings had three winners and Guide Rock had one while the Omaha clubs captured only one win in five bouts.

"We expect about the same number of boxers for this smoker as we had for the last one," said smoker coordinator Larry KcNeese. "So that means we'll have about 15 fights or so and should have just as many good matches as last time."

Nebraska Defense Ninth

Texas A & M's unbeaten and third-ranked Aggies are gunning for a national collegiate defensive triple crown, the first in 18 years.

The Aggies lead the nation in total defense, rushing defense and scoring defense. The Aggies are allowing 173.7 total yards per game, 71.7 rushing yards and a skimpy 6.1 points per game.

Nebraska is ranked ninth in total defense, allowing an average 218.6 yards per game.

King, Cosell In Favor Of Rights For Athletes

New York (UPI) — Billie Jean King and Howard Cosell, testifying before the president's commission on Olympic sports, both called for the greater rights of athletes involved in international competition Tuesday but differed in their apprach as how best to insure these rights.

Ms. King, a former Wimbledon and U.S. Open tennis champion, supported the concept of an athlete's bill of rights and also called for the abolition of "amateurs."

Cosell opted for the idea of a federal commission to oversee all amateur sports above the U.S. Olympic Committee, the NCAA and the AAU.

"There's been a lot of talk about the athletes bill of rights," said Billie Jean. "They really need one. They don't have one now. They have to have the same educational opportunities as anybody else in society. No one may direct or order another person unless they're under contract or civil law."

Billie Jean also called for the abolition of amateurs, saying "amateurs are getting shafted. They should be playing for money just like everyone. You can't eat your trophies."

Ms. King also criticized the USOC and other amateur organizations for their excessive control over where and when an athlete may compete.

"The organization can tell an athlete, 'Do this or we'll suspend you.' That's not right," said Billie Jean.

Cosell, in repeating an argument made last year before the U.S. Senate, called for a permanent three-to-five member federal commission above the USOC, similar to a proposal introduced into the Senate by then Senator Marlow Cook (D.-Ky).

"We also need greater support from all three television networks and the sporting press in this country," said Cosell. "It'll take time. I also think it would be a very good thing for professional clubs to help out amateur sports. Just exactly how, though, I'm not qualified to comment on that."

Col. F. Don Miller, executive director of the USOC, also addressed the 22-member commission concerning the financing the USOC does towards raising some money for the U.S. Olympic teams.

"It's a big business," Miller said.

Earlier Tuesday, NCAA executive director Walter Byers called for the complete restructuring of the USOC and gave suggestions on how that might be acceptably accomplished.

"The NCAA resigned its membership in the USOC in 1972 because of our conviction that the then USOC apparatus was not properly serving the interests of the nation or its citizens and was not responsive to the needs of those it was primarily supposed to serve — the athletes and, also, because of the repeated refusal of the USOC to alter its discredited system," said Byers.

"Nothing has happened to lead the NCAA to reconsider its status as a non-member of the USOC."

Last December's internal reorganization of the USOC, said Byers, "is in the judgment of the NCAA an outrageous charade." The only thing it accomplished, he said, is "to demonstrate beyond doubt that the USOC is absolutely incapable of meaningful internal reorganization. It was little more than a joke on American world class athletes, the American congress and the American public."

Byers added that any medals the American athletes in Olympic and Pan American Games did win "occurred not because of, but in spite of, the activities of the USOC."

Byers then proposed four reforms he said would make the USOC a more responsible group. He called for a curbing of the 28 franchised members' powers in the USOC because each is "more interested in its own status than waht is best for American sports development or for American athletes."

Byers said an effective mechanism must be developed for challenging these franchised groups — which include such the National Archery Association, U.S. Ski Association, the track and field division of the AAU and other national organizations given international recognition in their sport — if necessary, to make them ore responsible.

"The commission must refuse to be inhibited by the carefully contrived USOC threat that if forces within the U.S., such as the federal government or the commission, but outside of the USOC change the structure of the USOC in the manner not acceptable to the USOC hierarchy, then the United States will be thrown out of the Olympic games.

"This was a package of nonsense. As a practical matter no one would be prohibited from competing. The international federations won't throw us out (of the Olympic games). I simply don't buy that. It's a phony hurdle in the way of settling the issue."

In connection with this reorganization, Byers suggested a new and smaller board of directors which currently has 52 members. He would like to have four athletes on the new 13-member board to represent their interests.

The second proposal he recommended was the naming of a strong USOC chief executive accountable for his actions.

The third proposal called for fedearl legislative guidelines to correct what Byers said was a failure of the USOC development program.

The final proposal was a method of regular accounting to the American people on a regular basis, which he suggested could be done by a congressional committee.

The commission will complete its hearings in January in Los Angeles by listening to officials in the AAU.

Griffin's Statistics Impressive

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — Ohio State's Archie Griffin, thought he has almost no chance for the national rushing honors, still has compiled some incredible statistics during his career with the Buckeyes.

Griffin became the first player ever to rush for more than 5,000 yards against all-major college opposition when he gained 127-yards against Illinois last Saturday. During a 40 game, regular-season career, Griffin has rushed for at least 100 yards in the last 30. No one is even close to that mark.

During that time, Griffin has averaged 6.2 yards a carry, according to figures released Tuesday by the NCAA Statistical service.

Griffin currently ranks fourth on the 1975 rushing list behind season-long leader Ricky Bell of Southern Cal, Herb Lusk of Long Beach and Mike Voight of North Carolina.

Bell has gained 1,549 yards in nine games and has a 250-yard lead over Lusk. Griffin has 1,187 yards.

Toledo's Gene Swick, the national leader in passing and total offense, still is chasing Jim Plunkett's all-time national career total-offense record of 7,887 yards. Swick needs 148 yards in his final game on Nov. 22 to surpass Plunkett.

Ohio State fullback Pete Johnson scored two more touchdowns last week and has 126 points in nine games, 36 more than Lusk, the same guy who's running No. 2 on the rushing tables.

Tackles By Feel, Not Sight

TULSAK, Okla. (AP)—John Herring plays tackle on his high school football team largely by feel. He tackles what he can feel, because he can't follow the ball.

John is going blind. In eight or 10 years he will be totally blind.

A junior at Tulsa's Memorial High School, John has retinitis pigmentosa, a disease which eats away at the retina of the eye.

"That's a heck of a name, isn't it?" asks John.

"There is no cure," Joann Herring, John's mother, said. "They are not even sure what causes it. All they know is that it is hereditary and one in 80 persons carries the genes."

Neither John's brother nor sister has the diseaase.

"He knows what is in store," says his mother. "Yet he is cheerful and bright. He is a fantastic kid."

John comes by his love for football from his uncle, Jerry Rhome, a former University of Tulsa great who is now an assistant coach there.

John doesn't have to ask for help.

"They don't mention my eyes," he said, "but they help me on the bus at night and they guide me around after the games," he said.

John cannot see at night or under dark conditions. He can see when he is on the fields of well-lighted stadiums, but not when he leaves.

"The hardest thing I have ever had to do was stand back after a game at night and not reach out my hand to him," his mother said. "I know he cannot see. But he has to grow up. He has to learn to ask for help if he is in trouble.

"Some boy has always come up to him to help, though. And it never has been the same boy. They don't make a big thing out of it. They don't lead him by the hand. They just guide him by touching his shoulder or his elbow.

"That really makes you feel good."

John plays second-string offensive tackle for Memorial, and even tries defensive tackle occasionally, although his physical limitations there are much greater.

"I don't know if I could be like John if life had cheated me," says his coach, Bill Risenhoover. "His outlook has been a lift to every person on our team. There is not one of our players who won't reach out to help him when he needs it.

"I'd never put anything past him, though. I never thought he would play, but he has."

And he will continue to play, Risenhoover said.

"If he continues to progress he'll be able to play even more next season. We have been thinking about moving him to center so he won't have to be downfield blocking so much."

John, 6-foot and 240 pounds, has had other problems.

He has had five operations on his ears to prevent loss of hearing because of an allergy, and he has a speech impediment.

John says his handicaps in the classroom are also a problem.

"I think I need books with bigger type," he says, "and I can't take notes off the blackboard. I have to get them from someone."

But he is doing all right.

"One semester last year John made three As , one B and one D," said his mother. "He almost made the honor roll, and this is a boy who can't see."

He signed for two classes he couldn't handle this semester, an automotive class and one in business machines. He has replaced one of them with cooking and is proud of the lemon cake he baked a few days ago.

But he wants more than that. He hopes to attend college so he can work other other handicapped persons.

No one in the Herring family has given up hope that doctors will find a way to halt the deterioriation, even though they say now nothing can be done.

Orange Bowl Eyes NU-OU

MIAMI (AP) — The Oklahoma Sooners will be invited to the 1976 Orange Bowl if they down Missouri next week and then go on to defeat Nebraska and tie for the Big Eight Conference title, an Orange Bowl Committee spokesman said Tuesday.

However, if conference leader Nebraska wins its last two games, including the Nov. 22 battle with Oklahoma, the Cornhuskers automatically go to the Orange Bowl, Dan McNamara said.

McNamara said that under the committee's four-year contract with the Big Eight, the committee is entitled to choose the conference's representative if a tie develops for the Big Eight title.

The contract provides that the title-winner automatically receives a berth in the bowl.

If Nebraska and Oklahoma play a tie game, the Cornhuskers will win the conference title on their record and automatically receive the berth, he said.

The committee also said it will issue an invitation for the other team Saturday, probably to the Big Ten Conference for its runnerup. Ohio State and Michigan meet Nov. 22 to decide the Big Ten title.

Selection committee chairman Nick Crane said the offer will be made "barring the upset of Alabama, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Michigan or Ohio State."

Bellevue Sports Center Approved

BELLEVUE, Neb. (AP) — An agreement to develop a $190,000 sports complex for joint use by the public and schools has been approved by the Bellevue City Council and Board of Education.

City Administrator Lloyd Castner said the project would begin next spring.

Included in the complex will be a soccer field, six tennis courts, a lighted baseball field and other facilities.

Briles Sent To Rangers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Kansas City Royals have traded veteran pitcher Nellie Briles to the Texas Rangers for infielder Dave Nelson, Pittsburgh sportscaster Sam Nover said Tuesday.

Nover said over WIIC-TV that the clubs are expected to announce the trade Wednesday. He said it wasn't immediately known if any other players were involved in the swap.

Briles, a 32-year-old right-hander, came up with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1971, moved to the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1971, and was traded to Kansas City after the 1973 season.

For the past two years or so we have been plagued with interference of our TV set by what we believe to be citizen's band or ham radio operators. It sometimes drowns out the audio and obscures the picture. Are there any laws to protect us from this? Who can help us?

—The Smith Family, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: You're one among many families who are getting static from these radio operators. According to a spokesman for the Federal Information Center in Omaha, operators whose radios have more power than the legal limits are causing growing problems of interference with commercial radio and television signals. The Federal Communications Commission attempts to investigate complaints such as yours, but the offending operators often are impossible to identify. You should send your complaint in writing to Federal Communications Commission, 1703 Federal Building, 601 E. 12th St., Kansas City, Mo. 64106.

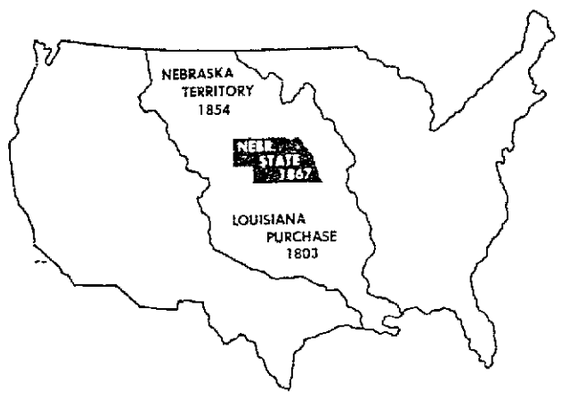

I was wondering when they are going to pave Van Dorn between Normal Blvd. and 70th. It should be called Washboard Ave.

—Mrs. Charles Brady, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The city has no plans to pave that section of road, and the reason for that decision explains all the other sections of unpaved road in Lincoln, too. It's the policy of most cities, including Lincoln, that street improvements such as graveling or paving are the financial responsibility of the persons who own the land bordered by the road. The City Council will consider creating a special graveling or paving district if at least one landowner in the area petitions it to do so. Other area landowners may support or oppose the district at a public hearing, according to Bob Snow, public assistance officer for the Public Works Dept. The required petition forms can be obtained from the Public Works office in the County-City Building. The city arranges for the work to be done, but the landowners pay for it. The city can do some maintenance work at its expense, and Snow said Van Dorn between Normal Blvd. and 70th St. was graded and flushed last week.

I heard on a radio program contest that Nebraska was purchased from Napoleon. Is this true? Who was Nebraska purchased from or where did it come from?

—Josephine, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: What you heard was correct. If Napoleon hadn't had money and foreign policy troubles in the early part of the last century, Nebraskans might be speaking French today. The United States bought what is roughly the western half of the Mississippi River basin, or the central United States today, from Napoleonic France in 1803. President Thomas Jefferson had James Monroe, later a president himself, negotiate the deal with Napoleon, who was eager to sell because of impending war with Great Britain and because France's treasury was depleted. The treaty paying France $27,267,622 for 828,000 square miles was signed May 2, 1803. It doubled the size of the United States for less than 3¢ an acre.

I shipped some lamps via Greyhound Bus Lines to Panhandle, Tex., in August. One box was completely destroyed. Can you help me collect the damages?

—Bill Baird, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Your packages didn't go all the way to Panhandle on Greyhound and that may account for the problem you're having collecting damages. Edwin Dorsey, head Greyhound agent for Lincoln, said your freight was transferred to Continental Trailways Bus Lines at Amarillo, Tex., because Greyhound doesn't serve Panhandle directly. To expedite the settling of your claim, write to Greyhound Bus Lines Baggage and Express Claims, J. B. Widner, 1158 Mission St., San Francisco, Calif. 94103.

In June, I purchased a Texas Instruments calculator. I soon found that two of the keys were mislabeled. I returned the calculator and the transformer necessary to charge the batteries to the company. They repaired and returned the calculator, but I never got the transformer back. I wrote them but no reply.

—Paul Breckenridge, Denton

ACTION LINE: Mrs. Dorcas Morris, a customer service representative in Texas Instruments' Dallas office, said a transformer would be sent to you immediately. She apologized for your inconvenience and said she would telephone you to confirm that the transformer is on its way.

I am asking your assistance in obtaining a refund from Lincoln Interiors, Inc. On April 4, I paid them $422.93 as a down payment on the remodeling of a bathroom. The work was to have started in three weeks. It still hasn't been done.

—Ronald K. Salak, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Peter Campnille, owner of Lincoln Interiors, Inc., 2633 No. 48th St., said the delay resulted from difficulty in obtaining some of the materials for the work and the illness of the carpenter to whom the work was subcontracted. He said he would prefer to complete the job as soon as possible, rather than refund your money, since some items already have been custom-made for your bathroom. Campnille promised to contact you this week and settle the complaint to your satisfaction. Please contact ACTION LINE again if there are further problems.

ACTION TIP: Many persons have heard by now of the medical tests that can be performed on a baby before it is born. One test, amniocentesis, involves the removal by a doctor of a small amount of amniotic fluid from the uterine cavity of the pregnant woman. Examination of cells from the fluid can reveal such diseases as mongolism and cerebral palsy before the child is born. Want to know more? Cigar Smoke May Be More Harmful

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband quit smoking. He quit smoking cigarettes, that is. Now he smokes cigars, and is quite proud of his accomplishment. The only thing wrong is that he (I'm sure of it) inhales the cigar smoke. Isn't this just as bad as inhaling cigarette smoke? I can't convince him of this. — Mrs. B. E.

I have never bought the idea that you can quit smokiking by finding some other tobacco product to smoke. Somehow this doesn't square with my logic.

There is a lot of evidence that smokers who switch to cigars do continue to inhale, some perhaps without even realizing it.

A recent report in the Journal of the American Medical Association confirms this suspicion. In fact, according to the report, inhaling cigar smoke may be more harmful than inhaling cigarette smoke.

Perhaps if you can't convince your husband, Dr. Allen L. Goldman can. He conducted a study in which subjects were tested for a blood factor called "carboxyhemoglobin." This, when present in certain levels in the body, is considered a risk to health. The substance was found to be four times higher among cigarette smokers than among non-smokers. In cigar smokers, it was found to be eight times higher.

Conclusion: if your husband wants to quit, he should quit altogether. Many cigar smokers do not inhale at first, but gradually fall back into their old cigarette smoking habits. The study also indicates, incidentally, that cigar smokers who were never habitual cigarette smokers do not inhale usually.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We have a three-year-old grandson (3 years, 3 months) who can't talk. He is our daughter's child. Her husband is very strict with the boy. Could this cause an emotional problem? It is an unhappy marriage.

The father threatens the boy to make him eat. He gets so upset he vomits. Otherwise, he is a very bright little fellow who seems to understand what you say to him. But he just grunts. — E.A.

You have reason for concern, no matter what the cause is of his silence. A child this age should be using words in meaningful phrases, however brief.

An emotional problem could well cause his failure to talk, but so could a hearing disorder. From your description of the father and the home environment, I have to suspect an emotional factor. You and I know that grandparents do tend at times to color accounts of such things as the status of home environments. However, I can only take your description at face value.

The father scolds the child and badgers him into eating at the table. He should be made to understand what he might be doing to the boy. The inability to talk (or unwillingness to) should be investigated. If it is not corrected, it could lead to serious problems ahead.

I suggest that the boy be seen by a speech therapist to evaluate matters.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read a lot about the importance of early detection of arthritis. How can one know the early signs? I have a sister who is 60 and who has developed rheumatoid arthritis. — Mrs. V.D.

About three fourths of arthritis victims have an onset lasting over months or years. It is difficult to detect through symptoms, because they may be minimal. They include fatigue, tingling sensations in fingers and toes, stiffness, weight loss. They may be present in various combinations and degrees.

Feet are often the first joints to present signs. The onset can, in some cases, be abrupt, with fever and hot, painful joints. The symptoms are usually symmetrical, that is occurring in the same joints on opposite limbs.

X-ray is of little use in diagnosing arthritis in early stages, but it can be helpful in diagnosis as the disease becomes a bit more established. Certain blood tests are helpful in confirming rheumatoid arthritis (not osteoarthritis). Examination of the fluid that typically accumulates in the swollen joints is another means.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a pain every time I sit on a hard seat on my tailbone. My doctor tells me to it on a pillow. I do, but I sit sideways to keep the pressure from it. What do you suggest? — P.S.

This probably what is called coccydynia. The pain originates in the tailbone (or coccyx).

You should sit on a pillow, but you should be sure that the chair itself has a firm bottom to encourage sitting upright. A semi-slouched position can worsen the problem.

Sitting in hot baths and massaging the muscles attaching to the tailbone are helpful measures. The massage is done through the rectum, and it should be done by your physician.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Many homemakers do not realize the dangers of home dry cleaning.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that many cleaners are made from flammable liquids. The word "inflammable" means that it burns or may combust. Inflammable cleaners are flammable, not nonflammable.

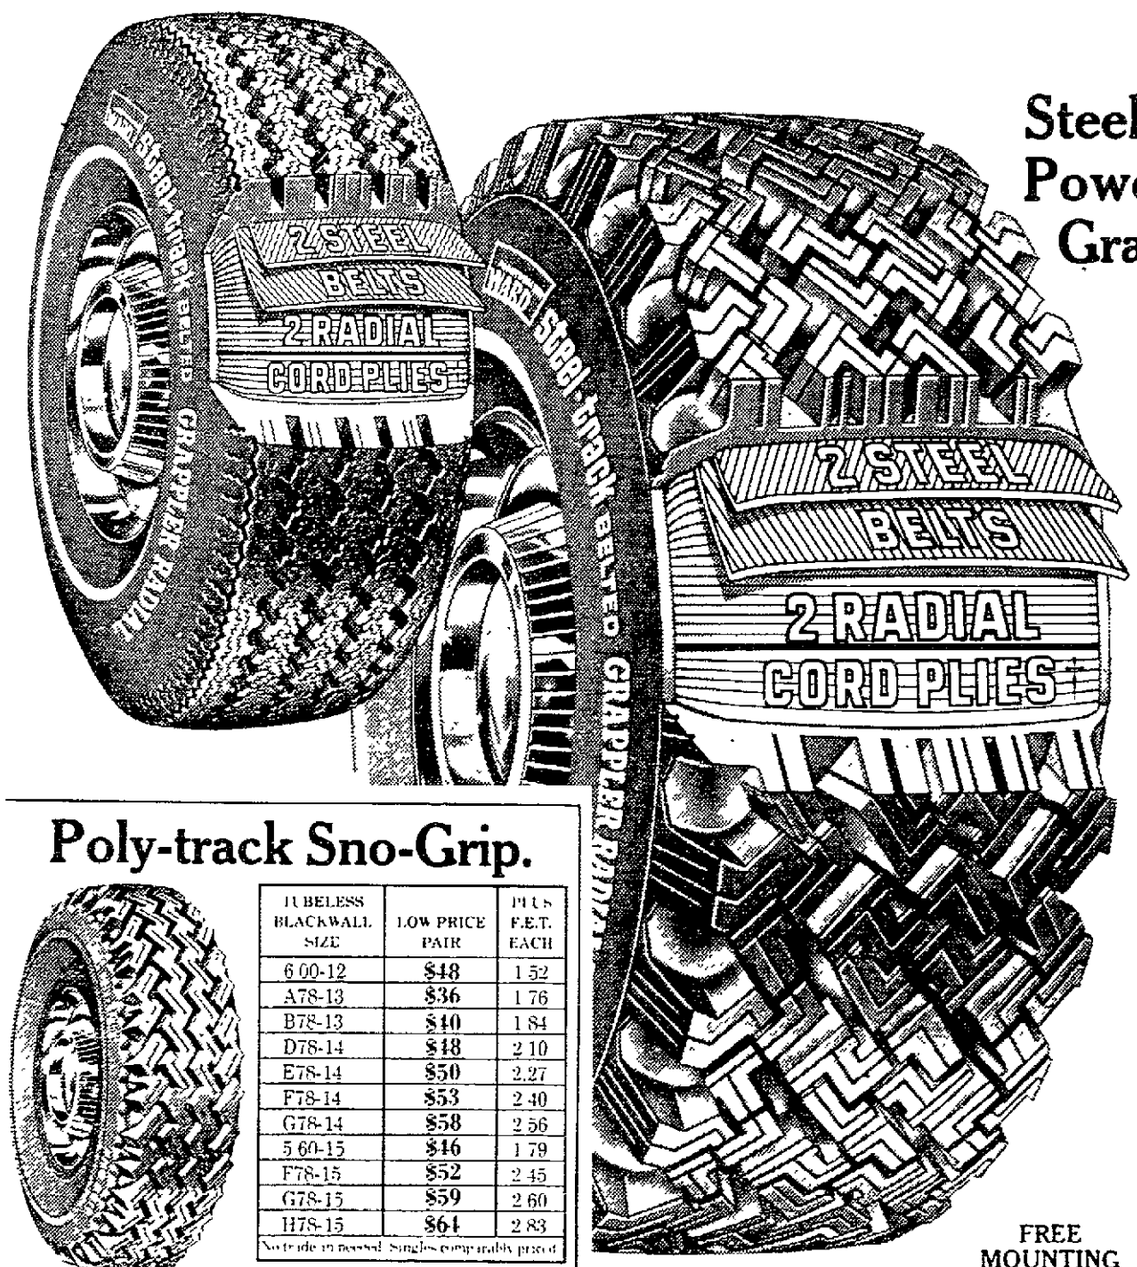

The fumes of cleaning liquids can travel throughout a house. Since the fumes are heavier than air, they will seek a lower level. Homes have been blown to bits, when these fumes have reached a pilot light in a basement, hot water heater or stove in a kitchen. The tiniest spark of static electricity caused by rubbing textile materials, together can set off the fumes.

The Nebraska Medical Association recommends if at all possible, not to do your own dry cleaning at home. If you must do it, use a nonflammable liquid. (A fluid may be marked 'nonexplosive' and still be flammable.)

South Carolina Mentor Likes 'Dunk'

Columbia, S.C. (UPI) — Veteran basketball coach Frank McGuire, who has 471 career victories on his record, said Tuesday the collegiate game needs to be spiced up.

McGuire, who has spent a quarter century coaching at South Carolina, North Carolina and St. John's, said in an interview in his comfortably furnished office that fans expect to be entertained after they pay the admission price.

"If we charge $5 a ticket, we've got to give the people something to look at," he said.

The dunk should be brought back, he said.

"It's a home run to me," McGuire said. "Even during a dull practice it picks up the players."

The stuff shot is allowed by the pros but was banned by the Natonal Collegiate Athletic Association several years ago. NCAA officials cited the possibility of injuries and the cost of replacing glassa backbroads as reasons for the move.

McGuire also proposed the addition of a 30-second shot clock as is used in the American Basketball Association. The National Basketball Association uses a 24-second closk.

"Thirty seconds is plenty of time to do what you want to do," he said.

McGuire, who had a 49-31 record during a one-year stint as coach of the NBA's Philadelphia Warriors in 1962, said the colleges have to keep up with the pros to keep interest in the game high.

While he plans to run a patterned offense this year, McGuire said he will not use a stall, a tactic he dislikes. A shot clock would prevent coaches from using a stall offense.

McGuire's Gamecocks will be in Lincoln Jan. 6 for a game with Nebraska.

The game also could be enlivened by adopting a rule used in Olympic basketball competition which allows a ball to be taken out of bounds after a basket without the official handling it.

The move would spark more fast breaks and force teams to get set defensively much more quickly, he said. "It gives you a flair that you need," he said.

The idea of the NCAA adding a three-point field goal similiar to that used in the ABA does not inerest him, he said.

'No Corner' On Quality Bowl Teams

HOUSTON (UPI) — The chairman of the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl selection committee Tuesday said the four major postseason bowls have not cornered the market on quality football teams.

"We feel we will be able to match two outstanding teams," said Weldon Humble, encouraged because his group can go after the Big 10 and Pac 8 runners-up for the first time this year.

If the majors—the Rose, Orange, Cotton and Sugar Bowls—are having trouble nailing down teams, the Astro-Bluebonnet is also stuck.

Bowl committees may extend invitations as early at this Saturday, but it does not look like the major conference titles will be decided until the next Saturday when games like Nebraska-Oklahoma, Michigan-Ohio State and California-Stanford are played.

Because the Southwest Conference champion may not be decided until Dec. 6 when Texas A&M travels to Arkansas, Razorback Coach Frank Broyles has suggested the SWC contenders, including Texas, should swing a deal with three bowls.

Managers' 'Gimmicks' Create East Excitement

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

A good student manager, according to Lincoln East football coach Lee Zentic, is almost as important as a good athlete.

"We've really got a unique group of student managers this year," Zentic says of seniors Scott Phillips, Tom Hicks and Steve Viessman.

"The players really look at them as part of the team," he says. "They're so efficient I can't believe it. It's just like having another coach on the team."

The three aren't exactly comedians, but they've kept Spartan players loose with diversion.

"Those three guys are always looking for a gimmick," Zentic says. "Everyone gets a kick out of them. They have that ability to create more excitement and I think that leads to more involvement."

The trio's latest gimmick is supplied by Hicks, whose parents graduated from Omaha Westside, East's Friday night opponent for the Class A state championship at UNO.

Hicks wore an old Westside letter jacket to school Monday. Obviously, it wasn't the most popular piece of clothing in East's hallways.

"These student managers have that knack for making you think about your opponent," notes Zentic, citing the week before the Spartans' final regular season game against Lincoln High.

"They put all those Lincoln High signs in the lockers with red tape," he points out. "They had 'em hidden all over the place — on the ice machine, the telephone, behind the film screen, even on the toilet seats."

Last week, before East's first round playoff game against Grand Island, the three student managers fixed up a GI Joe scarecrow with No. 1 on it.

"They dressed up as Grand Island players with gold tape, gold trim, everything, and went out and took calisthenics the same time we did," relates Zentic.

Full-time clowning wouldn't get Zentic's seal of approval, but he says the three managers have good timing in knowing when to "loosen things up a little."

A good student manager is invaluable, he says.

Zentic still remembers his first year of coaching at East when the Spartans were preparing for a road game to Council Bluffs (Ia.) Abraham Lincoln.

"We had a checklist for our student managers," he says. "We were sitting on the bus, waiting to leave and I asked our student manager if he had everything. He said: 'Yes sir, yes sir, Mr. Zentic.' "

Just before the bus started to pull out, the student manager said " 'Oh, I forgot the footballs,' " recalls Zentic. "We waited. He came back. I asked him if he was sure he had everything now. 'Yes sir, yes sir.' "

According to Zentic, the bus then finally rolled toward Council Bluffs. "A couple of miles outside Council Bluffs, I felt this tap on my shoulder," remembers Zentic.

"I didn't even have to look behind to see who it was," he says. "Our student manager had forgotten our whole medical chest. We had to borrow tape and everything else from Council Bluffs AL."

New York Crises Extend Beyond Financial Woes

NEW YORK (AP) — If President Ford won't bail out New York City, will he please do something about its professional sports teams?

Ford has turned a cold shoulder on the New York Defaults, also called the Beame Team, which has solicited—so far unsuccessfully—some major league help for its financially troubled franchise. But what about the other teams?

What about the last-place Knicks, Rangers and Jets, or the next-to-last place Giants? Who's going to bail them out?

Mike Burke, the president of Madison Square Garden, wants to help.

"In times of crisis and turmoil, we know how essential it is to have winning teams," Burke said Tuesday. "That's why we're doing everything we can to build championship teams at Madison Square Garden."

Only, like everything else the Big Apple seems to touch these days, Burke's moves have been turning into lemons.

After working for months trying to land a big man for his New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association, Burke signed All-Star forward Spencer Haywood. But Haywood, an enforcer at Seattle, has turned into a sheep in Knicks' clothing here.

In nine games with the Knicks, who are last in the NBA's Atlantic Division, Haywood has scored 144 points and hasn't looked like anybody's salvation.

Then Garden management waved its magic wand over its National Hockey League club, the Rangers, producing only clouds of black smoke.

First, goalie Gilles Villemure was dispatched to Chicago for defenseman Doug Jarrett. Villemure has won twice in two starts for the Black Hawks, while Jarrett, sick and injured for part of his tenure with the Rangers, hasn't turned around New York's goal-allowing generosity.

Then crowd-favorite Derek Sanderson was sent to St. Louis for a draft choice. Sanderson, who didn't score a goal for the Rangers this year, has four goals and three assists in six games with the Blues.

Next to leave New York's sinking ship was longtime Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin, who was picked up by the Detroit Red Wings for the $30,000 waiver price. In his first start as a Red Wing, Giacomin beat the Rangers 6-4 and was emotionally cheered while the Rangers, the home team, were hooted and jeered.

Then the Rangers announced a blockbuster deal, getting Boston's high-scoring center Phil Esposito and defenseman Carol Vadnais for defenseman Brad Park, center Jean Ratelle and rookie defenseman Joe Zanussi.

So far, Vadnais has refused to report to the Rangers. Esposito scored two goals in his first appearance but sprained an ankle in his next game and will be out of the lineup for a few days. Meanwhile, Park and Ratelle, healthy and visible, each scored a goal and assisted on two others over the weekend.

"It's a long season," said Burke, who recognizes that winning teams can help people forget losing endeavors elsewhere.

"A winning team can have a positive impact on this city," said Burke, pointing to the euphoria that gripped New York when the Mets won the World Series in 1969. "The importance of winning teams is especially underscored by the city's present state of turbulence.

"It could be a terrific uplift and a great morale booster for New York."

So could a successful football season, but that is highly unlikely now for the Jets, last in the American Conference East, and the Giants, one rung from the bottom in the National Conference East.

The Jets were humbled by Miami 27-7 Sunday while the Giants were losing 21-13 to Washington, a defeat which so rankled mild-mannered Coach Bill Arnsparger that he reportedly cursed his counterpart, George Allen.

At least the Giants may be leaving New York's muck for the Meadlowlands of New Jersey, where they are scheduled to open the 1976 season.

They'll still be called the New York Giants, unless a possible lawsuit by the city strips them of that title. But maybe just their departure from the city proper would be enough to turn them from losers to winners.

After all, the only winning teams carrying the New York tag—the Islanders in the NHL and the Nets in the American Basketball Association—operate in suburban Long Island, where default and defeat seem a million miles away.

Midland Offense Still Leads

Football "winds down" this week as Nebraska colleges complete their regular schedule. Three schools travel out-of-state to end the season. Midland travels to Texas Lutheran; Doane goes to Missouri Southern; and Kearney State plays at Emporia State.

Nebraska teams and individuals continue to be ranked in national NAIA statistics. Chadron's Duane Fritz is second in punting (42.3 yards per kick); Rod Schultz, Hastings quarterback is sixth in passing; and in team stats, Midland is 14th in total offense, Hastings fifth in passing offense, and Wayne 14th in total defense and 7th in rushing defense.

NWU Ends Spike Year

After a win over Creighton and two losses to Concordia in the state tournament, the Nebraska Wesleyan women's volleyball team closed their campaign with a 7-14 record.

It was the fourth time NWU was beaten by Concordia this season, and the first win in three matches against Creighton. In the latter set, the year's leading server, Kathy Wiegel, scored nine consecutive and 17 total points to give her a team-high 116 points on the season.

"Against Concordia in the loser's bracket, the match-up was mixed up, and it rattled our kids," says NWU Coach Chris McNulty. "It wasn't so much the fact that we lost the second time, but that we lost twice to the same team."

Kearney, which will graduate from the small to large college bracket next year, was the team champion going undefeated with a win over Concordia in the finals, and advances to a regional tournament in two weeks in Kearney.

Although NWU's 7-14 mark did not surpass the 9-9 record of last year, Coach McNulty was much more pleased with this season's improvement on the court. "The skill level of Wesleyan was about two or three times better than last year," concludes McNulty. "Next year we can work on adding the polish that a team like Kearney has."

There were no seniors on this year's team, while three were juniors, five were sophomores and four were freshmen. Named as most outstadning overall was freshman Leta Harrington, while another Freshman, Wiegel was tabbed the outstanding server. Junior Deb Meier was the most improved.

Meier, Linda Rolfsmeier, and Pat Neneman are now double letter-winners in volleyball.

Alliance Sports To Be Discussed

Alliance, Neb. (AP) — The Alliance Board of Education has called a special session for next Monday to discuss with school coaches of all sports player participation in all sports.

The discussion with coaches was prompted by a letter Monday signed by 24 parents protesting the repeated use of some players of the freshman football team, while other players were used little or not at all.

The letter said each boy gave his time and energy to practice and each should have the opportunity to play as coaches had promised during the recruiting.

Ficke To Play At Orange Bowl

Jerry Ficke, a senior at Southeast High School, has been invited to play in the 12th annual Orange Bowl International Junior Golf Tournament at the Biltmore Golf Club in Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 26-29.

Ficke finished third in the Nebraska Boys Junior last summer and qualified for the 1975 U.S. Golf Association's national junior meet.

Nebraska Scout Team Works Hard Despite 'Slim' Chances

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Not all of the Nebraska football players who practiced in Tuesday's chilly environment are really going to play Saturday against Iowa State.

The exceptions: the scout team members. Those are players who run the opposing team's offense and defense against the NU regulars in the afternoon practice sessions.

"We're unique in that most teams use freshmen on their scout teams," explained Nebraska head coach Tom Osborne. "Our freshmen are preparing for games on the freshman schedule, so we use redshirts (players sitting out a year of varsity competition).

"It's discouraging to a lot of freshmen not being able to play. A lot of schools where freshmen are on scout teams have a much higher turnover rate than we do," he said. "Eventually we may use more freshmen because of the scholarship rule."

Osborne praised this year's scout team, noting that most members only receive a limited number of game tickets and the chance to go a bowl game, should NU receive an invitation.

But even going to the bowl game is not a certainty.

"We usually take about 90 or so. Some years we've taken as many as 95 players to the bowl game. But if expenses are high we might only take 85," Osborne said.

"We've told them (scout team members) that we'll take the people we think really have the best chance to play if it's a hard choice for us," he continued. "But some of the cases are awfully hard decisions to make. It's almost like drawing straws."

The two areas that contribute the most to the scout squad are the offensive linemen and the defensive players, Osborne explained. He added that offensive backfield members usually exhibit progress faster.

"Most of our linemen except Bonness (center Rik) spent some time on the scout squad," he said. "I'm sure Weid (defensive tackle Jerry), Ray Phillips (defensive end); Wightman (linebacker Jim), Pillen (linebacker Clete) and Jones (cornerback Chuck) all were on the scout squad."

Osborne said senior wingback Tom Heiser was not a scout team member since he requested not to be redshirted since he wanted to finish his undergraduate work in four years. Heiser wants to attend medical school.

What's the benefit of skipping a year of varsity competition to work on the scout team?

"An added year of growth and maturity helps while they're waiting for someone a year ahead of them to graduate," Osborne noted. "The extra year older, faster and quicker is helpful. They also get a lot of internal practicing which is good."

Beard For Osborne?

Will Nebraska head football coach Tom Osborne grow a beard?

"It's sort of a secret arrangement," he said after Tuesday's practice. "I may if we can win our next two games (against Iowa State and Oklahoma).

"When it comes off, I won't say, but I may let it grow a while. I don't think I'm limited to any set number of days."

Players Return

Three of four regulars who missed Monday's workout returned to Tuesday's practice at Memorial Stadium, Osborne reported.

Fullback Tony Davis, who is suffering from a sore knee sustained in Saturday's 12-0 win over Kansas State at Manhattan, missed Tuesday's drill.

Defensive tackle Mike Fultz, offensive tackle Bob Lingenfelter and monster man Wonder Mondsa are returned to action.

NU Big Favorite

Nebraska has been installed a 23-point favorite to defeat Iowa State, according to odds posted Tuesday by Harrah's Reno-Tahoe Racebook.

Other Big Eight odds include Kansas by one over Colorado, Oklahoma 12 over Missouri and Oklahoma State 15 over Kansas State.

Pius X Offense Faces Continual 'Uphill' Battle

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Vince Aldrich uses what is affectionately known as "the hill" on the Pius X High School football practice field.

When his second team offense is in need of a little boost against the top defensive unit Aldrich sends the offense down the gradual slope of "the hill" of the north end of the practice field with amazing results.

"You'd be surprised how well those kids get off the ball when they're going downhill," Aldrich says. "They really fly."

Aldrich usually sends his first team offense "up the hill," to slow them down a bit.

And he's not just trying to slow down the breakaway speed backs like Tom Doggett and Steve Rohren.

Aldrich has speed and size on his offensive unit that's overlooked by most spectators — all in the interior line.

Line Deserves Credit

"They're a lot more responsible for our success than most people give them credit for," Aldrich says of the interior linemen. "Their size is about perfect for high school ball. All of them are abut six foot or taller and around 200 pounds."

Speedwise, the group stacks up to almost anybody, as all were clocked by Aldrich in either 4.9 or 5.0 for the 40 yard dash. All on an even grade, not down "the hill."

Aldrich's interior linemen rate a second glance from most opponents with center Gary Vacha and guards Jim Stefkovich and Lonnie Petrzilka all weighing 200-plus, and tackles Scott Krause and Ron Rosburg at 190.

Waverly will be the final foe to glance at the five together during the state championship Class B game at Seacrest Field Friday night at 7:30 p.m.

All five are seniors, and with the exception of Rosburg, all two-year starters.

"The two guards (Petrzilka and Stefkovich) are particularly very good at pulling and leading plays," Aldrich notes. "The line has opened up an awful lot of holes for those backs.

"Quickness and size rates very important with this line," Aldrich adds. "With their height, they can almost hide what's going on behind them."

Vacha, possibly the best of the group, rates an edge on strength.

"Gary has excellent physical strength and good quickness," Aldrich says. "We've had others say he's the best they've seen. He's been pretty effective against anybody he's come up against at noseguard.

"The Omaha Cathedral noseguard was mentioned in Big 8 magazine as one of the best around," Aldrich adds. "And Gary handled him real good in that game."

Vacha, who had worn jersey No. 53 all year, was forced to wear No. 70 in the first round playoff game with Hartington Cedar Catholic after his green jersey had been stolen.

With the Thunderbolts back in white jerseys as the home teams against Waverly, Vacha has optioned back to wearing No. 53 instead of superstitiously wearing the jersey worn when Pius won the first game.

"These kids don't think much about luck," Aldrich says.

After all, luck doesn't make you 9-0 or get you "up the hill" any faster.

ViQueens Future Secure

By RYLY JANE HAMBLETON

Karen Stoner believes in getting volleyball implanted in the minds of every Waverly girl as early as possible.

Stoner, who doubles as an elementary physical education teacher and the Waverly ViQueens volleyball coach, starts her grade school students on volleyball.

"We don't really press it. We just go over the basics," Stoner said. "By the time they get to sixth grade, I start giving them a little more skills."

But Stoner doesn't crack the whip and train the girls when they're too young.

"The real work doesn't start until they're freshmen. Then we start working on the bump and volley and get them started on timing," she said. "Timing is so important and the longer the girls are together, the better their timing."

Expanding Programs

As part of her double duties, Stoner is planning programs for both seventh and eighth graders and one for freshmen.

"You go for more strategy as they play together longer," Stoner explained. "Strategy and serving can never be practiced too much. I don't think we could ever practice serving enough."

But Waverly, despite the concern over practice by Stoner, has built something of a volleyball dynasty. The ViQueens had a 75-game winning streak (about four years) snapped this year by Centennial, but the Waverly team is one of two defending state champions returning to the state meet this weekend in Scottsbluff.

"The girls really were playing under a lot of pressure," Stoner said, referring to the loss to Centennial. "I didn't think they'd been playing up to their potential and the pressure got to them. We didn't have a very good game and really just gave it away.

"But we got our revenge when we played Centennial later this year. The girls were really ready for that one," she said.

Stoner emphasizes the team strength, and is reluctant to single out any one girl for honors. "If you don't have a team, you don't have anything. I mean, you can have a star spiker but maybe she can't set up, so alone she's not a star," she explained.

Stoner has five starting seniors and two sophomores (alternating setters). Lucy Axberg, Cindy Wulf, Erin Dodge, LuAnn Hestermann and Joan Bevans will be playing in their last high school state tournament. The two sophomores are Marcia Hestermann and Rhonda Seymour.

Coyle Holds PAT Mark

A check of the record books by Nebraska sports information director Don Bryant has produced another record for a member of the 1975 Cornhuskers.

Place-kicker Mike Coyle's streak of 36 consecutive point after touchdowns tops the previous mark of 27 in a row set in 1971 by Rich Sanger.

Coyle actually topped the record on his second boot against Colorado when he hit nine of nine. Then after making his first try at Missouri, he failed against the Tigers to end the streak.

Sanger compiled his record over a stretch of six games in 1971, then missed his first try against Alabama in the Orange Bowl. Before Sanger came along, the NU record was 25 in a row held by Paul Rogers in 1969.

Coyle started his streak in the Kansas State game last season with five in a row. He got two more against Oklahoma and another against Florida in the Sugar Bowl. So, he actually had 28 in a row this season before missing.

The senior from Omaha is the leading Husker scorer this season with 54 points. He has kicked eight of 13 field goal attempts. Coyle also is tied for the lead with Tim Gibbons of Missouri in Big Eight games only. Each has 35 points.

Davis Near The Top

Nebraska senior Tony Davis carried the ball 16 times for 74 yards against Kansas State to pass Bobby Reynolds as the No. 2 rusher in Husker history. Now, he's just 161 yards away from Jeff Kinney's record of 2,420 yards.

With three games to play, counting a bowl game, Davis needs to average just 54 each game. While records are made to be broken, everyone is pulling for Tony to make it.

Davis' figures as a pass receiver also are excellent. He has caught 12 for 152 yards this season to go along with his sophomore and junior totals of 39 for 332 yards.

He now has 645 yards in total offense this year, gaining an average of 5.2 yards everytime he touches the football.

For his career, his total offense figure now is 2,743 yards. He has scored 22 touchdowns. Adding a two-point conversion, his point total in three years stands at 134 — seventh best in Husker history.

Guess who is eighth in career scoring? None other than Mr. Coyle, with 117 points. He has made 72 of 78 PAT's and kicked 15 of 26 field goal attempts.

Catching Up On Sports

The Daily Oklahoman reports it has learned the Big Eight's first post-season basketball tournament in March 1977 will be played at the Myriad in Oklahoma City. It said announcement of the decision will be made at a meeting of conference coaches Sunday in Kansas City.

The tournament, which will decide the conference's representative in the NCAA tournament, originally was planned for Kemper Arena in Kansas City, but a near-conflict with the NAIA tourney at Kemper forced the change.

It also has been reported Big Eight baseball coaches has voted to hold their post-season tournament in Oklahoma City with approval scheduled for the conference meeting in December.

Ohio State has a freshman tight end, Jimmy Moore, who is 6-5 and 260. Woody Hayes says he has had it in the back of his mind of sometime making a fullback out of him. "He'd scare hell out of a lot of people," Hayes said. Moore tore ligaments in the Illinois game and has undergone knee surgery.

Nebraska will have its 81st sellout in a row Saturday at the Iowa State game in Memorial Stadium. The Huskers, though, will finish short of a season record for seven games since their six-game total of 457,237 is 77,156 shy of the mark set in 1974.

Nineteen Nebraska seniors will be at the stadium for their final appearance at the dad's day game. During their three-year careers their stadium record is 17-2-0. The 1975 club is the sixth consecutive Husker team to win nine or more games.

Wahoo Neumann Offense Worries Plainview

By TOM VINT
Star Sports Staff

"Hello, Missouri football coaches' office? May I speak to the defensive coordinator? You know, the one who stops wishbone offenses, just like in the Alabama game."

"Who is this please?"

"I'm the Plainview High School coach in Nebraska and I have this problem . . ."

Plainview coach Warren Washburn didn't actually make the call to Missouri. But it wasn't because the former Sandy Creek coach didn't think about it in preparation for Friday's Class C-1 state playoff game against No. 1 ranked Wahoo Neumann.

"I actually thought about calling Missouri's coach, who thought up how to stop Alabama. But I gave that up," Washburn said. "I probably couldn't have gotten through anyway. Besides, we don't have time to put in anything drastically new to try to stop Neumann's wishbone."

Plainview, No. 2 in the Sunday Journal and Star ratings, faces the problem of shutting off Neumann's steamrolling wishbone attack. The Cavaliers have averaged more than 300 yards rushing during the season and have five running backs averaging better than five yards per carry.

Wishbone Perfection

"I got to see them play last Friday against Gibbon," Washburn said of Neumann's 27-21 playoff win. "They run that wishbone offense about to perfection. They'll be awfully hard to stop. I don't think our regular defense (a 5-2 just like Nebraska's) will stop it."

The Cavaliers count on balance to throw other teams into defensive confusion. Quarterback Doug Lanik runs the show, calls the plays and has 419 yards rushing in 10 games. Halfbacks Pat Dailey and Todd Peterson have 803 yards and 730 yards, respectively, and average more than six yards per carry. Fullback Al Meduna has 616 yards and reserve John Cerv adds another 105.

Neumann coach John Lawler put the wishbone in last year when only three seniors returned to the squad. The success was not overwhelming, winning only two games.

"We had very little success with it the first year," Lawler said of the formation, which brought fame and fortune to Oklahoma, Texas and Alabama. "We didn't do a real good job with it but the difference this year has been improvement of our offensive line blocking and our quarterback adjustment."

Lawler said one of the keys to a formidable wishbone attack is having the people to run it. He feels Neumann does.

"There aren't too many teams in the state who have a better quarterback than we have," he said. Lanik runs the option ala Oklahoma's Steve Davis, and the youngster calls all the plays.

"I'd say he's one of the best in the state," halfback Dailey said of Lanik.

Potent Plainview

But while attention is drawn to Neumann's powerhouse wishbone, Lawler says Plainview is no offensive pushover.

"We have an awful lot of respect for them," said the fifth-year Cavalier coach. His main concern is going to be trying to shut off Plainview's ground game headed by Tim McCrady.

McCrady has rushed for 1,393 yards by himself this year. In last Friday's 30-0 crushing of Utica Centennial, the 5-10, 165-pounder rushed for 174 yards and scored two touchdowns.

"We'd use 14 people to stop him if they'd let us," Lawler said of his defensive scheme to stop McCrady. "I'm sure he's gonna get some yards. We just hope we can maintain field position on them."

Washburn also indicates Tim's twin brother, Kim, has averaged better than six yards per carry this year and quarterback Gordon Rasmussen has the ability to throw the ball when needed. Rasmussen hit 9 of 12 passes last week to help blow Centennial out of the game.

"If they're going to bring a lot of people up to stop the run, we'll be prepared to pass," Washburn said. "Passing may be the determining factor in this game when it's all done. I know they're going to try to stop McCrady and we're going to try to stop their wishbone.

"It'll be hard to say who'll come out on top of that battle. I guess it'll come down to the team that wants to win it the most will be the team that's going to take the game."

Grand Island Move To Help Attendance

THE PADDOCK

By Mark Gordon
Star Sports Writer

Wise Decision

Nebraska basketball coach Joe Cipriano perhaps has found the best solution towards increasing attendance at his annual red-white basketball game — moving the game to Grand Island.

For the past 10 years that I've been viewing the annual scrimmage, the attendance has seldom, if ever, reached four figures. That's not a very good average — especially when the students are usually either not attending classes or disinterested in the games.

The game will be played Nov. 24 at the Grand Island Senior High gymnasium. Although I'm more familiar with Grand Island since Fonner Park starts the Nebraska horse racing season each spring, the Third City is one of the most sports-minded cities in Nebraska.

Grand Island doesn't have a college. The closest collegiate athletics are either at Hastings College or Kearney State College.

This will be an ideal opportunity for central Nebraska fans who are unable to travel to Lincoln in the winter weather to receive a sneak preview of Cipriano's NU squad.

"I kind of like the idea of playing the intrasquad game in Grand Island, noted former Fairbury all-stater Bob Siegel. "It'll give us a chance to get away and play a game."

Siegel, who is starting his junior year at NU, is absolutely correct.

Undoubtedly, the players are tiring of daily practices in the NU Coliseum. They want to perform under game conditions — conditions where there are enthusiastic spectators.

The Huskers open the season two weeks from Friday night with a home contest against Illinois. The next night, Northwestern University, with former Kansas State head coach Tex Winter at the controls, invades Lincoln.

Nebraska students will be on Thanksgiving vacation during that period, leaving the general public with first chance at the prime seats for the encounters with the Big Ten teams.

Nebraska should be improved this season with senior sharpshooter Jerry Fort ready to seek his fourth straight Nebraska scoring title.

Whether the new recruits and the extra year of experience can put Nebraska into a challenging position against Big Eight favorites Kansas and Kansas State still remains a question.

It's an open secret that Fort's last year here as been the rallying point for what be the finest team Cipriano has in 13 years in Lincoln.

But Fort needs some offensive assistance — he can't do it alone, which has been the major deficiency the last few years.

If Cipriano can get a balanced attack with is aggressive defense — then a bona fide effort at the two Sunflower State schools is possible.

FINAL REMINDER — the last three days of the long Nebraska horse racing season are set for Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Atokad Park near South Sioux City. Ponies go the post at 1:30 p.m. each day.

Graceland To Mineral Bowl

EXELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — Graceland College of Lamoni, Iowa, and Missouri Western will play here the night of Saturday, Nov. 22, in the annual Mineral Water Bowl, it was announced Tuesday.

Missouri Western, winner last week over Missouri Southern, 45-33, is ranked fifth in Division II of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

Dye: Times Are Changing For Women On The Land

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

Rural women, in general, don't identify with the women's liberation movement, a Center for Rural Affairs volunteer said Tuesday.

"You can get so caught up in the physical labor on the farm sometimes that you just don't give a damn," Walthill farm wife Judy Dye told approximately 35 people at a Student Y-sponsored Women/Speak '75 session.

But for farm women such as Mrs. Dye, a rural Illinois native whose husband raises alfalfa, times are changing.

"I didn't mind opening the gate or moving the tractor. But then I found out that I got to scrape out the hog barn, and it just kept building from there," she said.

Which chores she did wasn't her decision.

"It was, 'when you get a chance, go clean out the hog barn,'" Mrs. Dye said, "and I knew that didn't have to be."

Part of the problem lies in the differing relationships farm wives and urban wives have with their husbands, she said.

"The (farm wife's) relationship is centered around the farm, her husband's work. Everything goes to the good of the farm . . . the land is the center of your life. In the city you may lead a life of your own.

"It gets to be a power play. Who's going to be the boss? It's taken us twelve years and we're still working on it."

Limited job and educational opportunities, child care problems and the remoteness of rural communities contribute to the rural woman's plight, she said.

At Walthill, a town of 800, the nearest college is 40 miles away. Teaching jobs are limited and neither of the town's two industries is hiring. Even if a woman did find a job, she might not find anyone to care for her children, she said.

"But it isn't all so grim," Mrs. Dye said. "I prefer rural life."

The remoteness brings a certain openness, she said.

"I don't have to worry about my children meeting the big, bad boogie man; if they do, they'll probably just bring him home for lunch."

Mrs. Dye said the Center for Rural Affaris gives "the potential to be what you want to be."

"I did the whole club bit — you know, the Women's Society. But clubs didn't do it. There was no format to talk about the things you needed to talk about."

As a coordinator of the center's adult education for public awareness program, Mrs. Dye organizes educational and informational meetings for rural people.

"There are issues that need to be questioned by farm women," she said. "They have the political power if they just get with it."

Douglas To High Court: Hearing Is Not A Trial

Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas told the U.S. Supreme Court Tuesday a preliminary hearing is in no sense a "trial" and that media coverage of such a hearing could be restricted.

Douglas' reply came in response to an appeal filed by various Nebraska news organizations seeking reversal of a lower court limitation on news coverage of the Erwin Charles Simants case in North Platte.

Douglas noted that the Nebraska Supreme Court has not yet had a chance to review the order and added that the media have not yet exhausted all legal remedies in the state system.

The so-called "gag order" was imposed by Lincoln County District Judge Hugh Stuart to prevent dissemination of details surrounding the slaying of six Sutherland residents Oct. 18 prior to the time a jury is chosen.

Such coverage would prejudice a jury and deny Simants a fair trial.

Douglas said the public and press could have been barred from the proceedings had the state used a grand jury instead of a preliminary hearing.

Douglas said the fact that the Nebraska high court scheduled oral arguments in 57 cases Nov. 3-10, made it self-evident why the state court had not ruled on the appeal.

The court has since said it will defer action until the U.S. Supreme Court acts.

12 Workers Killed

Beek, the Netherlands (UPI) — A dozen workers died and more than 100 were injured in a gas explosion in a state-owned chemical plant being reopened after a prolonged shutdown for renovations.

Funeral Slated Thursday For Minister Of Palmyra

Services will be held at 1 p.m. Thursday for the Rev. Raymond W. Sandsted of Palmyra who died Tuesday at age 70.

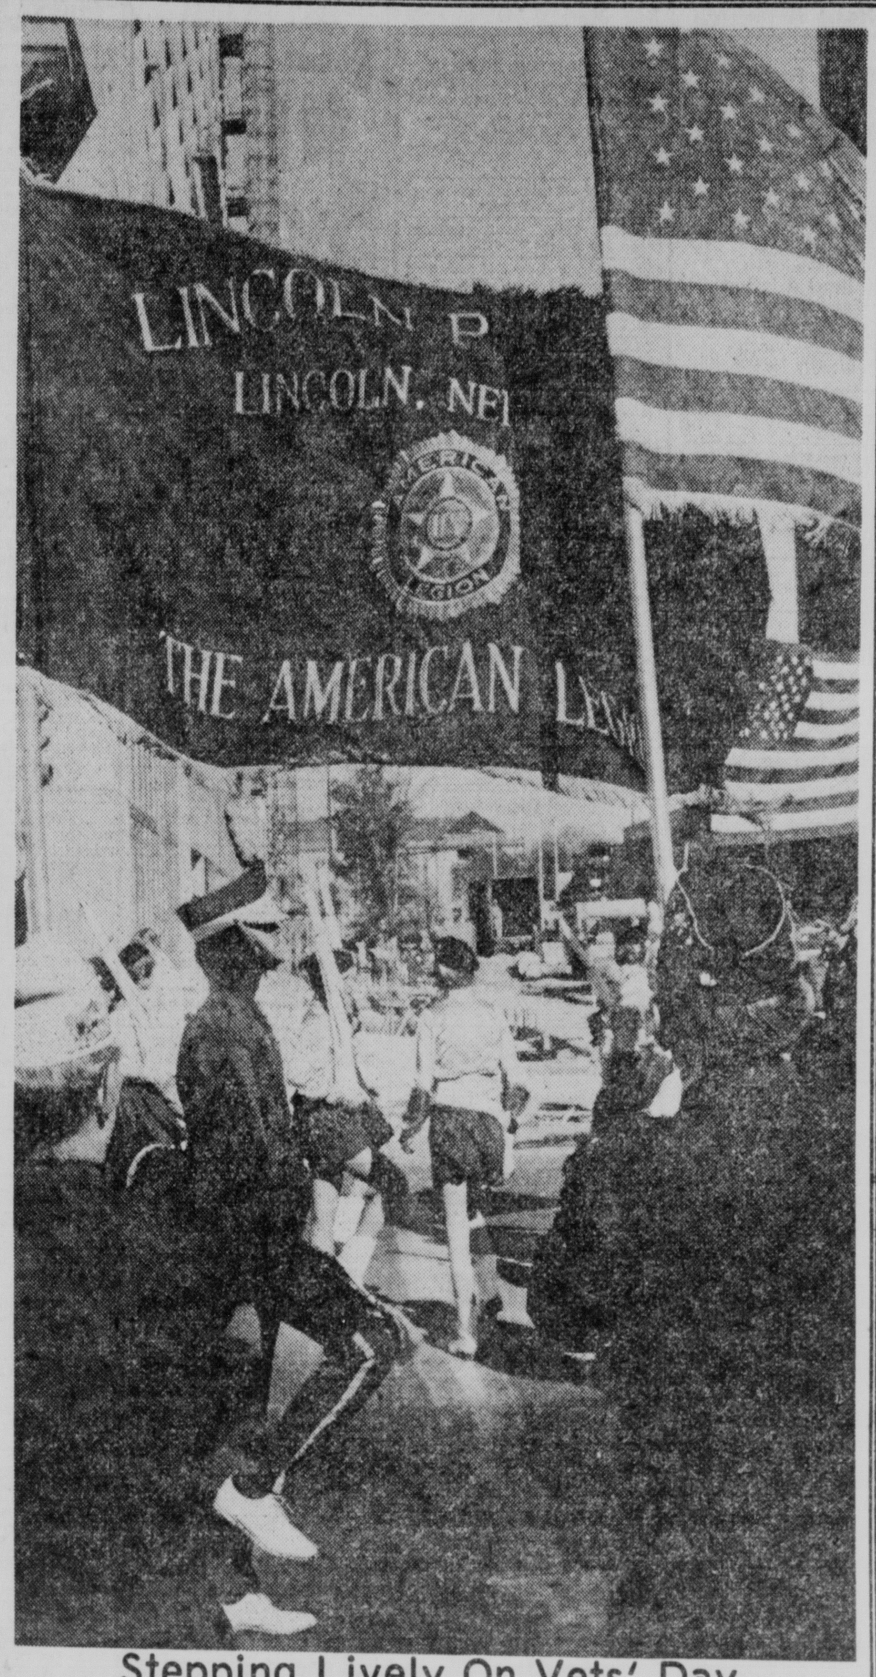

Mr. Sansted served as a minister for 47 years after graduating from Nebraska Wesleyan University and the Boston School of Theology.

Before becoming pastor at the Palmyra Methodist Church in 1972, he served with the following communities in Nebraska: Blue Springs, Ceresco, Fairmont-McCool Junction, Hebron-Belvidere, Humboldt-Pleasant View, Benedict-Max, Friend-Dorchester, Franklin-Bloomington, Madison-Fairview, and Palmyra-Cheney.

He was a member of the United Methodist Conference of Nebraska, the Masonic Lodge at Hebron, and Eastern Star at Palmyra.

Survivors include his wife, Mildred; son, William of Carmel, Ind.; daughter, Mrs. Hilton (Mary Jo) Stedman of Palmyra; brothers, Wesley of Holdrege and Dr. Roger F. of Lansing, N.Y.; sister, Mrs. Joseph (Helen) Henderson of Omaha; and five grandchildren.

Services will be held at Christ United Methodist Church at 46th & A Sts., with the Revs. Merle Zook, Lawrence Davis and Warren Spellman officiating. Burial will be at Lincoln Memorial Park.

Stepping Lively On Vets' Day

Flags snapping in a brisk November wind, dozens marched down O St. Tuesday in the Veterans' Day parade. As hundreds looked on, marchers commemorated the 57th anniversary of the signing of the World War I armistice. Veterans' organizations and military personnel participated in the observance.

Charge Against Omahan In Infant Death Dropped

Omaha (AP) — A manslaughter charge filed in August against an Omaha woman in connection with the death of her infant daughter has been dismissed, according to Deputy County Atty. James Jansen.

Jacqueline A. Jakes, 24, was charged after her 5-month-old daughter, Chastity, died Aug. 22 of dehydryation and malnutrition.

Jansen said Monday the state's evidence appeared insufficient to convict Miss Jakes and that a doctor's report lent some credence to the woman's statement to police that she was unaware what was happening to her daughter.

The doctor said that if Miss Jakes did not take prescribed medicine, she could be "out of touch with reality," Jansen said.

There was "no evidence of abuse" in connection with Chastity Jakes' death, Jansen said, and it is possible that the child was not even neglected.

He said there are cases on filed involving children who have died despite their parents' efforts to feed them. The mother told detectives she had been feeding the baby regularly and showed police baby food containers.

Police said the body was extremely emaciated and it appeared the infant had not been fed for some time.

Miss Jakes has two sons, ages 3 and 7, and Jansen said he understands she has tentatively agreed to give parental rights to her mother.

Two Charged In Blasts

Crofton (AP) — Charges were filed Tuesday in Knox County Court against two 17-year-old Crofton youths in connection with two Halloween night explosions.

Knox County Atty. Frank Roubicek said the youths were each charged with two counts of malicious destruction of property and two counts of felonious possession of explosives and released on a $1,000 bond.

A preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 19 in Knox County Court.

Roubicek said the charges were related to explosions on the lawn of Crofton High School Principal Tom Rother's house and in an outhouse at South Shore recreation area near Crofton.

There were no injuries in either incident.

Omahans Plead Guilty In Kidnaping Incident

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Two Omaha men, who have pleaded guilty to charges involving the June 29 kidnaping of two women here, probably will be sentenced Thursday, Asst. Pottawattamie County Atty. David Richter said.

One man, Leonard Coleman, 22, pleaded guilty Monday to the rape of one of the women and the armed robbery of the women's male companions.

In exchange for the plea, Richter said his office is dismissing kidnaping, auto theft and assault with intent to commit murder charges against Coleman.

The other man, Mackie Smothers, 19, pleaded guilty Friday to armed robbery, kidnaping without ransom and jail escape.

Richter said Coleman would receive a 25-year prison sentence for the armed robbery and 25 years for rape.

Smother's sentences could total a 31-year maximum, Richter said.

He said the pair would be taken to the Fort Madison penitentiary soon after sentencing, but federal authorities have indicated they will seek to take the pair to Kansas to answer charges there stemming from the June kidnaping.

Hawks Snap Celt String At Four

From News Wires

The Atlanta Hawks snapped a Boston Celtic string with a 100-91 National Basketball Association win over the Celtics Tuesday night.

The string the Hawks snapped was a four-game domination last year of the Celtics over the Hawks.

In other NBA games, Washington downed Buffalo 105-90; Milwaukee bumped Philadelphia 108-81; Phoenix overpowered New York 112-81 and Golden State defeated Cleveland 103-98. In a West Coast game, New Orelans was at Portland.

Guard Lou Hudson was high for Atlanta with 21 points. Jo Jo White led the Celtics with 24 points.

With the game tied 48-48 at halftime, Atlanta outscored the Celtics by six points in the third quarter, 28-22, and kept the lead for the rest of the game.

In Buffalo, Clem Haskins led a Washington third-quarter surge with eight of his 18 points for the Bullets. The Braves scored just eight points in the third period while the Bullets poured in 20.

Both Bob McAdoo of the Braves and Wes Unseld of the Bullets missed the game because of injuries.

Milwaukee's Bob Dandridge scored 28 points and the Bucks neutralized George McGinnis to post their fourth win of the year. The 76ers stumbled in the second quarter when they dropped to a 55-41 halftime deficit.

Doug Collins led the 76ers with 24 points while McGinnis was held to just 15 points and five rebounds.

The Phoenix Suns turned a 53-39 halftime lead over the Knicks into a rout. Paul Westphal had 21 points to top five Suns in double figures. John Shumate came off the bench to get 19, Alvan Adams had 16, Dick Van Arsdale 14 and Keith Erickson 12.

Spencer Haywood and Earl Monroe led the Knicks with 17 and 12 respectively. The Knicks never came closer than 14 points in the second half.

Guards Phil Smith and Charles Dudley each scored six points as the Golden State Warriors outscored the Cavaliers 20-9 in the final eight one-half minutes of play.

The Cavaliers had a 91-83 lead but by 4:34 left, the Warriors had taken the lead for good. The Warriors were paced by Rick Barry with 23 points, followed by Smith with 20.

Bobby Smith topped all scores for Cleveland with 27 points.

In the American Basketball Association, the Denver Spurs defeated the Indiana Pacers, 126-117 and the Kentucky Colonels downed the Virginia Squires.

Rookie David Thompson scored 26 points to lead the Spurs to victory. Dan Issel scored 24 and Bobby Jones added 20.

Billy Knight, the ABA's second leading scorer, had 28 points to lead Indiana.

Artis Gilmore and Lou Dampier scored 21 points and Bird Averitt had 20 to lead the Colonels. The Colonels took the lead from the Squires midway in the second period and never relinquished it.

Virginia was led by guards Johnny Neumann and Ticky Burden with 21 and 20 points respectively.

Spike Tourney Scheduled Soon

A round-robin volleyball tournament is scheduled for this Friday and Saturday.

The tournament, sponsored by KBHL-FM and the People's City Mission, will be non-stop for 24 hours from 6 p.m. Friday until 6 p.m. Saturday.

Registration forms may be picked up at the Nebraska Union from the Concerned Pro Life Students, from the radio station or the mission. All deadlines must be postmarked Nov. 12 and should include the $15 entry fee.

ISU's Rodgers May Face NU

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State, faced with the unenviable task of meeting nationally secend-rated Nebraska in a Big Eight Conference football game Saturday at Lincoln, ran through a one-hour, 45-minute workout Tuesday to develop its game plan.

Coach Earle Bruce said he hoped to regain the services of regular defensive end Otis Rodgers, who missed the Missouri game last week with a three-week old hyperextended elbow injury.

Middle guard Maynard Stensrud was also expected to be ready to start Saturday. He missed two games before playing part-time against Missouri with a broken hand, but came through in good shape, Bruce said.

Bruce called the Huskers "a fine football team," adding, "They have excellent quarterbacking from Vince Ferragamo and Terry Luck. Bobby Thomas is a super receiver. Tony Davis, Monte Anthony and John O'Leary are outstanding running backs.

"But then you also have to worry about the counter-plays by their wingbacks, Tom Heiser and Curtis Craig."

Husker Foe Spani Cited

Kansas City (AP) — Gary Spani just kinda slips up on you.

The Kansas State linebacker goes about his business quietly. The first thing you know he has made a lot of tackles en route to a consistent and outstanding performance.

That's the way it was last Saturday against Nebraska. He harrassed the Huskers all afternoon and was a big factor in the Wildcats being able to hold heavily favored Nebraska to a mere 12-0 victory.

Spani, only a sophomore, was so outstanding he was named Big Eight Conference defensive player of the week. He made 19 tackles, seven unassisted, and tossed Husker backs three times for losses totaling 16 yards.

Spani won the honor by a split vote over Colorado linebacker Gary Campbell.

"This game was probably Spani's best of the season," said K-State Coach Ellis Rainsberger. "He was super. He made tackles all over the place. They went right at Gary at times, and he shut 'em off."

Campbell was credited with 23 tackles, nine unassisted, in Colorado's 17-7 triumph over Oklahoma State. He made one tackle for a loss of seven yards and recovered a fumble.

"Gary Campbell played outstanding," said Colorado Coach Bill Mallory. "He made some super plays. He's aggressive . . . tough."

Nolan Cromwell and Laverne Smith, both of Kansas, were selected the week's top offensive players for their performances in the Jayhawk's 23-3 upset over Oklahoma.

Besides Spani and Campbell, defensive players nominated were Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma, Cletus Pillen and Jim Wightman of Nebraska, Jim Randolph of Iowa State, Phillip Dokes of Oklahoma State, Ken Downing of Missouri and Harry Murphy of Kansas.

ABA Sails Go Way Of Clipper Ships

NEW YORK (AP) — The San Diego Sails folded Tuesday, joining the Minnesota Muskies, Pittsburgh Pipers and Baltimore Hustlers in the lore of American Basketball Association trivia fans.

A terse one-paragraph statement issued by the league during a day-long meeting of owners here told of the team's demise.

"San Diego confirmed today they were ceasing business operations effective immediately," the statement said. "In accordance with league by-laws, this action automatically terminates the membership of the franchise in the league."

A dispersal draft of San Diego's players will be held Wednesday afternoon, although final details have yet to be worked out, a league spokesman said. Despite a 3-8 record this season, the Sails have several outstanding players, including Caldwell Jones, Kevin Joyce, Dwight Lamar, Dave Robisch and Mark Olberding.

Sails' owner Frank Goldberg left the meeting in a midtown New York hotel shortly after the league announcement was made and returned immediately to San Diego.

San Diego, the ABA's only expansion team in the league's nine years, drew only 7,126 fans in three home dates this season. That, plus being a poor drawing card on the road, were considered the reasons for the folding.

San Diego was the second ABA team to fold this year. The Baltimore Claws failed just four days before the regular season began. The Claws' players were distributed among the other clubs in a dispersal draft.

Coach Bill Musselman, who left the University of Minnesota to join the Sails before the season began, said the team's demise came as a shock to him.

"I had no idea," Musselman said. "I'm stunned. I can't believe the team was given a fair trial. I can't explain it."

The players were mute.

San Diego joined the ABA in 1972 as the Conquistadors with Wilt Chamberlain as player-coach. However, a lawsuit by the National Basketball Association's Los Angeles Lakers kept Chamberlain from playing, although he did coach the team one year.

When the original owner, Dr. Leonard Bloom, failed to meet league obligations, the ABA took over the club last February, then turned it over to Goldberg, a San Diego businessman, in June.

The ABA began in 1967 with 11 teams. However, only three—the Kentucky Colonels, Indiana Pacers and Denver Nuggets—have survived without moving. And the Nuggets originally were known as the Rockets.

The Pittsburgh Pipers moved to Minneapolis, then back to Pittsburgh where they changed their name to the Condors before folding. The Minnesota Muskies became the Miami Floridians, then just the Floridians before their demise.

And the New Orleans Buccaneers became the Memphis Pros, who changed their name to the Tams, then to the Sounds before becoming the Baltimore Hustlers, a name they kept for just a week or two. But the Baltimore Claws never played a regular-season game.

The other ABA pioneer teams included the Jersey Americans (now the New York Nets), the Dallas (then Texas) Chaparrals (now the San Antonio Spurs), the Houston Mavericks (who became the Carolina Cougars before becoming the Spirits of St. Louis), the Anaheim Amigos (later the Los Angeles Stars and now the Utah Stars), and the Oakland Oaks (who became the Washington Capitols before moving to Virginia and calling themselves the Squires).

Nebraska Defense Ninth

Texas A & M's unbeaten and third-ranked Aggies are gunning for a national collegiate defensive triple crown, the first in 18 years.

The Aggies lead the nation in total defense, rushing defense and scoring defense. The Aggies are allowing 173.7 total yards per game, 71.7 rushing yards and a skimpy 6.1 points per game.

Nebraska is ranked ninth in total defense, allowing an average 218.6 yards per game.

Omaha Clubs Eyeing Smoker

The Omaha boxing clubs and one club from Hastings will try again to top Lincoln fighters Wednesday night at 8 p.m. at Pershing Auditorium in a local amateur boxing smoker sponsored by the Lincoln Association of Master Barbers.

Local clubs include Easterday Recreation Center coached by Randy Nelson, Ray Menefee's club and Ron Stutzman's team.

The Easterday fighters captured three wins in the last smoker. Don Paez, a 165-pounder won by a technical knockout over Fran Burke of the Menefee club, while other Easterday winners included Neil Wilhelm at 140-pounds, and heavyweight Ben Berry winning over Stan Holen.

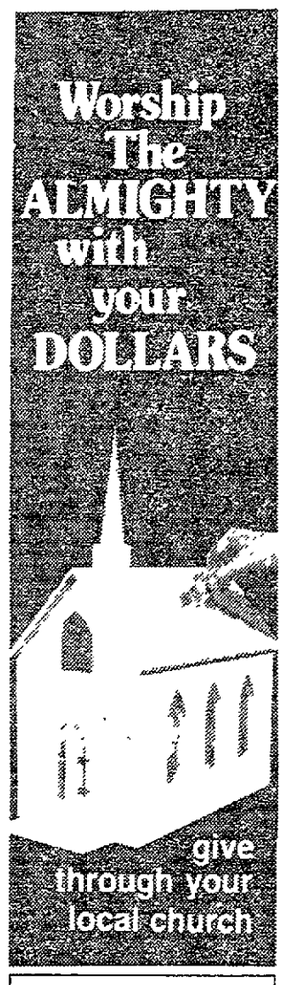

Hastings had three winners and Guide Rock had one while the Omaha clubs captured only one win in five bouts.

"We expect about the same number of boxers for this smoker as we had for the last one," said smoker coordinator Larry KcNeese. "So that means we'll have about 15 fights or so and should have just as many good matches as last time."

King, Cosell In Favor Of Rights For Athletes

New York (UPI) — Billie Jean King and Howard Cosell, testifying before the president's commission on Olympic sports, both called for the greater rights of athletes involved in international competition Tuesday but differed in their apprach as how best to insure these rights.

Ms. King, a former Wimbledon and U.S. Open tennis champion, supported the concept of an athlete's bill of rights and also called for the abolition of "amateurs."

Cosell opted for the idea of a federal commission to oversee all amateur sports above the U.S. Olympic Committee, the NCAA and the AAU.

"There's been a lot of talk about the athletes bill of rights," said Billie Jean. "They really need one. They don't have one now. They have to have the same educational opportunities as anybody else in society. No one may direct or order another person unless they're under contract or civil law."

Billie Jean also called for the abolition of amateurs, saying "amateurs are getting shafted. They should be playing for money just like everyone. You can't eat your trophies."

Ms. King also criticized the USOC and other amateur organizations for their excessive control over where and when an athlete may compete.

"The organization can tell an athlete, 'Do this or we'll suspend you.' That's not right," said Billie Jean.

Cosell, in repeating an argument made last year before the U.S. Senate, called for a permanent three-to-five member federal commission above the USOC, similar to a proposal introduced into the Senate by then Senator Marlow Cook (D.-Ky).

"We also need greater support from all three television networks and the sporting press in this country," said Cosell. "It'll take time. I also think it would be a very good thing for professional clubs to help out amateur sports. Just exactly how, though, I'm not qualified to comment on that."

Col. F. Don Miller, executive director of the USOC, also addressed the 22-member commission concerning the financing the USOC does towards raising some money for the U.S. Olympic teams.

"It's a big business," Miller said.

Earlier Tuesday, NCAA executive director Walter Byers called for the complete restructuring of the USOC and gave suggestions on how that might be acceptably accomplished.

"The NCAA resigned its membership in the USOC in 1972 because of our conviction that the then USOC apparatus was not properly serving the interests of the nation or its citizens and was not responsive to the needs of those it was primarily supposed to serve — the athletes and, also, because of the repeated refusal of the USOC to alter its discredited system," said Byers.

"Nothing has happened to lead the NCAA to reconsider its status as a non-member of the USOC."

Last December's internal reorganization of the USOC, said Byers, "is in the judgment of the NCAA an outrageous charade." The only thing it accomplished, he said, is "to demonstrate beyond doubt that the USOC is absolutely incapable of meaningful internal reorganization. It was little more than a joke on American world class athletes, the American congress and the American public."

Byers added that any medals the American athletes in Olympic and Pan American Games did win "occurred not because of, but in spite of, the activities of the USOC."

Byers then proposed four reforms he said would make the USOC a more responsible group. He called for a curbing of the 28 franchised members' powers in the USOC because each is "more interested in its own status than waht is best for American sports development or for American athletes."

Byers said an effective mechanism must be developed for challenging these franchised groups — which include such the National Archery Association, U.S. Ski Association, the track and field division of the AAU and other national organizations given international recognition in their sport — if necessary, to make them ore responsible.

"The commission must refuse to be inhibited by the carefully contrived USOC threat that if forces within the U.S., such as the federal government or the commission, but outside of the USOC change the structure of the USOC in the manner not acceptable to the USOC hierarchy, then the United States will be thrown out of the Olympic games.

"This was a package of nonsense. As a practical matter no one would be prohibited from competng. The international federations won't throw us out (of the Olympic games). I simply don't buy that. It's a phony hurdle in the way of settling the issue."

In connection with this reorganization, Byers suggested a new and smaller board of directors which currently has 52 members. He would like to have four athletes on the new 13-member board to represent their interests.

The second proposal he recommended was the naming of a strong USOC chief executive accountable for his actions.

The third proposal called for fedeari legislative guidelines to correct what Byers said was a failure of the USOC development program.

The final proposal was a method of regular accounting to the American people on a regular basis, which he suggested could be done by a congressional committee.

The commission will complete its hearings in January in Los Angeles by listening to officials in the AAU.

Griffin's Statistics Impressive

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — Ohio State's Archie Griffin, thought he has almost no chance for the national rushing honors, still has compiled some incredible statistics during his career with the Buckeyes.

Griffin became the first player ever to rush for more than 5,000 yards against all-major college opposition when he gained 127-yards against Illinois last Saturday. During a 40 game, regular-season career, Griffin has rushed for at least 100 yards in the last 30. No one is even close to that mark.

During that time, Griffin has averaged 6.2 yards a carry, according to figures released Tuesday by the NCAA Statistical service.

Griffin currently ranks fourth on the 1975 rushing list behind season-long leader Ricky Bell of Southern Cal, Herb Lusk of Long Beach and Mike Voight of North Carolina.

Bell has gained 1,549 yards in nine games and has a 250-yard lead over Lusk. Griffin has 1,187 yards.

Toledo's Gene Swick, the national leader in passing and total offense, still is chasing Jim Plunkett's all-time national career total-offense record of 7,887 yards. Swick needs 148 yards in his final game on Nov. 22 to surpass Plunkett.

Ohio State fullback Pete Johnson scored two more touchdowns last week and has 126 points in nine games, 36 more than Lusk, the same guy who's running No. 2 on the rushing tables.

Tackles By Feel, Not Sight

TULSAK, Okla. (AP)—John Herring plays tackle on his high school football team largely by feel. He tackles what he can feel, because he can't follow the ball.

John is going blind. In eight or 10 years he will be totally blind.

A junior at Tulsa's Memorial High School, John has retinitis pigmentosa, a disease which eats away at the retina of the eye.

"That's a heck of a name, isn't it?" asks John.

"There is no cure," Joann Herring, John's mother, said. "They are not even sure what causes it. All they know is that it is hereditary and one in 80 persons carries the genes."

Neither John's brother nor sister has the diseaase.

"He knows what is in store," says his mother. "Yet he is cheerful and bright. He is a fantastic kid."

John comes by his love for football from his uncle, Jerry Rhome, a former University of Tulsa great who is now an assistant coach there.

John doesn't have to ask for help.

"They don't mention my eyes," he said, "but they help me on the bus at night and they guide me around after the games," he said.

John Herring

John cannot see at night or under dark conditions. He can see when he is on the fields of well-lighted stadiums, but not when he leaves.

"The hardest thing I have ever had to do was stand back after a game at night and not reach out my hand to him," his mother said. "I know he cannot see. But he has to grow up. He has to learn to ask for help if he is in trouble.

"Some boy has always come up to him to help, though. And it never has been the same boy. They don't make a big thing out of it. They don't lead him by the hand. They just guide him by touching his shoulder or his elbow.

"That really makes you feel good."

John plays second-string offensive tackle for Memorial, and even tries defensive tackle occasionally, although his physical limitations there are much greater.

"I don't know if I could be like John if life had cheated me," says his coach, Bill Risenhoover. "His outlook has been a lift to every person on our team. There is not one of our players who won't reach out to help him when he needs it.

"I'd never put anything past him, though. I never thought he would play, but he has."

And he will continue to play, Risenhoover said.

"If he continues to progress he'll be able to play even more next season. We have been thinking about moving him to center so he won't have to be downfield blocking so much."

John, 6-foot and 240 pounds, has had other problems.

He has had five operations on his ears to prevent loss of hearing because of an allergy, and he has a speech impediment.

John says his handicaps in the classroom are also a problem.

"I think I need books with bigger type," he says, "and I can't take notes off the blackboard. I have to get them from someone."

But he is doing all right.

"One semester last year John made three As , one B and one D," said his mother. "He almost made the honor roll, and this is a boy who can't see."

He signed for two classes he couldn't handle this semester, an automotive class and one in business machines. He has replaced one of them with cooking and is proud of the lemon cake he baked a few days ago.

But he wants more than that. He hopes to attend college so he can work other other handicapped persons.

No one in the Herring family has given up hope that doctors will find a way to halt the deterioriation, even though they say now nothing can be done.

Orange Bowl Eyes NU-OU

MIAMI (AP) — The Oklahoma Sooners will be invited to the 1976 Orange Bowl if they down Missouri next week and then go on to defeat Nebraska and tie for the Big Eight Conference title, an Orange Bowl Committee spokesman said Tuesday.

However, if conference leader Nebraska wins its last two games, including the Nov. 22 battle with Oklahoma, the Cornhuskers automatically go to the Orange Bowl, Dan McNamara said.

McNamara said that under the committee's four-year contract with the Big Eight, the committee is entitled to choose the conference's representative if a tie develops for the Big Eight title.

The contract provides that the title-winner automatically receives a berth in the bowl.

If Nebraska and Oklahoma play a tie game, the Cornhuskers will win the conference title on their record and automatically receive the berth, he said.

The committee also said it will issue an invitation for the other team Saturday, probably to the Big Ten Conference for its runnerup. Ohio State and Michigan meet Nov. 22 to decide the Big Ten title.

Selection committee chairman Nick Crane said the offer will be made "barring the upset of Alabama, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Michigan or Ohio State."

Bellevue Sports Center Approved

BELLEVUE, Neb. (AP) — An agreement to develop a $190,000 sports complex for joint use by the public and schools has been approved by the Bellevue City Council and Board of Education.

City Administrator Lloyd Castner said the project would begin next spring.

Included in the complex will be a soccer field, six tennis courts, a lighted baseball field and other facilities.

Briles Sent To Rangers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Kansas City Royals have traded veteran pitcher Nellie Briles to the Texas Rangers for infielder Dave Nelson, Pittsburgh sportscaster Sam Nover said Tuesday.

Nover said over WIIC-TV that the clubs are expected to announce the trade Wednesday. He said it wasn't immediately known if any other players were involved in the swap.

Briles, a 32-year-old right-hander, came up with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1971, moved to the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1971, and was traded to Kansas City after the 1973 season.

South Carolina Mentor Likes 'Dunk'

Columbia, S.C. (UPI) — Veteran basketball coach Frank McGuire, who has 471 career victories on his record, said Tuesday the collegiate game needs to be spiced up.

McGuire, who has spent a quarter century coaching at South Carolina, North Carolina and St. John's, said in an interview in his comfortably furnished office that fans expect to be entertained after they pay the admission price.

"If we charge $5 a ticket, we've got to give the people something to look at," he said.

The dunk should be brought back, he said.

"It's a home run to me," McGuire said. "Even during a dull practice it picks up the players."

The stuff shot is allowed by the pros but was banned by the Natonal Collegiate Athletic Association several years ago. NCAA officials cited the possibility of injuries and the cost of replacing glassa backbroads as reasons for the move.

McGuire also proposed the addition of a 30-second shot clock as is used in the American Basketball Association. The National Basketball Association uses a 24-second closk.

"Thirty seconds is plenty of time to do what you want to do," he said.

McGuire, who had a 49-31 record during a one-year stint as coach of the NBA's Philadelphia Warriors in 1962, said the colleges have to keep up with the pros to keep interest in the game high.

While he plans to run a patterned offense this year, McGuire said he will not use a stall, a tactic he dislikes. A shot clock would prevent coaches from using a stall offense.

McGuire's Gamecocks will be in Lincoln Jan. 6 for a game with Nebraska.

The game also could be enlivened by adopting a rule used in Olympic basketball competition which allows a ball to be taken out of bounds after a basket without the official handling it.

The move would spark more fast breaks and force teams to get set defensively much more quickly, he said. "It gives you a flair that you need," he said.

The idea of the NCAA adding a three-point field goal similiar to that used in the ABA does not inerest him, he said.

'No Corner' On Quality Bowl Teams

HOUSTON (UPI) — The chairman of the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl selection committee Tuesday said the four major postseason bowls have not cornered the market on quality football teams.

"We feel we will be able to match two outstanding teams," said Weldon Humble, encouraged because his group can go after the Big 10 and Pac 8 runners-up for the first time this year.

If the majors—the Rose, Orange, Cotton and Sugar Bowls—are having trouble nailing down teams, the Astro-Bluebonnet is also stuck.

Bowl committees may extend invitations as early at this Saturday, but it does not look like the major conference titles will be decided until the next Saturday when games like Nebraska-Oklahoma, Michigan-Ohio State and California-Stanford are played.

Because the Southwest Conference champion may not be decided until Dec. 6 when Texas A&M travels to Arkansas, Razorback Coach Frank Broyles has suggested the SWC contenders, including Texas, should swing a deal with three bowls.

Managers' 'Gimmicks' Create East Excitement

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

A good student manager, according to Lincoln East football coach Lee Zentic, is almost as important as a good athlete.

"We've really got a unique group of student managers this year," Zentic says of seniors Scott Phillips, Tom Hicks and Steve Viessman.

"The players really look at them as part of the team," he says. "They're so efficient I can't believe it. It's just like having another coach on the team."

The three aren't exactly comedians, but they've kept Spartan players loose with diversion.

"Those three guys are always looking for a gimmick," Zentic says. "Everyone gets a kick out of them. They have that ability to create more excitement and I think that leads to more involvement."

The trio's latest gimmick is supplied by Hicks, whose parents graduated from Omaha Westside, East's Friday night opponent for the Class A state championship at UNO.

Hicks wore an old Westside letter jacket to school Monday. Obviously, it wasn't the most popular piece of clothing in East's hallways.

"These student managers have that knack for making you think about your opponent," notes Zentic, citing the week before the Spartans' final regular season game against Lincoln High.

"They put all those Lincoln High signs in the lockers with red tape," he points out. "They had 'em hidden all over the place — on the ice machine, the telephone, behind the film screen, even on the toilet seats."

Last week, before East's first round playoff game against Grand Island, the three student managers fixed up a GI Joe scarecrow with No. 1 on it.

"They dressed up as Grand Island players with gold tape, gold trim, everything, and went out and took calisthenics the same time we did," relates Zentic.

Full-time clowning wouldn't get Zentic's seal of approval, but he says the three managers have good timing in knowing when to "loosen things up a little."

A good student manager is invaluable, he says.

Zentic still remembers his first year of coaching at East when the Spartans were preparing for a road game to Council Bluffs (Ia.) Abraham Lincoln.

"We had a checklist for our student managers," he says. "We were sitting on the bus, waiting to leave and I asked our student manager if he had everything. He said: 'Yes sir, yes sir, Mr. Zentic.' "

Just before the bus started to pull out, the student manager said " 'Oh, I forgot the footballs,' " recalls Zentic. "We waited. He came back. I asked him if he was sure he had everything now. 'Yes sir, yes sir.' "

According to Zentic, the bus then finally rolled toward Council Bluffs. "A couple of miles outside Council Bluffs, I felt this tap on my shoulder," remembers Zentic.

"I didn't even have to look behind to see who it was," he says. "Our student manager had forgotten our whole medical chest. We had to borrow tape and everything else from Council Bluffs AL."

New York Crises Extend Beyond Financial Woes

NEW YORK (AP) — If President Ford won't bail out New York City, will he please do something about its professional sports teams?

Ford has turned a cold shoulder on the New York Defaults, also called the Beame Team, which has solicited—so far unsuccessfully—some major league help for its financially troubled franchise. But what about the other teams?

What about the last-place Knicks, Rangers and Jets, or the next-to-last place Giants? Who's going to bail them out?

Mike Burke, the president of Madison Square Garden, wants to help.

"In times of crisis and turmoil, we know how essential it is to have winning teams," Burke said Tuesday. "That's why we're doing everything we can to build championship teams at Madison Square Garden."

Only, like everything else the Big Apple seems to touch these days, Burke's moves have been turning into lemons.

After working for months trying to land a big man for his New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association, Burke signed All-Star forward Spencer Haywood. But Haywood, an enforcer at Seattle, has turned into a sheep in Knicks' clothing here.

In nine games with the Knicks, who are last in the NBA's Atlantic Division, Haywood has scored 144 points and hasn't looked like anybody's salvation.

Then Garden management waved its magic wand over its National Hockey League club, the Rangers, producing only clouds of black smoke.

First, goalie Gilles Villemure was dispatched to Chicago for defenseman Doug Jarrett. Villemure has won twice in two starts for the Black Hawks, while Jarrett, sick and injured for part of his tenure with the Rangers, hasn't turned around New York's goal-allowing generosity.

Then crowd-favorite Derek Sanderson was sent to St. Louis for a draft choice. Sanderson, who didn't score a goal for the Rangers this year, has four goals and three assists in six games with the Blues.

Next to leave New York's sinking ship was longtime Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin, who was picked up by the Detroit Red Wings for the $30,000 waiver price. In his first start as a Red Wing, Giacomin beat the Rangers 6-4 and was emotionally cheered while the Rangers, the home team, were hooted and jeered.

Then the Rangers announced a blockbuster deal, getting Boston's high-scoring center Phil Esposito and defenseman Carol Vadnais for defenseman Brad Park, center Jean Ratelle and rookie defenseman Joe Zanussi.

So far, Vadnais has refused to report to the Rangers. Esposito scored two goals in his first appearance but sprained an ankle in his next game and will be out of the lineup for a few days. Meanwhile, Park and Ratelle, healthy and visible, each scored a goal and assisted on two others over the weekend.

"It's a long season," said Burke, who recognizes that winning teams can help people forget losing endeavors elsewhere.

"A winning team can have a positive impact on this city," said Burke, pointing to the euphoria that gripped New York when the Mets won the World Series in 1969. "The importance of winning teams is especially underscored by the city's present state of turbulence.

"It could be a terrific uplift and a great morale booster for New York."

So could a successful football season, but that is highly unlikely now for the Jets, last in the American Conference East, and the Giants, one rung from the bottom in the National Conference East.

The Jets were humbled by Miami 27-7 Sunday while the Giants were losing 21-13 to Washington, a defeat which so rankled mild-mannered Coach Bill Arnsparger that he reportedly cursed his counterpart, George Allen.

At least the Giants may be leaving New York's muck for the Meadlowlands of New Jersey, where they are scheduled to open the 1976 season.

They'll still be called the New York Giants, unless a possible lawsuit by the city strips them of that title. But maybe just their departure from the city proper would be enough to turn them from losers to winners.

After all, the only winning teams carrying the New York tag—the Islanders in the NHL and the Nets in the American Basketball Association—operate in suburban Long Island, where default and defeat seem a million miles away.

Midland Offense Still Leads

Football "winds down" this week as Nebraska colleges complete their regular schedule. Three schools travel out-of-state to end the season. Midland travels to Texas Lutheran; Doane goes to Missouri Southern; and Kearney State plays at Emporia State.

Nebraska teams and individuals continue to be ranked in national NAIA statistics. Chadron's Duane Fritz is second in punting (42.3 yards per kick); Rod Schultz, Hastings quarterback is sixth in passing; and in team stats, Midland is 14th in total offense, Hastings fifth in passing offense, and Wayne 14th in total defense and 7th in rushing defense.

NWU Ends Spike Year

After a win over Creighton and two losses to Concordia in the state tournament, the Nebraska Wesleyan women's volleyball team closed their campaign with a 7-14 record.

It was the fourth time NWU was beaten by Concordia this season, and the first win in three matches against Creighton. In the latter set, the year's leading server, Kathy Wiegel, scored nine consecutive and 17 total points to give her a team-high 116 points on the season.

"Against Concordia in the loser's bracket, the match-up was mixed up, and it rattled our kids," says NWU Coach Chris McNulty. "It wasn't so much the fact that we lost the second time, but that we lost twice to the same team."

Kearney, which will graduate from the small to large college bracket next year, was the team champion going undefeated with a win over Concordia in the finals, and advances to a regional tournament in two weeks in Kearney.

Although NWU's 7-14 mark did not surpass the 9-9 record of last year, Coach McNulty was much more pleased with this season's improvement on the court. "The skill level of Wesleyan was about two or three times better than last year," concludes McNulty. "Next year we can work on adding the polish that a team like Kearney has."

There were no seniors on this year's team, while three were juniors, five were sophomores and four were freshmen. Named as most outstadning overall was freshman Leta Harrington, while another Freshman, Wiegel was tabbed the outstanding server. Junior Deb Meier was the most improved.

Meier, Linda Rolfsmeier, and Pat Neneman are now double letter-winners in volleyball.

Alliance Sports To Be Discussed

Alliance, Neb. (AP) — The Alliance Board of Education has called a special session for next Monday to discuss with school coaches of all sports player participation in all sports.

The discussion with coaches was prompted by a letter Monday signed by 24 parents protesting the repeated use of some players of the freshman football team, while other players were used little or not at all.

The letter said each boy gave his time and energy to practice and each should have the opportunity to play as coaches had promised during the recruiting.

Ficke To Play At Orange Bowl

Jerry Ficke, a senior at Southeast High School, has been invited to play in the 12th annual Orange Bowl International Junior Golf Tournament at the Biltmore Golf Club in Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 26-29.

Ficke finished third in the Nebraska Boys Junior last summer and qualified for the 1975 U.S. Golf Association's national junior meet.

Dye: Times Are Changing For Women On The Land

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

Rural women, in general, don't identify with the women's liberation movement, a Center for Rural Affairs volunteer said Tuesday.

"You can get so caught up in the physical labor on the farm sometimes that you just don't give a damn," Walthill farm wife Judy Dye told approximately 35 people at a Student Y-sponsored Women/Speak '75 session.

But for farm women such as Mrs. Dye, a rural Illinois native whose husband raises alfalfa, times are changing.

"I didn't mind opening the gate or moving the tractor. But then I found out that I got to scrape out the hog barn, and it just kept building from there," she said.

Which chores she did wasn't her decision.

"It was, 'when you get a chance, go clean out the hog barn,'" Mrs. Dye said, "and I knew that didn't have to be."

Part of the problem lies in the differing relationships farm wives and urban wives have with their husbands, she said.

"The (farm wife's) relationship is centered around the farm, her husband's work. Everything goes to the good of the farm . . . the land is the center of your life. In the city you may lead a life of your own.

"It gets to be a power play. Who's going to be the boss? It's taken us twelve years and we're still working on it."

Limited job and educational opportunities, child care problems and the remoteness of rural communities contribute to the rural woman's plight, she said.

At Walthill, a town of 800, the nearest college is 40 miles away. Teaching jobs are limited and neither of the town's two industries is hiring. Even if a woman did find a job, she might not find anyone to care for her children, she said.

"But it isn't all so grim," Mrs. Dye said. "I prefer rural life."

The remoteness brings a certain openness, she said.

"I don't have to worry about my children meeting the big, bad boogie man; if they do, they'll probably just bring him home for lunch."

Mrs. Dye said the Center for Rural Affaris gives "the potential to be what you want to be."

"I did the whole club bit — you know, the Women's Society. But clubs didn't do it. There was no format to talk about the things you needed to talk about."

As a coordinator of the center's adult education for public awareness program, Mrs. Dye organizes educational and informational meetings for rural people.

"There are issues that need to be questioned by farm women," she said. "They have the political power if they just get with it."

Douglas To High Court: Hearing Is Not A Trial

Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas told the U.S. Supreme Court Tuesday a preliminary hearing is in no sense a "trial" and that media coverage of such a hearing could be restricted.

Douglas' reply came in response to an appeal filed by various Nebraska news organizations seeking reversal of a lower court limitation on news coverage of the Erwin Charles Simants case in North Platte.

Douglas noted that the Nebraska Supreme Court has not yet had a chance to review the order and added that the media have not yet exhausted all legal remedies in the state system.

The so-called "gag order" was imposed by Lincoln County District Judge Hugh Stuart to prevent dissemination of details surrounding the slaying of six Sutherland residents Oct. 18 prior to the time a jury is chosen.

Such coverage would prejudice a jury and deny Simants a fair trial.

Douglas said the public and press could have been barred from the proceedings had the state used a grand jury instead of a preliminary hearing.

Douglas said the fact that the Nebraska high court scheduled oral arguments in 57 cases Nov. 3-10, made it self-evident why the state court had not ruled on the appeal.

The court has since said it will defer action until the U.S. Supreme Court acts.

12 Workers Killed

Beek, the Netherlands (UPI) — A dozen workers died and more than 100 were injured in a gas explosion in a state-owned chemical plant being reopened after a prolonged shutdown for renovations.

Funeral Slated Thursday For Minister Of Palmyra

Services will be held at 1 p.m. Thursday for the Rev. Raymond W. Sandsted of Palmyra who died Tuesday at age 70.

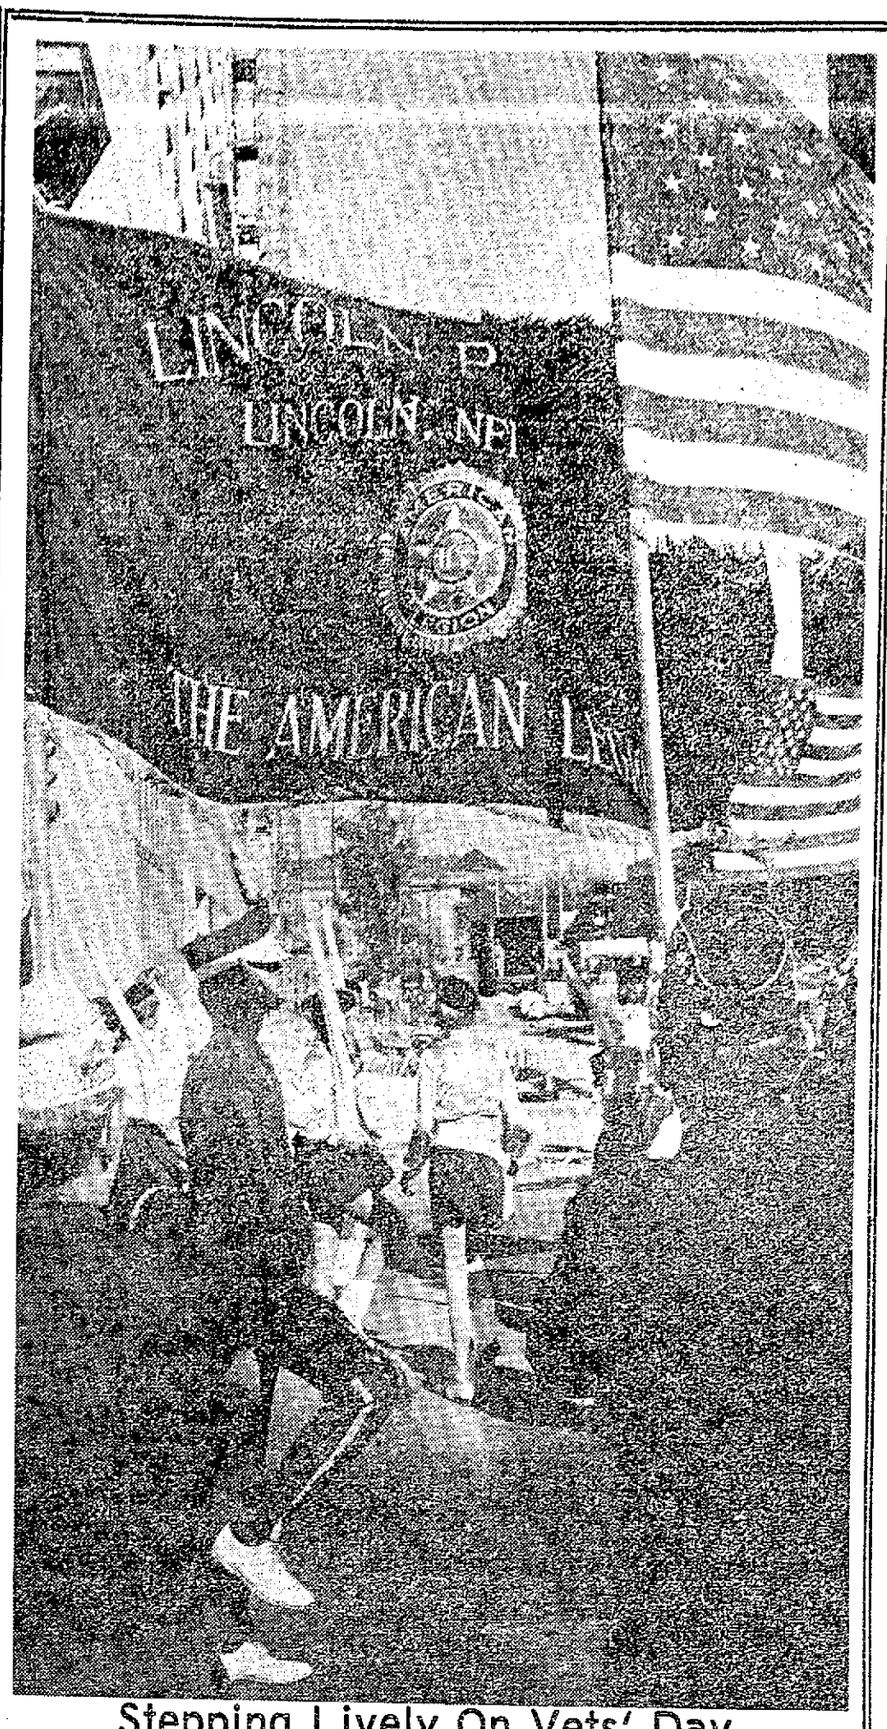

Mr. Sansted served as a minister for 47 years after graduating from Nebraska Wesleyan University and the Boston School of Theology.

Before becoming pastor at the Palmyra Methodist Church in 1972, he served with the following communities in Nebraska: Blue Springs, Ceresco, Fairmont-McCool Junction, Hebron-Belvidere, Humboldt-Pleasant View, Benedict-Max, Friend-Dorchester, Franklin-Bloomington, Madison-Fairview, and Palmyra-Cheney.

He was a member of the United Methodist Conference of Nebraska, the Masonic Lodge at Hebron, and Eastern Star at Palmyra.

Survivors include his wife, Mildred; son, William of Carmel, Ind.; daughter, Mrs. Hilton (Mary Jo) Stedman of Palmyra; brothers, Wesley of Holdrege and Dr. Roger F. of Lansing, N.Y.; sister, Mrs. Joseph (Helen) Henderson of Omaha; and five grandchildren.

Services will be held at Christ United Methodist Church at 46th & A Sts., with the Revs. Merle Zook, Lawrence Davis and Warren Spellman officiating. Burial will be at Lincoln Memorial Park.

Stepping Lively On Vets' Day

Flags snapping in a brisk November wind, dozens marched down O St. Tuesday in the Veterans' Day parade. As hundreds looked on, marchers commemorated the 57th anniversary of the signing of the World War I armistice. Veterans' organizations and military personnel participated in the observance.

Charge Against Omahan In Infant Death Dropped

Omaha (AP) — A manslaughter charge filed in August against an Omaha woman in connection with the death of her infant daughter has been dismissed, according to Deputy County Atty. James Jansen.

Jacqueline A. Jakes, 24, was charged after her 5-month-old daughter, Chastity, died Aug. 22 of dehydryation and malnutrition.

Jansen said Monday the state's evidence appeared insufficient to convict Miss Jakes and that a doctor's report lent some credence to the woman's statement to police that she was unaware what was happening to her daughter.

The doctor said that if Miss Jakes did not take prescribed medicine, she could be "out of touch with reality," Jansen said.

There was "no evidence of abuse" in connection with Chastity Jakes' death, Jansen said, and it is possible that the child was not even neglected.

He said there are cases on filed involving children who have died despite their parents' efforts to feed them. The mother told detectives she had been feeding the baby regularly and showed police baby food containers.

Police said the body was extremely emaciated and it appeared the infant had not been fed for some time.

Miss Jakes has two sons, ages 3 and 7, and Jansen said he understands she has tentatively agreed to give parental rights to her mother.

Two Charged In Blasts

Crofton (AP) — Charges were filed Tuesday in Knox County Court against two 17-year-old Crofton youths in connection with two Halloween night explosions.

Knox County Atty. Frank Roubicek said the youths were each charged with two counts of malicious destruction of property and two counts of felonious possession of explosives and released on a $1,000 bond.

A preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 19 in Knox County Court.

Roubicek said the charges were related to explosions on the lawn of Crofton High School Principal Tom Rother's house and in an outhouse at South Shore recreation area near Crofton.

There were no injuries in either incident.

Omahans Plead Guilty In Kidnaping Incident

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Two Omaha men, who have pleaded guilty to charges involving the June 29 kidnaping of two women here, probably will be sentenced Thursday, Asst. Pottawattamie County Atty. David Richter said.

One man, Leonard Coleman, 22, pleaded guilty Monday to the rape of one of the women and the armed robbery of the women's male companions.

In exchange for the plea, Richter said his office is dismissing kidnaping, auto theft and assault with intent to commit murder charges against Coleman.

The other man, Mackie Smothers, 19, pleaded guilty Friday to armed robbery, kidnaping without ransom and jail escape.

Richter said Coleman would receive a 25-year prison sentence for the armed robbery and 25 years for rape.

Smother's sentences could total a 31-year maximum, Richter said.

He said the pair would be taken to the Fort Madison penitentiary soon after sentencing, but federal authorities have indicated they will seek to take the pair to Kansas to answer charges there stemming from the June kidnaping.

If gas pains persist, try Volkswagen.

A VW goes a long way in relieving gas problems-by getting terrific gas mileage.
It also relieves those little headaches — by needing pints of oil instead of quarts. And not needing antifreeze because of its air-cooled engine.
Plus it gets rid of nervous upsets due to owning a new car. With Volkswagen's Owner's Security Blanket, you're provided with the best care any car can have . . . in sickness and in health.
The fact is that Volkswagen can cure lots of problems that most cars can't.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Wednesday

Giorgio Paccardi, professor of physical chemistry at the University of Florence in Italy, has employed chemical tests to demonstrate that planetary positions coincide with changes in the water content of human cells.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New knowledge gained, especially in conjunction with club, group, institute. What was obscured will be clarified. Leo, Aquarius could figure prominently. Keep promise to one who is temporarily confined to home or hospital.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friend "with a dream" wants you to lend material support. Be interested, sympathetic, without becoming inextricably involved. Aquarian plays significant role. Trust your intuition. Inner voice is telling you what to do and telling it like it is.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be flexible in connection with goals needs, relationship with professional superior. Legal affairs are not settled. Element of deception — or wishful thinking — could exist. Accept social invitation. Change of pace works in your behalf — know it and act on it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Dig for factual information. Don't feel you are stuck with one course. You can change once an intelligent, creative alternative surfaces. Do some tearing down for the ultimate purpose of rebuilding on a more solid base.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Strive for reports which are in-depth as contrasted to superficial. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently. Involvement is indicated — including complications and added responsibility. Nothing is apt to be halfway. Know it and get information based on sound investigative procedures.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do some reflecting on your own ambition, potential. Words from outsiders — at this time — are not as important as your own feelings. Accent on co-operation, partnership and marriage. What was taken for granted could begin to "slide."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What appears to be a minor complaint really does require attention. Indulge yourself! Clear away doubts, fears, mysteries. You have right to move and think without being threatened. Stand pat until satisfied with answers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Organize priorities. Obtain valid hint from Libra message. Older persons, generally helpful, could also be slightly resentful. Be aware of this and choose your own time and place. Capricorn, Cancer might be in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Aid comes from unusual source. You get rid of burden. You sense that your creative capabilities are more appreciated — and will be utilized. You have chance now to obtain better distribution — and display. Work with Aries, Libra types.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What was a puzzle falls into place. Applies to situations, persons. Emotional involvement is here — there is dilemma, response and also a solution. You express, give and receive affection. Self-esteem will be on upswing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Collections, payments, consolidation of assets — these are featured. Another Aquarian is willing to share knowledge. You learn how to profit from right moves as well as mistakes. Hunch pays dividends. One who teaches takes special liking to you — and you could profit as a result.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Highlight confidence, initiative and flexibility. Gemini, Sagittarius could be in picture. One who seems obstinate may be in position to pull strings — for you. Know it and don't be too quick in passing judgment. A fresh start is indicated.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are completing an important phase of activity — August was a most significant month. In December, you socialize, travel and publish. In 1976, you make new starts in new directions. You love to laugh, read and travel — and to eat. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
